'FIGHT TO THE FINISH'

Jordan Capital in Flames

Times News Services

AMMAN — Exploding mortar shells and rockets and the crackle of heavy machine-gun fire woke the city at dawn today as King Hussein sent in his tanks and troops in a huge blitz against Palestinian Arab guerrillas in the Jordanian capital which left the city in flames.

The fighting spilled over into Lebanon and Palestinians seized the Jordanian embassy in Beirut.

Heavy fighting was reported in the northern Jordanian cities of Zerga, Salt, Irbid and Ramtha — guerrilla bases hit repeatedly in the past by Israeli air strikes. Each side said it was in control, but a note of anxiety crept into Damascus radio broadcasts directing the guerrilla efforts.

The guerrillas were apparently in control of key areas of Amman at the start of the fighting but broadcasts from both sides said the army troops were driving into the Jordanian capital. The guerrillas appealed for help from thousands of Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

SURRENDER CALL

Field Marshall Habis Majali, military leader of the new Jordanian government proclaimed Wednesday by King Hussein, called in an Amman radio broadcast for the guerrillas to surrender.

"We are marching on the principal quarters of Amman to establish control," the marshall said. "All armed men must surrender to army troops, who are their brothers, in order to avoid bloodshed and spare your lives."

The guerrilla radio in the Iraq capital, Baghdad, said army tanks were "trying to break into Amman's city centre."

REPULSED

The broadcast said the guerrillas had beaten back the armored advance, destroying three tanks and disabling two others with bazooka fire.

Later a guerrilla broadcast heard in Israel said the Jordanian army had advanced on two guerrilla strongholds in Amman's outskirts — Jebel Amman and Jebel El-Hussein. It appealed to guerrilla fighters to stand fast and fight and called on "progressive Arab states" to help.

"All Amman is on fire," the broadcast said. Earlier dispatches reported smoke rising over the capital.

Following the guerrilla broadcast, the Jordanian government radio said regular forces had "restored order" in three areas on the eastern side of the city — one of them near Hussein's palace.

FEAR INTERVENTION

The radio also broadcast a special announcement saying the fighting in Jordan was "an internal matter" and no foreign power had a right to intervene.

ARABS WARNED

By United Press International

President Nixon and British Prime Minister Edward Heath warned the Palestinian guerrillas today they would be held responsible for the safety of American and British hostages in their hands.

Nixon, in Chicago, said in a statement issued by his press secretary, Ronald Ziegler:

"The president wants it clearly understood that the holding of American citizens as hostages is to be abhorred, and also that those who hold American citizens as hostages will be held responsible for their safety."

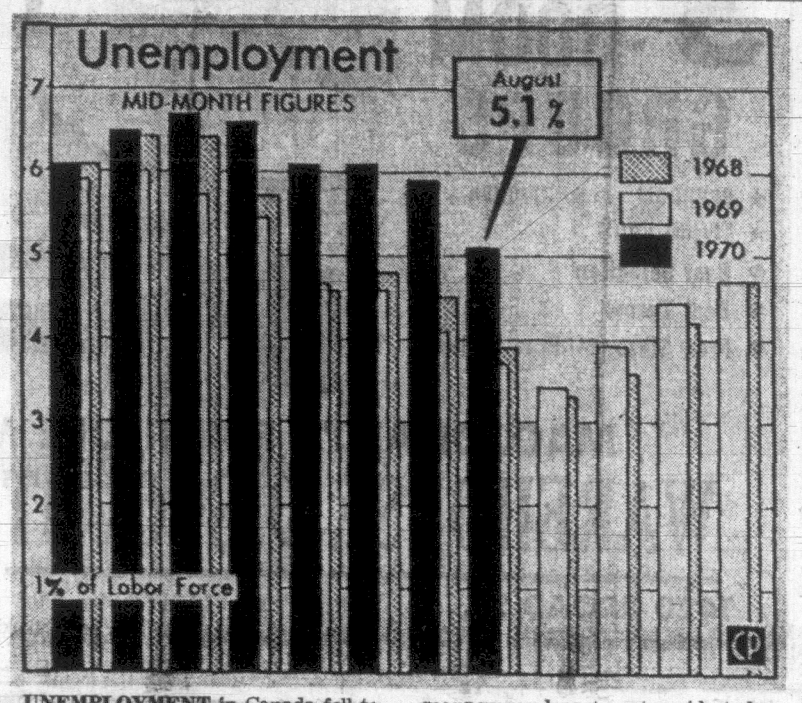
Towboat Strike Averted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Wednesday night in a dispute that threatened to bring about British Columbia's second towboat strike this year.

Federal conciliator Donald Tysoe said a memorandum of agreement is to be signed today by representatives of the B.C. Towboat Owners Association and two unions — the Seafarers' International Union and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers seamen's local.

Tysoe declined to give details of the settlement, but called it a good contract and said negotiators for all sides were happy with it.

The unions represent about 700 deckhands, oilers and cooks on coastal tugs. Their contract expired Sept. 30, 1969.



UNEMPLOYMENT in Canada fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, 5.1 per cent of the total labor force, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and manpower department said today. August unemployment was down 70,000 from July but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment Total Declines But It Still Looks Grim

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of unemployed fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, down 70,000 from July, but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago, it was officially reported today.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said there were 29,000 fewer employed persons. Although a reduction of employment also occurred last midsummer, there usually is an expansion of employment at this time of year.

There was a sharp reduction in the total labor force. It dropped to 8.72 million from 8.82 in July.

As a percentage of the total labor force, the number of unemployed fell last month to 5.1 from 5.9 per cent in July and 6.1 per cent in June. But last month's unemployment rate was sharply higher than 3.7 per cent in August last year.

The monthly employment report contained more than the usual amount of data on seasonally-adjusted employment and unemployment figures. Statisticians adjust the figures to take into account seasonal trends that otherwise make it difficult to compare one month's figures with another.

On the seasonally-adjusted basis, unemployment in August was 6.7 per cent of the labor force, unchanged from July but the highest since early 1964.

It was the second successive month of decline in actual unemployment figures, while the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment rose from 6.1 per cent in June to 6.7 in July, remaining there in August.

For the first time, the report gave seasonally-adjusted unemployment rates for regions. These showed a drop to 8.5 per cent from 9.5 per cent in July for the Atlantic provinces. The rate continued high at 8.9 per cent in Quebec, unchanged for the month, but declined in Ontario to 4.4 from 4.7 per cent.

The seasonally-adjusted rate rose in the Prairies to 5.3 — the highest this year — from 4.5 in July. In British Columbia it slipped to 9.2 per cent from 10.1 in July.

The actual figures are estimates based on a survey of 35,000 homes late in August, recording the job situation for all Canada except the northern territories in the week ended Aug. 22.

★ ★ ★

The labor picture in brief, with estimates in thousands, was:

	Aug. 1970	July 1970	Aug. 1969
Labor force	8,720	8,819	8,489
Employed	8,272	8,301	8,171
Unemployed	448	518	318

The report said there was an unusually large drop in unemployment among younger workers, aged 14 to 24, but there were still 75,000 more of them unemployed late this August than a year arlier.

On the employment side, there was the usual slight reduction in farm employment between July and August, but a larger-than-usual reduction in the service and trade industries. The latter was only partially offset by increases in employment in other industries.

'STAY WITHIN CANADA' BENNETT URGES B.C.

An angry Premier Bennett today asked the people of British Columbia "to be patient and stay within Canada."

At a noon press conference, Bennett said he has been getting a lot of mail from residents of the province expressing dissatisfaction with Confederation.

Asked whether Prime Minister Trudeau had indicated B.C. had better not hold its breath on the proposal, Bennett snapped:

"These Quebec French Canadian nationalists who control the government of Canada had better hold something stronger than their breath."

Premiers Leave Empty-Handed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had good, if possibly only short-lived, news for Canadian taxpayers Wednesday night.

The provinces did not succeed in getting any more money out of Ottawa at their three-day summit conference here, he said. (See also Page 25.)

The heads of government came down from Monday's and Tuesday's scaling of the constitutional heights to Wednesday's subject which is really dearest to their hearts; public money.

British Columbia asked for a grant of $500 million annually from Ottawa.

Trudeau told a news conference that his government did not encourage B.C. to think the money would be forthcoming soon.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec wanted even more money — a multi-million-dollar stabilization fund to help economically weaker provinces in time of high unemployment, plus $236 million which he claims the federals owe Quebec from their take from the two-percent social security tax.

QUEBEC DOESN'T PRESS

Trudeau said Quebec itself did not hold too strongly to its stabilization-fund formula.

Ottawa again gave no ground on the $236-million request.

The provinces not only played energetically their old game of how to get more cash out of the federals, they also bickered politely among each other about how much each is getting from Ottawa now.

Premier John Robarts of Ontario told reporters that the wealthier provinces, out of taxation, would have to finance Quebec's proposed stabilization fund.

There was already a multiplicity of programs such as equalization payments designed to lessen regional economic disparities, he said.

The total tax take needed to support all these programs might be hurting the national economy, he added. It was time for a little addition to

Pulp Strike Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations have resumed between the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC) and the employers' representatives in an attempt to end a seven-week strike at eight British Columbia pulp mills.

Don Lanskail, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said Wednesday night that talks resumed after letters outlining terms of reference for meeting were exchanged by the parties. (See also Page 12.)

Provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer prompted the exchange of letters and is acting as mediator for the negotiators.

REFUSED TO MEET

The bureau had refused to meet the PPWC until now after the 4,000 PPWC members turned down a three-year contract offering a 22.5 per cent increase in wages. Some 7,000 members of two international pulp unions recently accepted the three-year settlement.

Meanwhile, a threatened split in the PPWC failed to materialize Wednesday night as 350 members of the Prince George local of the union voted 94 per cent against accepting a back-to-work offer of two pulp mills in the area. The Prince George local was the only PPWC local to vote against the three-year contract but is bound by the over-all vote of the union.

'CANADA BAD FOR JOBS'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today it now is more imperative than ever for the government to tell Canadians what, if anything, it has in mind to improve the employment situation.

He said in a statement, commenting on the latest unemployment figures that despite the complacency of the Trudeau government, Canada still has the highest rate of unemployment in the developed world.

"It's hardly a record to be proud of," he said.

PHIL'S NEWEST POLICY

'I'm Sole Spokesman'

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi confirmed today he has taken the role of sole policy spokesman for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

But he disagreed with suggestions that he has muzzled his department personnel to the point of denying their right to talk to reporters.

"I read in the press every day what someone has said," he replied to questioning in an interview.

Reporters seeking information from department officials have been told that official statements must come from the minister. Former welfare minister Dan Campbell had a policy of allowing officials considerable freedom to discuss policy.

MEET SUPERVISORS

Meanwhile, Gaglardi today was meeting supervisory welfare personnel from across the province. The meeting in the Legislative Buildings, one of a regular series, was believed likely to discuss transfers of supervisory personnel which became public knowledge last week after it was learned that most of the 16 persons believed transferred were appealing the moves.

Many of those attending the meeting are understood to be upset about the transfers. No public statement on the matter was expected.

Aid to Two B.C. Cities Expected

Prince Rupert and Prince George will be considered for special federal incentive aid, Premier Bennett said Wednesday on his return from the constitutional conference in Ottawa.

Bennett said Tom Kent, deputy minister of regional development, will come to B.C. in the next two or three weeks to study these and other regions as possible special incentive areas.

The premier said a commitment from Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand to study the areas was one of a few possible increases in federal aid to B.C. resulting from his Ottawa visit.

But he said his request for an additional $500 million annually in federal aid received only a sympathetic hearing and nothing more.

'BAD DEAL'

Bennett said in an interview that the $500 million represents the difference between what Ottawa takes out of B.C. in taxes and what it returns in various types of assistance.

"We're Canadians and we intend to remain so," Bennett said, "but I'm more convinced than ever that British Columbia is getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The Trudeau government is oriented toward the needs of Eastern Canada and Quebec in particular, he said.

Bennett said a meeting between federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Provincial Resources Minister Ray Williston will be held to discuss a proposed Prince Rupert superport.

Bennett said constitutional changes are still "a long way off" after the Ottawa meetings.

Cong Presents New Peace Plan

PARIS (Reuters) — The Viet Cong presented today a new series of proposals aimed at a military and political settlement in South Vietnam.

The proposals were based on the guerrillas' existing 10-point peace plan, including their remands for total American withdrawal and the replacement of the present Saigon leadership.

The Viet Cong said that if the United States agreed to withdraw all its troops and those of its foreign allies from South Vietnam by June 30, 1971, the guerrilla forces would stop attacking them and would discuss safety guarantees and the question of releasing prisoners.

The proposals, made by chief Viet Cong negotiator Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh at the Paris peace conference, called for talks to establish a coalition government composed of members of the Viet Cong-backed provisional revolutionary government, members of the present Saigon administration who want peace, independence, neutrality and democracy, and political exiles.

As a first step Mrs. Binh said the provisional regime is ready to talk with a Saigon administration which would exclude President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice-Preisdent Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem.

Dollar Moves Up To Near-Parity

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian dollar came close to parity with the U.S. dollar today.

The dollar gained 7-16 cents in terms of U.S. funds Wednesday and continued to gain today, hitting 99.6 cents U.S. at one stage.

19-MONTH INVESTIGATION ENDS

Kuhn Charged in Osland Murder

Egon Kuhn, 35, a Saanich contractor, today was charged in Victoria Provincial Court with the non-capital murder of William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Judge William Ostler remanded Kuhn to 2:15 p.m. Friday without election on request of the accused's counsel, Dermod Owen-Flood.

No application for bail was made.

In a statement from his office Wednesday, city police chief J. F. Gregory, with Inspector John Post of Saanich, announced that Egon Kuhn had been arrested late Wednesday afternoon.

The bizarre Osland case began Feb. 3, 1969, when the prominent businessman was reported missing.

His bound body, wrapped in plastic and weighted with a 150-pound marine valve stem, was recovered three weeks later from the bottom of the Inner Harbor.

He had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument.

The 35-year-old Osland was vice-president and comptroller-treasurer of Diversified Management and Development, the operator of a dozen companies.

A financial expert, the six-foot-one, 180-pound Osland was also an outgoing man — a sailor, skier and squash player — with many acquaintances.

He left his office at Fort and Cook at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 3 to visit the Robert M. Emery, a ship being renovated in the Inner Harbor to serve as a floating restaurant.

Osland was a partner in the ship along with contractor Siegfried Marquardt and lawyer David Hummel.

The day after Osland disappeared, the former U.S. Navy supply ship left under tow for San Francisco. The

TRIP TO JAIL FIRST THEN EUROPE JAUNT

A 23-year-old Manitoba man had his plans for a trip to Europe delayed by two months Thursday in provincial court.

John A. Robertson of St. Boniface appeared before Judge William Ostler on a charge of possession of marijuana.

Court was told he had convictions of theft, possession of stolen property and assault causing bodily harm dating back to 1967.

"This young man has pursued an intermittent criminal career in the past few years, said prosecutor Cory Stolte.

Robertson said since he was released from jail in June he had earned money to go to Europe and start again.

Ostler said he showed contempt for the law and sentenced him to two months in jail.

. . . AMMAN FLAMING

Another guerrilla statement in Beirut said the Jordanian army had put Amman "to the torch" by indiscriminate heavy shelling.

Fighting started at dawn with red tracer bullets streaking in from the hills. The army entered Amman in a three-pronged armored attack supported by artillery.

Smoke poured from the Jebel Hussein area — site of Palestinian refugee camps.

Correspondents in the Intercontinental Hotel—itself shaken from shells bursting around it — said they saw a girls school hit by mortar fire.

Earlier today Amman radio announced an order from military Gov.-Gen. Field Marshal Habis Majali that a total curfew was being imposed and that all violators would be shot on sight.

Observers in Beirut believe the numerically stronger and better armed royalist army had gained the upper hand in the initial stages of what seemed to be a final showdown for control of the Hashemite kingdom.

SYRIA BACKS GUERRILLAS

As army tanks swept into Amman, Syria came out on the side of the guerrillas, appealed to royalist troops to mutiny against their officers, and warned that it would not stand idly by while the guerrillas were crushed.

Another Jordanian government broadcast claimed that guerrillas in Zarqa, 15 miles northeast of Amman, had surrendered. Zarqa is near the airstrip where guerrillas of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine blew up three hijacked airliners on Saturday after removing passengers and crews.

Majali declared a curfew in Amman and Zarqa, saying anyone seen on the streets would be shot.

All telephone lines to Jordan were out of commission. Its frontiers were closed and air traffic to Amman was shut down.

A pall of black and grey smoke rose over Amman as the battle raged through the morning. The U.S. embassy was hit by small-arms fire and a mortar shell landed on the roof.

Reuters correspondent Patrick Massey reported savage fighting around the American and British embassies in Amman with tanks and armored cars blasting away at guerrilla strongpoints.

At one point, Jordanian army headquarters was shelled. Fighting near the airport appeared intense.

A guerrilla communique broadcast by Radio Baghdad said the fiercest fighting flared up in the Wahdat district on Amman's northern outskirts.

REFUGEE CAMP SITE

Wahdat is the site of the huge Palestinian refugee camp where some, if not all, of the 54 hostages from last week's airline hijacking are believed held.

There was no mention from either side of the hostages.

The communique said the guerrillas had occupied Amman's central post office building.

The guerrillas issued an urgent radio appeal for intervention in their behalf by some 12,000 Iraqi soldiers stationed around Irbid, 50 miles north of the capital. There were no reports of fighting involving the Iraqi troops, however.

"We ask you to participate in this battle and intervene immediately on the side of the revolutionary forces, to overthrow the regime of treason and intrigue," the broadcast said.

INTERVENTION UNLIKELY

Most informed observers in Beirut doubted whether the Baghdad government would order its troops into action against the Jordanian forces — an action that would be tantamount to a declaration of war on King Hussein.

An earlier guerrilla communique said "revolutionary forces are in full control" of the town of Kerak, 50 miles southwest of the capital.

Ranged against each other in the trial of strength are the 34-year-old king and his army of about 55,000 men and guerrilla commander-in-chief Yasser Arfat with a less well-armed force of between 20,000 and 30,000 full-time guerrillas and possbily as many again of part-time milita.

America's Cup Race Postponed

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The second race of the America's Cup yacht competition between Intrepid of the United States and Australia's Gretel II was called off today because of lack of winds.

The second race now will be held Friday.

Intrepid won the first race in the best-of-seven series by five minutes 52 seconds.

body was found near where the ship had been moored at the foot of Fort Street.

The case became complicated by the fact that Victoria police were not immediately called to assist the Saanich investigation.

After Osland's disappearance, the Saanich force used divers to comb an area off Ten Mile Point near the Osland home at 2831 Seaview.

'SEVERE CRITICISM'

And 22 days after Osland went missing, the divers abruptly abandoned the Ten Mile Point search and began diving in the Inner Harbor where the ship had been moored.

City police entered the case the day the body was found Feb. 25.

In Wednesday's statement, Gregory said he realized the city force "came in for some severe criticism over the apparent lack of progress in the case but, as evidence will show, we were making progress at all times."

"The record will also show that we classed the case as being complex at the outset."

"Many armchair detectives, with the best of intentions but limited in their knowledge of procedure and the laws governing admissibility of evidence, had solved the case ages ago."

Gregory said also, in the statement, the decision to call in experts from the RCMP on Oct. 22, 1969, added encouragement and confidence to efforts in the investigation.

Inspector Robert Simmonds of Burnaby and Sgt. Edward Naaykens, of Kamloops, the experts, were assigned to the case after Gregory had requested an RCMP review of the situation.

CAME BACK

Once the body had been found Feb. 25, the two police forces immediately sent investigators to San Francisco to search the ship which had changed its name to Ss. Taratino.

The ship was examined carefully with the help of inspectors from the San Francisco homicide department and the crew was questioned.

Kuhn, at the time the project manager on the ship, came back to Victoria to help in the investigation.

Police said later his assistance consisted of clarifying his whereabouts the day Osland disappeared.

Kuhn was arrested at his home about 4:45 p.m. Wednesday by Det.-Sgt. Robin Stewart of Saanich police and Staff-Sgt. Walter Calwell of city police.

determine whether there were too many of these programs.

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan said Quebec was perhaps getting more than its fair share of money from Ottawa.

Thatcher also said his province was getting less than its fair share of incentive grants from the federal regional economic expansion department.

Practically all the other subjects discussed by the political leaders were closely related to money, including Ottawa's proposed changes in the Income Tax Act.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson promised that the provinces could make further submissions on his white paper tax proposals — and the changes in them — before the draft legislation is presented to Parliament in March or April.

The occasion will be a meeting of finance ministers this fall. And there will be another meeting in the spring whe the legislation is introduced.

Peace River Hits Back At Williston

PEACE RIVER, Alta. (CP) — Mayor E. R. Whitmey today criticized statements made by Ray Williston, British Columbia lands and forests minister, concerning low water levels on the Peace River.

"It's obvious the minister is not fully informed about the problems facing the town of Peace River's water intake," Mayor Whitmey said.

Williston earlier this week told the Chamber of Commerce in Dawson Creek that the problems in Peace River "are insignificant when the over-all benefits of flood control on the river are considered."

Mayor Whitmey said the minister's statements were "obviously made by some who had not made an on-site inspection."

Oil Policy Supported

OTTAWA (CP) — The Exchequer Court of Canada reaffirmed in a judgment published today that Ottawa has the constitutional right to regulate the distribution of imported goods even if the regulation tends to invade provincial powers.

Justice Jacques Dumoulin rejected an appeal by Caloil Inc. of Montreal against federal regulations proclaimed last month to control distribution of imported gasoline.

The ruling thus restores to legality the federal government's 10-year-old national oil policy, designed to reserve all Western Canada and almost all of Ontario as an exclusive market for Canadian-produced petroleum products.

B.C. Students To Receive Top Priority

Education Minister Donald Brothers said today he has advised B.C. universities to give top priority to B.C. students, followed by other Canadians and by foreign students.

Brothers said he had written to the presidents of the three major universities outlining the policy about two weeks ago.

He made the disclosure after being asked about Alberta plans to limit the number of foreign students in Alberta universities next year and to charge higher tuition fees to non-Canadians.

Brothers said tuition fees are a matter for individual universities to decide, but noted that some U.S. schools charge higher fees for outsiders.

He said "you have to take a very careful look" at tuition question when it costs $2,500 a year to educate a university student and fees cover only a small portion of the cost.

The Alberta move was reported based on the pressure of higher education costs.

Dredge Work Tenders Called

A spokesman for Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson said the federal works department is calling for tenders to dredge 130,000 cubic yards of material from Tseum Harbor at Sidney.

Bids are returnable by Oct. 10.

Dredging will facilitate movement of private pleasure craft, commercial fishing vessels and other shipping to and from government and private docks, moorage, repair and maintenance services.

BRIEF FROM MANUFACTURERS

Big Boost in Jobless Aid Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Manufacturers' Association today advocated an increase in unemployment insurance benefits to 60 per cent of average earnings from present levels—42 per cet for single people and up to 53 per cent for those with dependents.

The recommendation was contained in a brief presented to the Commons labor committee which is studying the government's white paper on unemployment insurance.

The association agreed with the white paper's proposal that unemployment insurance benefits be limited to a maximum $100 per week.

It also agreed that contributions should be deductible for income tax purposes, and that benefits should be taxable.

"This is only fair to persons whose risk of unemployment is slight, and it also eliminates the need of the present dual benefit system since those who most need the benefit payment will be least affected by the tax, if at all," said R. E. Heneault, chairman of the association's committee on unemployment insurance committee, in a statement supporting the brief.

Among other recommendations contained in the brief:

—Contributions should be on an equal basis between employer ad employee;

—Experience or merit rating should not be adopted;

—Present eligibility requirements should be retained except that an employment week should be defined as one in which a minimum of 24 hours was worked;

—Benefits should be payable for a maximum 26 weeks;

—Self-employed fishermen should be excluded from coverage as recommended in the white paper;

—Persons who became unemployed because of pregnancy or illness should not receive unemployment insurance benefits;

—pensions received under employer-employee pension plans, and benefits from government-sponsored plans such as old age security, old age assistance and the Canada and Quebec Pension Plans, be treated as earnings for purposes of unemployment insurance.

The brief urged that no legislative action on unemployment insurance occur "until current studies and governmet proposals on the subjects of poverty and social security have been made public and a complementary relationship can be seen to exist between all facets of the total social security program."

Meir Denies Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir, arriving for urgent consultations of the Middle East situation, has denied a U.S. state department report that her country has violated "some" provisions of the cease-fire.

She told reporters at Kennedy International Airport Wednesday night: "I know that Israel is not guilty of some violations or any violations whatsoever."

U.S. officials said in Washington Wednesday that Israel had violated the ceasefire by conducting reconnaissance flights over Egypt and by strengthening fortifications at the Suez canal.

Mrs. Meir stopped here on her way to Washington where she will meet Friday with President Nixon and State Secretary William Rogers.

Asked to comment on rumors that Israel might soften its position on releasing Arab prisoners in view of the hostages held by guerrilla airplane hijackers, Mrs. Meir said:

"I'm sorry. Those who are in our prisons are men and women who have been brought to trial. They killed or attempted to kill Israelis. They have to serve their terms.

"We believe that a united front of all the countries involved is the best way to free hostages and guarantee that there will be no more hostages in the future."

SECURITY TIGHT

Heavy security precautions were in evidence at the airport and Mrs. Meir's El Al jet parked in an isolated section more than a mile from where passengers usually disembark.

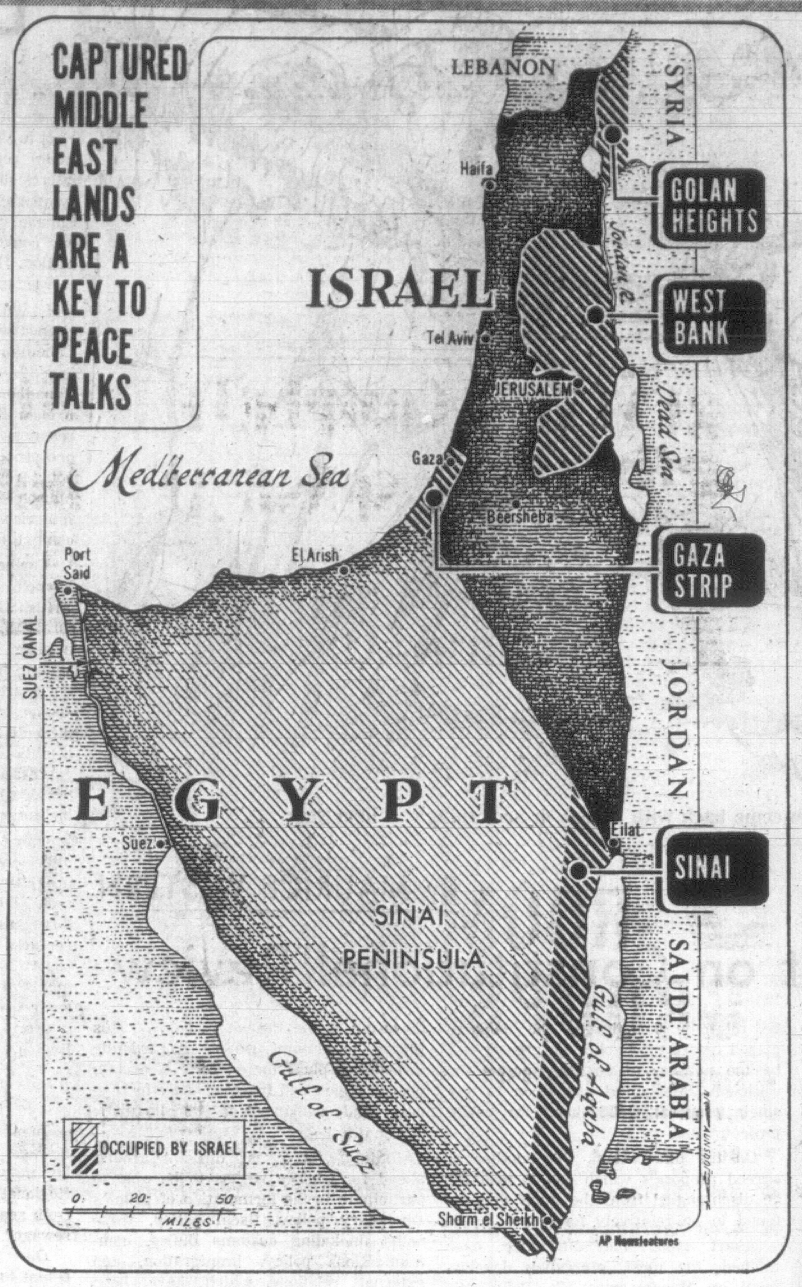
After the news conference, she went to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Mrs. Meir is expected to voice concern and displeasure Friday to Nixon and Rogers over what she believes is the soft line taken by the United States toward alleged Egyptian violations of the Suez ceasefire and its inability to obtain rectification of the situation.

On the other hand, Nixon is likely to urge Mrs. Meir to resume indirect peace talks which Israel last week broke off with Egypt until it receives an assurance the Arabs will pull back Russian missiles allegedly brought forward in the Suez zone after the truce went into effect Aug. 7.

Mrs. Meir in her news conference left the door open for Israel to return to the talks.

But she said "it is very difficult unless certain conditions are met in my talks with President Nixon." She did not elaborate on what the conditions are.



MID-EAST PROBLEM

No Easy Solution

By The Associated Press

With angry charges and countercharges about violations of the fragile Middle East ceasefire still hanging in the air, it is apparent that a negotiated settlement of the Arab-Israeli hostilities is a good distance from reality.

Aside from the actual fighting still going on between Israeli border forces and Arab guerrillas from Syria, Jordan and Lebanon, and aside from alleged violations of the 90-day truce by Egypt and Israel, the issues involved in the Middle East dispute make for a rocky path in the negotiations ahead.

In 1967, when Israel used the element of surprise and superior air power to snuff out Arab resistance in six days of fighting, territory under Israeli control was just about tripled.

The Israelis took control over the Sinai Peninsula, including the Gaza Strip, all the way from their own southern border to the Suez Canal. Israel also carved the Golan Heights out of southwestern Syria, and took full control of Jerusalem and a sizable chunk of territory west of the Jordan River from Jordan.

But Israel also gained something which has proved to be an unwanted headache—an even greater problem of Arab refugees than it had before the six-day war. One of the perennial Arab demands is that Israel arrange for the repatriation of Arabs who were displaced when the state of Israel was founded in 1948.

The demand has been given new impetus as the result of Arabs who became refugees as a result of Israel's quick victory in 1967.

One of Israel's demands, however, is for the right to recognized and secure boundaries—and the Israelis are known to feel that to admit Palestinian refugees and potential if not actual guerrillas to Israeli territory would be a form of suicide.

Neither of the two sides has made its negotiating strategy known in the talks now under way at the United Nations in New York. But presuming enough good will and trust can be found to solve such periupheral problems as exchange of prisoners, the Egyptians, Israelis and Jordanians may want to start talking about how much territory Israel should be required to return.

★ ★ ★

One possible solution being kicked around by observers of the Middle East problem is the creation of large autonomous areas which would be buffers between the Arab states and Israel.

Firm Refuses Request

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seattle City Light Co. has refused Ottawa's request that it apply for a Canadian licence for a reservoir project that would flood about 6,000 acres of British Columbia land.

Al Davidson, assistant deputy minister in the federal energy department, announced the refusal Wednesday and said federal officials are considering their next step.

Seattle City Light plans to raise the level of the Ross Lake dam on the Skagit River in Washington, to provide more power. This would flood part of the Skagit Valley in B.C., about 90 miles east of Vancouver.

The federal government asked the company to apply for a licence under the International River Improvements Act, which requires a Canadian permit for construction on an international river.

John Nelson, superintendent of lighting for the utility, said the company's refusal was based on legal advice and the company would ask the U.S. federal power commission for permission to go ahead.

Ken Farquharson of Vancouver, a spokesman for a Canadian group fighting the project, appealed to Ottawa to act quickly and hold public hearings.

"Canadian ministers have stated emphatically that this project falls under the act and the act will be enforced. But the company is ignoring this and just applying to the American body."

Ships Benefit

PARIS (AP) — Last-minute bookings on trans-Atlantic liners have doubled or tripled since last week's airliner hijackings, company officials said. The French Line, which handles bookings for both the France and the Queen Elizabeth, 2, said the normal 10 to 20 booking inquiries daily had jumped to 40 to 50.

CUPE Strike Settled

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—The dispute between the Canadian Union of Public Employees and four Kootenay-Boundary school boards is over.

Union members voted 133 to 28 Wednesday night to accept a settlement worked out with government mediation officer Charles Stewart of Vancouver.

The dispute began almost a month ago when CUPE locals in Trail, Castlegar, Selkirk College and Grand Forks voted to take strike action in their contract dispute with the boards.

CUPE national representative Aubrey Burton of Trail said settlement terms would be released later in a joint statement with the school boards, but it is understood the union agreed to a two-year contract providing for a seven per cent wage increase each year.

"For a majority of the members, it constitutes an appreciable increase over the boards' last offer," he said.

He said all workers should be back at work in the schools today.

He said the Trail strike ended at noon Wednesday and lockouts in the other districts had been lifted.

Short-Cut to a Lake?

IT MAY NOT HAVE BEEN MERE coincidence that brought in the mail yesterday a public relations statement on the proposed Skagit River Valley flooding just as a press wire story was announcing that the Seattle City Light Co. has rejected an Ottawa request that it apply for a Canadian licence to flood 6,000 acres of the British Columbia valley. The publicity handout gave notice that an informational report on "the significance and the effect of the proposed hydro-electric project" would shortly be issued by the Seattle officials for the benefit of Canadians.

The project, which has been fought by conservationists on both sides of the border, would raise by another 125 feet the height of the existing Ross Lake dam on the Skagit River in Washington, to provide more peak-load power for Seattle. The result would be to back the water up into British Columbia, creating a lake in the valley about 90 miles east of Vancouver in the vicinity of Manning Park.

Apparently delighted with the idea, Resources Minister Williston last spring hastened to call for bids for the 16 million feet of timber in the valley, even before any flooding had been sanctioned. Public outcry led to the withdrawal of the province's invitation. But the Social Credit government, eager for cash, had already figured that reparations of $35,000 a year for 99 years would adequately repay the people of British Columbia for the loss of the wilderness gem to flooding.

The additional power would be used only for peaking purposes, and numerous alternative solutions, including a thermal plant using British Columbia gas, have been proposed. One of the safeguards against flooding, in view of the B.C. government and the city of Seattle power interests, had been the belief that permits for the trans-border project would have to be obtained from both Washington and Ottawa, and it was hoped that Ottawa, at least, would refuse in the public interest. But now the power utility announces that on the basis of "legal advice," it believes that only the permission of the U.S. Federal Power Commission need be obtained.

This is a challenge that cannot be ignored. The public should make its feeling known — and conservationist voices have been heard in Seattle as well. Where feasible alternatives are offered, it is folly to barge ahead and destroy a river valley that is a scenic wonderland. If our provincial government will give us no protection, our hope lies with the federal government. Surely Canada has some say in whether or not a foreign power utility can flood Canadian territory.

The Economics of Parole

STATISTICS ON THE EMPLOYment and earnings of paroled prisoners in Canada cast an interesting light on the economic advantages of a system of supervised freedom for selected prisoners. The statistics are not precise. They serve, however, to indicate the substantial savings this county may achieve through the parole system, along with the rehabilitative effects on the individuals concerned.

In May, some of Canada's 3,376 paroled prisoners were out of work, some were in school or taking training. But those who had jobs earned $925,808, or about $405 each, that month. In Victoria, the figures were slightly better. Of 68 under supervision, 49, or 72 per cent, earned $22,430, or about $458 each on average—and this despite the strikes and lockouts during May. According to one calculation, earnings by parolees throughout Canada for the full year should reach $12 millions.

This is only one portion of the picture. According to a statement in Hansard last February, the cost of keeping an inmate in a penitentiary amounted to $6,654. The costs involved in service to a person on parole were approximately $851.

This does not mean that Canada saved the difference on each parolee. The costs of the penitentiaries were not substantially reduced, because staffs had to be maintained for those remaining inside and services could be curtailed only fractionally. However, had parole not eased the physical pressure on prisons, new institutions, with all the expense of running them, might have been required. And, while parolees were earning, the public costs of supporting their dependents were reduced and, in some cases, eliminated.

Parole is not a device created solely to lower costs of treatment for prisoners. Far from it. Basic to the philosophy is the rehabilitation of the man granted conditional freedom under supervision. In that field, the annual figures for 1969 reflect an encouraging trend. Failure of the parole system was reported during the 12 months in only 7 per cent of Victoria cases, a rate substantially below the 12 per cent national average. It should also be noted that failure rates usually increase at the conclusion of the parole, when supervision is withdrawn.

Despite these qualifications, the system seems to be working with reasonable effectiveness. More men are being helped back to society and good citizenship, and the method is easing the burden on the taxpayers.

All Concerned Should Be Heard

IF THE PORT HARDY POLLUtion hearings concerning Utah Construction and Mining Limited's application to dump 9.3 million gallons of effluent daily into Rupert Inlet are not to be meaningless, then the provincial government should allow all objectors to voice their opposition to the project. Although 152 persons protested against the project only a handful penetrated the red tape to enter formal briefs and these must be presented at Port Hardy under such circumstances that the real concern of the public will have little effect.

Under the provincial Pollution Control Act Mr. Venables is explicitly allowed "to determine his own procedure", and "the director shall decide, in his sole discretion, whether or not the objection will be the subject of a hearing, and shall notify the objector of his decision."

While these wide powers may be necessary to exclude irrelevant objections in hearings of this nature, every responsible voice should be allowed to be heard. And at least one responsible group, the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, has been barred from the proposed hearings by technicalities.

Since work on the $74-millions mining complex has been going on for almost a year the proposed hearings might be described as being too little and too late. But they provide the only official form in which the public can present its case against the pollution of Rupert Inlet. With the advent of Mr. Venable's unfortunate illness the hearings will be delayed at least one month. That should give the provincial government time to ensure that every responsible voice of dissent is heard and duly considered before the mining company is given a green light to pollute.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Disagreement on Constitutional Review

SOMETHING is wrong with the constitutional review process. Unhappily the political doctors differ in their diagnoses and consequently in the remedies which they have to offer. According to the federal and Quebec governments, the method — involving a grand examination of the entire constitution — is basically sound and requires only a speed-up to produce satisfactory results. Ottawa has been summoning the provinces to greater effort at more meetings both of ministers and officials.

Western

Mr. Bourassa, the new Quebec premier, has been saying much the same thing but with greater urgency. The last provincial election demonstrated, he argues, that Quebec wants a "new federal contract." For him, at least, "it is obvious that the present structures of the Canadian federation are ill-suited to our requirements." It is necessary "to conscript our energies in record time to arrive quickly at concrete solutions . . ." "Our Quebec fellow citizens will not tolerate any longer either the excessive slowness of the revision procedure of our constitution, or the lingering chaos which stems from it."

Quebec View Only

This view of the constitution and its present effects seems to be limited to Quebec. Several provinces have constitutional grievances (usually related to taxation) which they are prepared, with little or no prodding, to expound. Others (notably Saskatchewan and Newfoundland) are well enough satisfied with the British North America Act to regard with ill-disguised impatience the amount of time being expended in constitutional review

From this standpoint, there is much logic in the proposal advanced Monday by Mr. Robarts, and, in effect, endorsed by Mr. Thatcher. The Ontario premier (without much applause from Saskatchewan) argues that the method followed has been very helpful especially in clearing the atmosphere. Unhappily — and this point Mr. Thatcher heavily underlines — there has been a "lack of tangible progress." Urgent matters ought not to be delayed until everything is agreed; therefore, "let us act together when we agree together and not await the one grand day of wholesale constitutional change — a day which, in any event, is not likely to come about soon."

In other words Mr. Robarts is now for a new, more selective approach. He would give immediate priority to an amending formula, an improved version of Fulton-Favreau, seeking this through specific amendment. Then, if there is consensus on the spending power, he would favor a change in the written constitution to incorporate what is agreed, without delaying everything until accord extends to the entire reform package.

Different Argument

Obviously this argument is sharply at variance with the Quebec thesis, although Mr. Robarts and Mr. Bourassa do appear to agree that the search for practical solutions to problems through the establishment of better intergovernmental machinery and improved consultation need not await formal change. There seems also to be a clear divergence between Mr. Bourassa's emphasis on the "new federal contract" and Mr. Thatcher's insistence that "we should build on the present constitution."

There is another argument, almost never conceded in these talks, for a selective approach. This is that it is not enough for the 11 governments to agree on what is constitutionally desirable and to set it out in legal form. They must also, once this is done, sell their proposals to the public in each of the provinces. Fulton-Favreau fell because Mr. Lesage despaired of selling it to Quebec voters. But that formula, complicated as it was, dealt with a single subject (to which delegation was said to be related). The larger the package placed before the public, the greater will be the number of possible targets for criticism. Substantial opposition to any single proposal could doom the entire project.

On the other hand, the number of agreed proposals which can in practice be disentangled from the mass may be found to be relatively few.

Apart from the difference over method, the most interesting development on Monday was Mr. Bourassa's reformulation of Quebec's demands. The change of tone from Union National days was marked, Mr. Bourassa being the advocate of "true economic federalism." There are also important changes of substance. Thus, it is clear from Mr. Bourassa's brief that Quebec will not press for the acceptance of its original, highly controversial and manifestly unattainable propositions on the monarchy, parliamentary government, the official name of the federation, the existence of two nations and the right to self-determination. It is not interested, as the premier rather oddly puts it, "in starting a quarrel around words or symbols."

Secondly, and this is a most important gain for Mr. Trudeau, the new Quebec government favors the adoption of a constitutional charter of human rights binding alike on the federal and provincial governments.

On other matters, though, Mr. Bourassa seems to be defending with milder words positions already taken by his predecessors. Quebec, as Mr. Johnson used to say, must be "in a position to ensure that conditions will favor the flowering of the French fact . . ." This means maximum use of its existing jurisdiction plus "the exercise of certain powers which will increase the effectiveness and radiance of its linguistic personality."

Plainly there is difficult ground ahead for Quebec wishes to be able to participate in the formulation of policies (monetary policy, fiscal policy, trade policy including customs duties, communications policy, immigration, and external relations which have been effectively controlled by the federal government.)

Not Too Specific

Mr. Bourassa was not too specific and has promised to clarify his propositions. His brief appears, however, to raise the old question: who speaks for Quebecers? The prime minister has argued forcefully that Quebec participates now through her strong representation in the federal cabinet. Mr. Bennett has, indeed, complained recently that Quebec overparticipates.

But although Quebec governments come and go, all apparently cherish the conviction that the authentic voice of the province can only be expressed through a government in Quebec City. Other premiers often speak in the same way but they do not proceed from an article of faith rooted in the French fact. The difference does not necessarily make for discord in everyday federal-provincial relations but it is certainly a major barrier to agreement at a continuing conference charged with revision of the Canadian Constitution.

U.S. and Israel: A Reversal of Roles

By Frank Mankiewicz and Tom Braden from Washington

PRIME Minister Golda Meir has prepared a very tough line for her meeting with President Nixon and it is one which puts the President in an embarrassing position.

The line Mrs. Meir will give to Mr. Nixon is, in effect, the Nixon line—the line of the cold war, of anti-Communism, of Russian expansionism — of "negotiation from strength." It is a line which made Richard Nixon a congressman of note, and a senator, and contributed to the fact that he is president of the United States.

It is not a line which Richard Nixon as president wishes to follow right now, for three compelling reasons.

First, the president is anxious to bring at least the appearance of peace to the Middle East, and he is persuaded that the way to do this is to keep Israel's feet to the fire. He knows as well as Mrs. Meir that the Egyptians have cheated during the truce by advancing missile sites and even by bringing in new missiles, but he does not agree with Mrs. Meir that Israel is any worse off as a result than she would have been had there been no cease-fire.

U.S. diplomatic intelligence sources are convinced that while the missile installations are a violation of the cease-fire, they do no more than confirm an Israeli military position that was deteriorating before the cease-fire and would have continued to deteriorate had there been none. There might have been more planes shot down — on both sides — but the Soviet missiles would have gone in eventually, it is argued.

Second, the president has gone to enormous trouble to persuade Russia to bring Egypt to the peace talks. Mr. Nixon was able to do so in part at least because he had hard evidence that China was lending every possible encouragement to Arab guerrillas. The Soviet Union has been successful in keeping Nasser in a negotiating mood, and expects the president to produce Israel as a quid-pro-quo.

Third, there are the upcoming congressional elections in which Republican prospects will obviously be better served if they can go before the country as representatives of the party which brought peace to the Middle East.

Moreover, Arab-Israeli talks would not — in the Administration's view — threaten an increased Soviet presence in the Middle East, whereas a breakdown in the talks would ensure such an increase. For all these reasons, President Nixon has dropped the cold war role, at the very time that Golda Meir has adopted it.

American Pattern

Time was when Mrs. Meir's government relied for U.S. support on essentially moral grounds. Israel pictured herself — quite accurately — as a beleaguered miniature of America itself, possessed of the same beliefs in democracy and in the Western tradition of the ultimate value of the individual.

But Israel's principal argument has shifted to a cold war line. The necessity to halt Communist expansion and take a hard "law-and-order" line have become the chief arguments. This theme is made easier by three years of experience as an occupation power — an experience which has enabled Israel's ambassador here to refer unblushingly to Palestinian Arabs as "these people."

It is a major shift, and like Mr. Nixon's shift, it, too, rests on a rational ground. To Israel, this war is a war of survival, and no advantage can be lightly abandoned. That is why Mrs. Meir is taking the line that her country will not resume peace talks until the status quo ante has been restored along the cease-fire line.

The confrontation is ironic, and it cannot escape the attention of Israel that it is the hero of the cold war and the Silent Majority who are now suggesting that Israel "bug out" and that Golda Meir become the first Israeli prime minister to "preside over a defeat."

"FOR SOMEBODY THAT DON'T THROW SO GOOD, YOU SURE CAN HIT STUFF!"

Looking Back

From the Times of September 17, 1910.

Excellent progress is being made on the work of installing the immense electrical generating plant at Jordan River for the Vancouver Island Power Company, a subsidiary concern of the B.C. Electric Railway Company, and there is every indication that the project will be completed early in the coming year.

The immensity of the project will be gathered when it is stated that there is now a force of no less than 225 men steadily employed at the site of the power house.

Letters

French Facts

On September 11 I was interviewed by one of your reporters on the French Fact in Victoria and in British Columbia. Your reporter, a young man very interested in Canadian affairs and sympathetic to the bilingual character of Canada, wrote a worthwhile review on our conversation in your September 12 edition. However, I must make two corrections.

I did not associate the Maison Francaise at Uvic with any French Canadian group. Your reporter asked how I thought the English-speaking Canadians in Victoria accepted the French Fact; my reply was that their reactions were often good and I gave as one proof, amongst others not written by your reporter, the existence of the Maison Francaise. This part of the interview does not at all fit in the context in which it was placed.

Furthermore, I do not speak for the French Canadians of Victoria or of British Columbia. I am neither a "cultural Messiah who finds himself shepherding a reluctant flock" nor Moses leading his people out of bondage. I do not share the pessimism that the article seems to imply; the situation is very difficult, I agree, but under certain conditions I enumerated, I saw and I expressed hope. My remarks were personal and not that of any group or institution that I am connected with.

Only a very short part of the long interview was related in the report. To my bitter disappointment re Mr. Bennett, the reporter clearly failed to distinguish between relevant matters and remarks made in jest. Although the report has some merit, the disappointments of it would tend to make me shy away from interviews of this kind in the future. — Gerald Moreau, No. 260—1573 Begbie.

Sewage Disposal

In the lull on the Macaulay Point Sewage outfall project, may I make a last minute appeal to the Capital District Regional Council to change its policy from sea-disposal to land disposal of our sewage?

Our engineers are perfectly competent to do the job the community calls on them to do. But the recent picture of the long pipes brings sadness to think that this engineering effort is to end in futility as an answer to our problem.

The bacterial problem may likely be taken care of by long outfalls, but I submit this is not the main problem any longer.

The main problem is the pouring of nutrients into any waters, nutrients coming from sewage, phosphate detergents and fertilizers from our soils. Besides wasting them, when they could fertilize our land by underground irrigation, this also incidentally saving a lot of our summer water supply, in maintaining ground water levels, we are creating too much stimulant to oxygen-consuming growth in the seas, and also feeding disease bacteria which feed on the sewage and nutrients and which multiply to kill our coastal shellfish, as is happening now with oysters and clams in Puget Sound. It will not be long until the bactria spread to the waters of Georgia Strait and our own.

Our present "waste" philosophy is not a viable philosophy. Only that of returning our waste to the soil can be such—Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings.

Those Militant Arab Hi-Jackers 'Inspired by National Devotion'

By ROBERT STEPHENS

It is probably no accident that the spectacular hijacking episode coincided both with an incipient civil war situation in Jordan and with a wider crisis in the Middle East created by the American-initiated moves towards peace talks between Egypt, Jordan and Israel, accepted by President Nasser and King Hussein.

For clearly part of the purpose of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, whose commandos were responsible for the hijacking, is to torpedo the peace talks, to force King Hussein's government either to abandon the peace plan or surrender power and to seize the initiative from Al Fatah (Palestine Liberation Movement), the main guerrilla organisation. The Fatah, while denouncing the peace plan, has adopted a more cautious wait-and-see policy towards King Hussein and President Nasser.

LEILA KHALED

Small Groups

The Popular Front is the biggest of several small extremist groups who operate mostly independently of the main Palestine guerrilla organisation, the Palestine Liberation Organisation, which is dominated by Al Fatah. One estimate puts the membership of the PFLP at about 1,000 activists with another 2,000 or 3,000 supporters. Al Fatah's strength has been variously estimated at between 8,000 and 15,000 armed guerrillas but it has political support from the majority of militant Palestinian nationalists.

Risk Own Lives

What draws a girl like Leila Khaled into the Popular Front? What moves her to risk her own life and threaten that of hundreds of others? She is no doubt inspired by the same national devotion to an ideal and by the fire of righteous indignation that has moved political terrorists throughout history, including the young men and women of the Jewish terrorist organisations, such as the Irgun Zvai Leumi and Stern Group, who fought against the British and the Arabs to establish the State of Israel.

This feeling of intense emotional and intellectual conviction quite commonly goes together with an apparent calmness and ruthlessness in action. But Leila Khaled is also typical in several ways of the Palestine Revolution in particular.

Well-Educated

She is young and well-educated, a 24-year-old school teacher who studied at the American University in Beirut and then worked in Kuwait, the rich oil sheikdom where many Palestinian exiles found jobs and one of the places where the foundations of the new Palestinian national movement were laid.

Educated young people among the Palestine exiles, as often from middle class families as from the poorer refugees in the camps, are prominent in the guerrilla movement — the Palestinians claim to be the best educated among the Middle East Arabs with some 60,000 university graduates out of a population of 2,500,000.

As a woman guerrilla she is also typical of one of the most striking aspects of the Palestine revolution, the newly active role of women in a society in which traditionally they have been secluded from public life. Now women can be seen in the ranks of commandos and of the armed militia that guard buildings and refugee camps behind the lines in Jordan.

But what does "Palestine" mean for someone like Leila Khaled? It means just what "England" would mean for an Englishwoman if her family had been driven out together with millions of others by an immigrant people who had taken over and established their own state in two-thirds of the country and had then in a victorious war occupied the remaining third, while the dispossessed were scattered round in Scotland, Wales and Ireland, kept by force of arms from returning to their former homes.

Unheeding World

If it appeared that this were made possible by financial and military support coming from other countries, such as the United States, to the dispossessors, then it would not be surprising if the dispossessed regarded the people of these countries as partly responsible for their plight.

No doubt Leila Khaled would seek to justify her part in the hijacking by claiming that only by such desperate means can the Palestinians bring home to an unheeding world that they are victims whose voice is once more in danger of being disregarded because it is inconvenient for other people to seek a serious remedy for their complaint.

Other Palestinian nationalists, while sharing Leila Khaled's feelings, would consider her actions as irresponsible and damaging to their cause at a time when the Palestinians are trying to persuade world opinion to take them seriously as a mature national community capable of running their own affairs in a civilized way if given the chance to do so.

Blown Up in Air

Three other small guerrilla groups have been previously involved in aircraft incidents. The PFLP (General Command) which broke away from the Popular Front about 18 months ago under the leadership of Major Ahmed Jibreel, a former officer of the Syrian army, is believed to have been responsible for the sabotage of the Swiss Coronado aircraft blown up in the air last February. The attack at Athens airport which led to jail sentences for three attackers was the work of the Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine, while the attack on the Munich airport was carried out by another splinter group, the Palestine Popular Struggle Front.

Equal Rights

Apart from Al Fatah, the other two most important guerrilla groups are the Saiqa, military arm of the Syrian Baathist (pan-Arab Socialist) party, and the Palestine Democratic Front, led by a Palestinian Christian Arab, Naif Hawatmeh, which is another left-wing breakaway from the Popular Front.

What is the relation of the Popular Front with the Fatah and with Arab governments? The Popular Front and the Fatah sometimes co-operate militarily in the field but not politically. Although the main purpose of the Popular Front is the same as that of the Fatah, the "liberation of Palestine" which means for them the replacement of the present states of Israel and Jordan (or part of it) by a United Palestinian state in which Muslims, Christians and Jews have equal rights—it differs from the Fatah in its origins, tactics, ideology and to some extent its aims.

The Fatah began as a small nucleus of revolutionary guerrillas, some of them former Muslim Brothers and Baathists, who believed that Egypt and other Arab governments were doing nothing to help the Palestinians, and who began guerrilla operations against Israel in 1965, two years before the Six-Day War.

After the war and the Israeli occupation of what was left of Palestine in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of Jordan, Al Fatah began to draw many more recruits from the mainstream of the Palestinian and Arab nationalist movement.

The Popular Front, which emerged in its present form after the 1967 war, had its origins in the Arab Nationalist Movement, a pan-Arab anti-imperialist movement, once considered of rather right-wing complexion, which used to co-operate closely with the sympathizers of President Nasser against the Baathists and Communists. The ANM believed that unity between the Arab countries must be the first aim as the necessary condition for the liberation of Palestine and for social change.

Socially Backward

But it swung towards the Left and began to call for a revolutionary movement throughout the Arab countries. Its first big success was through its offshoot, the National Liberation Front in South Arabia, which conducted terrorism and guerrilla war to drive the British out of Aden, overthrow the local sultans and set up the Republic of South Yemen, breaking with Nasser in the process.

The idea of a link between nationalism, both Palestinian and pan-Arab, and social revolution and the sense of being part of a worldwide anti-imperialist struggle is common to all the guerrilla groups.

They all believe that the Arabs were defeated because they were technically and socially backward and because Israel was supported and used by more powerful forces in the Western world, chiefly the international Zionist movement and the United States, so that the Palestine struggle can only be won if the Arabs have a social revolution and also break the links between the Jews of Israel and Western "imperialism" and Zionism.

Dynamo of Change

Conversely, they see the "Palestine Revolution" with its emphasis on self-reliance, greater education, greater freedom for women and a non-racialist, non-sectarian attitude towards Jews, as the dynamo of revolutionary change throughout the Arab world.

But in approaching this double aim of Palestinian and Arab liberation, political and social, the Fatah and left-wing groups like the Popular Front have different tactics and priorities.

The Fatah puts the Palestine struggle first and subordinates all other ideological issues to it. It embodies a broad spectrum of ideologies. If it has one common factor it is both anti-imperialist and anti-Communist. Fatah is not concerned to destroy or undermine Arab governments in order to spread revolution.

Cause a Break

It sees the revolutionary role of the Palestinians as that of pace-makers but accepts co-operation with existing Arab governments, including that of King Hussein of Jordan, provided they do not impede or attack the guerrillas. It seeks to bring about a break between Israel and its Western supporters, chiefly by persuading Western opinion and by military and propaganda pressure on the Israeli society to change from within.

The Fatah also believes in concentrating guerrilla operations against Israel, primarily against the Israeli army and material installations, rather than indiscriminate terrorism against civilians.

It has denounced hijacking and other forms of terrorism outside Israel and the occupied territories. Most of the Fatah leaders are Western-educated and see their future as linked with the Western world though they are ready to accept help from Communist countries.

The Popular Front, on the other hand, regards the spread of revolution through the Arab world as an integral part of the Palestine revolution and both movements as part of a worldwide revolutionary struggle of a Third World Marxist-Leninist type of which "Western Imperialism" is the general enemy.

It is ready to attack targets in Western countries which are seen as supporters of or sympathisers with Israel. It writes off Western public opinion as irrevocably hostile to the Arabs and sympathetic to Israel. It devotes more attention to political organisation in the Arab countries, especially among Palestinians in the refugee camps and in the occupied territories, than to military operations against Israel.

Attract Recruits

By the spectacular nature of its actions it seeks to win leadership away from the Fatah, and attract recruits impressed by its daring, its defiance of the Western Powers and its independence from Arab governments.

The Popular Front's leader is a Palestinian, Dr. George Habash, of Christian origin and now a Marxist. He is 44 years of age and, like many others in the Palestine and guerrilla leadership, a graduate of the American University in Beirut. He is a calm, strong-faced man, who lived for many years underground, hunted by Arab governments, especially that of Jordan.

Provoke Showdown

His critics in the Fatah and other guerrilla groups regard him as irresponsible and an opportunist. Hitherto he has had support from the Baathist regime in Iraq, but the Baghdad government which at first praised the latest hijacking later called on the Popular Front to release the hostages.

Both the Popular Front and Fatah are opposed to the American peace plan for talks between Egypt, Jordan and Israel which was accepted by President Nasser and King Hussein. But whereas the Fatah appeared anxious to wait and see how the peace talks progressed before risking an open break with Egypt and the Jordan government, the Popular Front seemed to be ready to provoke a showdown now with Hussein and force a revolutionary situation in Jordan.

A Time for Humility

By RUSSELL BAKER

LONDON — The average man has it in him to feel truly inadequate perhaps once every five years. And a terrible feeling it is, particularly since it almost invariably comes on at a moment already darkened by fatigue and depression.

Perhaps he has been tramping for days through the lovely London churches of Christopher Wren and has passed well down the nave of Wren's magnificent Cathedral of St. Paul's when he is seized by a sudden and agonizing attack of cathedral shins.

Sinking into a bench and gazing up past those beautifully proportioned doors, up beyond those glorious arches, up, up and into the vast airiness of that lofting dome, a man whose feet are truly killing him and who is faint with the confusion of so many recently glimpsed altars — this man might just possibly find the hard bite of truth within himself.

★ ★ ★

"I could never possibly have designed this cathedral," he may say to himself. His wife will almost surely have moved on to study Lord Nelson surrounded by those asinine lions; turning back to discover what the trouble is, she will be unprepared for this rare moment of humility. "What? What are you mumbling about?"

"I have just realized that I could never possibly have designed this cathedral. If I spent my whole lifetime on it, I could never have drawn the first line on paper. Yet Wren — Wren must have tossed off churches between breakfast and lunch."

She will have moved away to inspect Cornwallis in marble. Cornwallis and Nelson and those lions are not by Wren, you may be sure. Anybody could have sculpted that Cornwallis and Nelson and the lions. "I could have sculpted them better," our subject will doubtless think. "But this cathedral I could not have done."

Has he almost invariably before now believed himself a match for genius? Very likely. He does not see what was so remarkable about Shakespeare.

Anyone with the luck to have been born in Stratford and to have lived in Elizabethan London could, with a little effort, have written those plays. What, after all, is so excellent about writing, "To be or not to be?" Besides, there are many absurdities and plot inconsistencies in King Lear.

But this great cathedral is a weight to crush the strongest ego. Suppose, for example, that one day the Bishop of London, or whoever is in charge of the church building program, should call him in and order him to build a new cathedral.

There he would be in the papers next morning, smiling into flashbulbs under headlines stating that he had beaten Christopher Wren out of the contract. Now what? What is the first thing a man does when he sets out to build a cathedral? Should he do freehand drawings of some arches? Or think about doing something unprecedented with the tired old flying buttresses?

ST. PAUL'S

It would probably be best to feel his way along cautiously, perhaps spending the first year or so buying a great deal of blue paper and white ink. (Do they really use white ink on blueprints, and if so, why?) Should no ideas occur in the meantime, the blue paper could always be scrapped and press notices issued to the effect that cathedral would be designed on revolutionary, new green paper with red ink.

Sooner or later, however, it would be necessary to take action. When this moment threatened, the wise course would probably be a trip to Italy. There are a lot of ideas to be had about cathedrals for the traveler who keeps his eyes open in Italy.

★ ★ ★

After two or three years of observation, of course, the bishop would probably want to see some construction. He might be mollified by being invited to lay a cornerstone. Once the cornerstone was down, the whole design might flow naturally out of that one rock.

"What's that about a rock?" The wife returned, no doubt from viewing Wellington's funeral coach in the crypt. "You were talking to yourself about a rock."

"I couldn't have been, as I never talk to myself. I have been sitting here conceding a few points to Christopher Wren. And you?"

"In the crypt. Seeing the Duke of Wellington's funeral coach. You should have seen it."

"Wellington? That bumbler? A good general, you know, would never have come as close as Wellington did to losing at Waterloo. It has always seemed obvious, for instance, that Napoleon. . . ."

Chieftain

Chieftain Development Co. Ltd. will continue its Alberta foothills exploration program, which includes current drilling of four deep test wells. New acreage also has been acquired.

The company reports its first half produced results of $2.5 million in net income, up from $276,000 in the period last year, and including special credits. Before special items net income was $192,000, against $179,000.

Chieftain also received cash and special credits in connection with petroleum and natural gas rights that are not counted with gross or net income.

Int. Land

International Land Corp. Ltd., a West Vancouver-based residential and commercial development company, reports a 65 per cent rise in net profits for the year ended May 31.

Profit rose to $209,550 or 46.4 cents a share from $126,487 (38.3 cents) the preceding year.

Gilbert G. Bradner, president and managing director, predicted International will show at least a 50 per cent profit increase in the next fiscal year.

Gross income rose to $926,239 from $590,483 in 1969, more than 60 per cent.

Dolly Varden

A copper belt more than two miles long and 2,000 feet wide and showing good values is reported in the Kitsault River area of Alice Arm by Dolly Varden Mines Ltd.

The exploration work which outlined anomalies of copper also shows molybdenum deposits and in other areas more copper and molybdenum than was previously thought to exist there.

Nine outcrops were sampled for gold, silver and copper, and the Red Point extension, not previously known, disclosed a vein structurally different from all the other silver veins.

Maple Leaf

Highly competitive conditions in the export and domestic flour markets are responsible for nearly a 100 per cent drop in profits in the first half, reports Maple Leaf Mills Ltd.

Per share earnings fell 92 per cent from 96 cents to 50 cents, or $851,000 from $1.5 million, before extraordinary income. Sales rose from $97,9 million to $98 million.

Second half earnings are expected to be higher than in the same period last year.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Recording Depreciation

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By EDGAR DOWNEY, CA

In the balance sheet of a business the current assets and liabilities are stated at their current value. For example, accounts receivable are shown with an appropriate allowance for doubtful collection to reveal the current collectible value; and inventories are shown at the lower of cost or net realizable value so as to exclude any unrealized profit or price increase, and to ensure that a provision is deducted for obsolete, unsaleable stock.

Long term assets such as land, buildings, and equipment are normally stated at original cost regardless of current value. Such fixed assets are not intended to be sold in the ordinary trading of the next business cycle, therefore the current value is not of immediate concern.

REGULAR BASIS

Fixed assets, other than land, are subject to depreciation. Eventually, even the most stable asset will wear out or suffer from technical obsolescence so that it has little value except for its scrap materials. Therefore, the accepted accounting treatment is to record this depreciation on a regular basis and to show the cumulative figure as a deduction from the cost of the depreciable assets.

This net value after depreciation does not necessarily represent the fair market price of the residual value left in the asset. Sometimes, particularly with buildings, this remaining portion of the original cost is so far at variance from market value that it seriously distorts the balance sheet and leads the reader to incorrect judgments. Then it may be reasonable to re-state the values of all fixed assets at appraised value.

However, when as appraisal is recorded it is essential to reveal the fact and particularly to show the date of the appraisals. The increase in value must then be shown as a separate figure in the owner's equity section of the balance sheet so that the two sides continue to balance.

It is seldom practical to appraise all fixed assets each year and the usual procedure is to show subsequent purchases of fixed assets at cost and to go on recording depreciation upon a regular rate based upon the appraised value and upon the subsequent additions at cost.

The depreciation recorded each year is charged as an expense against the earnings for the year because the business, in effect, used up a portion of the original cost of the assets in the course of the operations.

SAME CONTROVERSY

There is some controversy regarding where the expense for depreciation upon appraised values should be charged. It is not really any portion of actual cost so it is generally deducted from the separate extra value which was added to the owner's equity section when the appraisal was set up and not charged against the earnings for the year. However, this leads into most involved technical arguments in which chartered accountants tend to fall into the same traps as economists who can show conclusive proof for one viewpoint at the same time that the opposite view can be equally proved.

Generally, accounting deals with facts and values shown upon the basis of historical cost. Therein lies the not yet answered problem. We take the current values of assests such as cash in a bank account and merchandise inventories and add them together with the historical cost of an asset such as land which was purchased forty years ago for $10,000 and has a current value of $100,000. There are many wonderful theoretical schemes to overcome this paradox but they all seem to produce more difficulties than the present illogical arrangement and most accountants prefer to live with the devil they know than to seek new gods who may lead into more complex temptations.

New Bonds Will Yield Lower Rate

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Savings Bonds to go on sale next month will yield an annual average gain of 7¾ per cent if held to maturity in 11 years, the finance department announced Wednesday.

The 26th annual savings-bond borrowing thus will offer a lower rate of return than last year's record yield of eight per cent over nine years.

The change reflects a recent decline in interest rates generally, just as last year's record rate matched prevailing peak interest rates on other forms of lending.

When a compound-interest bonus feature is added to the calculation, the new bonds will pay slightly more than the 1969 bonds if the holder saves up his annual interest coupons for the longer life of the bond instead of cashing them each year.

The new savings-bond issue, to be dated Nov. 1 and from Oct. 5 to Nov. 13, will retain past features, including compound interest.

They may be cashed at any time for the face value plus accrued interest, will be available in denominations from $50 to $25,000 and may be purchased for cash or through payroll deductions.

Only Canadian residents may buy them and there will be a maximum of $25,000 to a customer.

A $100 bond of the new series will pay interest of $6.75 in the first year, $7.75 in each of the following three years and $8 in each of the last seven years to maturity Nov. 1, 1981. That works out at an average annual yield of 7.81 per cent.

SHARP BACKS OTHER MEANS

Hijacker Tribunal Rejected by Canada

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A move has started to bring aerial hijacking before the 25th anniversary meeting of the United Nations General Assembly, which opened Tuesday.

Foreign Minister Carlos Romulos of the Philippines said in an interview that he will seek to have Secretary-General U Thant's suggestion of an international tribunal before which hijackers could be prosecuted put on the agenda of the 126-country assembly.

While Romulo was making his statement to The Associated Press, Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp was virtually rejecting the secretary-general's suggestion in a chat with Canadian reporters.

Sharp said that he believes the most reasonable approach to the question of hijacking is through bilateral means.

He said Canada will continue to pursue a Canadian initiative along that line at an emergency meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization general council that opens in Montreal Friday.

Sharp was here for the opening of the General Assembly, which next month is expected to bring the greatest collection of heads of state and government in history to attend sessions commemorating the coming into effect of the UN charter 25 years ago.

THEY THINK OF IT

It has been obvious that the Middle East situation, particularly the hijacking of four airliners by Palestine Arab guerrillas last week, has been high in the minds of many delegations.

But there was no reported move until Tuesday to inscribe an item on the agenda.

Thant set delegates buzzing when he suggested before a meeting of the UN Association of the U.S. Monday night that hijackers should be prosecuted before an agreed international tribunal.

A UN spokesman said that Thant will pursue his idea in talks with representatives of various countries during the assembly. Romulo said that he thinks there is a hope of having the suggestion inscribed on the agenda.

Sharp said that essentially the best way to deal with hijacking is bilaterally.

"It is not sufficient to handle the question by resolution or international tribunal," he said. However, he said he will study Thant's idea.

CANADA WILL PRESS

Canada will continue to press before the ICAO an initiative it started earlier this year. This would have ICAO make a declaration on hijacking, linking it with bilateral agreements that countries work out with each other to provide landing rights for their respective airlines.

Under the Canadian plan, if a country refused to deal effectively with a hijacker these bilateral agreements would be cancelled.

Canada believes this would be an effective way to bring about a boycott of a country that does not prosecute or permit extradition of hijackers.

The ICAO meeting was requested by President Nixon of the United States, who seeks a boycott of airports of countries harboring or giving refuge to hijackers or refusing to prosecute or extradite them.

The assembly's 25-member general committee starts work today on approving the agenda for the three-month assembly. The provisional agenda has 108 items, few of them new. One is a Canadian idea that a committee of 15 be established to modernize the workings of the UN.

But it is doubtful that hijacking can be inserted this early. If there is sufficient support, it will be inserted through a special resolution of the General Assembly.

When It's a Sticky Problem 'Get Madsen'

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — One of the first orders issued by Operation Whale headquarters here following the Sept. 7 sinking of an oil-laden barge consisted of two words:

"Get Madsen."

A similar call had gone out from Port Hawkesbury, N.S., on a grey morning last February when the stern section of the broken oil tanker Arrow slipped off the rock on which it had grounded and plunged into 100 feet of water.

It had been a discouraging development for the men wrestling with the problem of minimizing oil pollution from the Arrow.

A Canadian environmental officer recalls that "we called Esso International in New York and we said, 'look, this is what has happened. We've run out of ideas. Can you help?' "

Esso said they would "send Madsen"—and 24 hours later everyone at Port Hawkesbury was feeling better.

Captain Sven Madsen, 52-year-old Danish-born master mariner with 25 years experience with oil tankers, is playing a key role in the effort to stop the flow of oil from the 2,300-ton barge Irving Whale, which went to the bottom 35 miles northeast of North Cape, P.E.I., and within 65 miles of the island's famous north shore beaches.

Part of the Whale's 1.1 million-gallon cargo of bunker C fuel oil has escaped through a series of open air vents on the barge's deck.

Captain Madsen was the first man to see the Whale after it sank, reaching it in a tiny fisheries research board submarine in 240 feet of 30-degree water in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

He came to the surface with an encouraging report: The escape rate was slowing down because the oil was thickening in the cold water, and the four-year old Whale appeared to be in a sound structural state.

Canadian East Coast shipping men have a lot of confidence in Captain Madsen, earned during the frantic days following the Feb. 11 sinking of the Arrow's oil-laden stern in Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay.

He arrived the day after the sinking and that night he outlined on a blackboard a method of removing oil from sunken tankers by heating it with steam and pumping it into receiving barges.

Captain Madsen is convinced the Whale can be raised from the sandy bottom but has recommended that this be delayed until next spring because of the risk of storms at this time of the year.

Captain Madsen attended a merchant marine academy in Denmark and served on coast guard ships before joining Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey in 1946. He started as deckhand aboard tankers and rose through the ranks to third mate, second mate and chief mate.

In 1950 he was named captain and in 1956 he became the company's port captain and senior marine adviser, living in Rumson, N.J.

Buck Again Tops In City Dog Show

In the show catalogues he's listed as champion Grousemoor Linton Magnate. Those who know him better just call him Buck.

Buck is a black and white Pointer owned by Mr. and Mr. William Brennan of 3225 Albion. Tuesday he was judged best dog at the last of five championship shows presented by two local clubs since Friday.

It was the second best in show for him in the series and the seventh in his career. He was a contender for the top spot all five days, sweeping the sporting dog group each day.

The Brennans imported Buck from Yorkshire, England, almost three years ago. Since then he has won the sporting dog group at 35 shows and added about 20 more lesser group placings.

Last year he ranked 10th among the thousands of pure-bred dogs in about 130 recognized breeds that were shown across Canada.

Judging the third and final show of the Shoreline Kennel Club Tuesday were Mrs. Alva McColl of Scarborough, Ont., Vic Williams of Vancouver and Virginia Lyne of Victoria.

Judged best Canadian bred in show was a Cairn Terrier, Ch. Posh of Melita, owned by Mrs. L. M. Wood of Victoria.

Best Canadian-bred puppy was a Chihuahua, Wisherwoods Wee Jock, owned by Jean Westwood of West Vancouver.

GROUP WINNERS

Group winners:

Sporting dogs: the show winner.

Sporting hounds: an Afghan, Can., Am. Ch. Rujha Mohammed of Kyber-Khann, owned by William Green of Milner, B.C., and Jay Ruiz of Willmington, Calif.

Working dogs: an Old English Sheepdog, Can., Am. Ch. Rivermist Feather Merchent, owned by Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Carter of Okotoks, Alta.

Terriers: the Cairn Terrier judged best Canadian-bred.

Toys: a Yorkshire Terrier, Can., Am. Ch. Starfire Mitey Model, owned by Margery May of Los Angeles, Calif.

Non-sporting: a Chow Chow, Can., Am. Ch. A Wong Chee, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Reg Day of Lazo, B.C.

Luggage Searched

MONTREAL (CP)—Air Canada has started searching the hand luggage of passengers on overseas flights as a precaution against hijackings.

"It just means that you have to open your briefcase or overnight bag or whatever," an airline spokesman said Wednesday. Checked baggage is not being searched.

The spokesman said the new procedure "doesn't seem to delay things at all."

"People seem to show up early for overseas flights anyway, and it only takes five or 10 seconds per passenger."

Air Canada had no immediate plans to start searching hand baggage on domestic flights, but the spokesman said "we would if we felt it necessary."

Sometimes we get the feeling we're being followed.

Everybody's getting into the act.

Everybody's making a small car.

And since we've made more of them than anyone else, we thought we'd pass along some things we've learned about the business over the years:

First off, there's no doubt about it, the only way to make an economy car is expensively.

So Rule No. 1, don't scrimp.

Get yourself the best possible engineers in the business and then hire 9,000 or so top inspectors to keep them on their toes.

Next, try to develop an engine that doesn't rev itself to death. And if you can get it to run on air instead of water, even more fantastic.

Work on things to make your car last longer.

Like giving it 45 pounds of paint to protect its top and a full-length steel bottom to protect its bottom.

Important: Make sure you can service any year car you make. There's nothing worse than having someone find out that a part they need to make their car go is no longer on hand or on tap.

Finally, spend less time worrying about what your new car looks like and more time worrying about how it works.

Perfecting a good economy car is a time-consuming business.

So far it has consumed 25 years of our time.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Rain was fairly general along the coast and in the western interior of B.C. early this morning while other areas of the province were cloudy. Southeast gales were reported along the west coast of Vancouver Island where Spring Island had winds up to 45 miles per hour with higher gusts.

Occasional rain will spread across the eastern interior this afternoon in advance of an active Pacific disturbance. Rain in coastal districts will become showery this afternoon or this evening with the passage of this system. Partial clearing will occur along the inner south coast on Friday but showers will persist over the outer coast. Intermittent rain in the central interior will end this evening. However, inland districts will have a few afternoon showers on Friday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

When you feel inclined to open the windows in your house so that the so-called fresh air can blow through the room, heed the advice of the old Wyoming cowboy who lives down the road from me.

"I never open the windows in dry weather," old Jeff said. "When I was foreman on the Flying U Bar I always slept with the windows closed, because blowing air stirs up dust something fierce and a lot of germs must get stirred up with it."

Jeff is a member of the old school that thinks too much fresh air is bad for you, if it makes you sneeze with the dust and stuff it blows around. He said there is enough fresh air coming in cracks and in opening and closing of doors to take car of normal needs. Some doctors say he's right. He certainly has lived long enough to serve as a prime exhibit of how healthy you can be without an oversupply of fresh air. He's past 80 and saddles and rides his string of seven horses every day.

Police Court

A 35-year-old man who assaulted his 48-year-old companion Tuesday night was fined $100 in provincial court Wednesday.

Donald Victor Robinson, of 830 Seymour, appeared before Judge William Ostler.

Court was told he seized his companion, threw him against a wall, then threw him to the ground and began kicking him.

The assaulted man told police he did not know what had prompted the sudden outburst.

Ostler commented that Robinson was lucky he was not facing a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The case of John Francis Knox and Arthur John Alfred, 20 and 21 respectively, both of 1063 Foul Bay, was remanded to Oct. 22 for trial because the defence lawyer was involved with a conflicting higher court trial.

The two are charged with extortion.

Nicholas Andruff, of Chemainus, was fined $300 on a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

He was charged Aug. 18 following an accident at Brock Avenue and the Trans Canada Highway in which he knocked over a stop sign. His breathalyzer reading was .22 per cent.

★ ★ ★

A 32-year-old woman was fined a total of $260 for three driving offences Tuesday in provincial traffic court.

Mrs. Betty Twin, of 459 Superior, was charged with driving with a blood-alcohol level of more than .08 per cent, careless driving, and driving without a licence.

She was in collision with a hydro pole opposite her residence and a large shrub on the boulevard near 310 Oswego in two separate accidents Aug. 28.

Tupamaros Set New Ransom

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Tupamaro guerrillas sent an anti-government manifesto to news media today and demanded its immediate publication as ransom for United States soil expert Claude L. Fly, kidnapped in early August.

Fly, 65, is reported to have become ill and the urban guerrilla organization is said to be unable to care for him.

Fly was kidnapped while serving as an adviser to the ministry of agriculture here.

The guerrilla communication made no mention of Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, a Brazilian consul, who also was kidnapped.

Riders Try White

OTTAWA (CP) — Freeman White, a 6-5, 230-pound tight end who has played the last five years for the New York Giants of the National Football League, will be given a five-day trial with the Ottawa Rough Riders.

NORTH COWICHAN – DUNCAN

Amalgamation Council Topic

DUNCAN —Duncan council on Monday will discuss a notice of motion on amalgamation of Duncan and North Cowichan.

Ald. Dick Benzies prepared a motion reading: "Do you approve of the councils of Duncan and North Cowichan obtaining all the information necessary to place a referendum before the electorate in December, 1971, on amalgamation of the two corporations?"

There should not be such a motion without consultation with North Cowichan, said Mayor Jim Quaife, who will ask for the motion to be tabled for further study.

STUDY BEING DONE

Ald. Martin Lukaitis, who is against the motion, pointed out that a feasibility study under the auspices of the two corporations, is being done. He was advised the study would be completed by the end of September.

Ald. Rois Harder and Ald. Jim Saunders both agreed that a vote should be held to find out what the people think about the proposal.

Les Atchison, president of Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, said chamber members will be voting Wednesday to ascertain whether they would approach the municipalities requesting a plebiscite to be held regarding amalgamation.

Atchison had introduced the proposal after receiving direction on the topic from Dan Campbell, minister of municipal affairs, at a recent chamber dinner meeting here.

Hunters Warned About Power Lines

British Columbia Telephone Co. Wednesday appealed to hunters not to damage telephone installations.

G. F. MacFarlane, operations vice-president, said one Vancouver Island area already has had service interrupted.

He said a hunter shot at a bird perched on a phone cable and hit the line which provides long distance circuits from nearly 600 phones through the Lake Cowichan and Duncan offices.

FALLER KILLED BY SNAG

GOLD RIVER — A 40-year-old logger was killed early Wednesday morning while working on Larch Mountain in the Nimpkish Valley northwest of Gold River.

RCMP are withholding the man's name until his next of kin are notified.

An inquest will be held at noon Saturday at Campbell River.

The logger was felling a large hemlock at the Canadian Forest Products Ltd. operation when he was hit by a snag. He was found by fellow workers and pronounced dead on arrival at Alert Bay Hospital.

Switch Blamed

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A coroner's jury said a July 28 train crash, which killed two Canadian Pacific Railway employees, was caused by an open switch. Engineer Gilbert Cook, 52, and trainman Jerry A. Braat, 26, both of Lethbridge, died when the train veered off the mainline into a siding and hit a line of 40 boxcars.

"DISCRIMINATION"

Pre-Schoolers Left in Lurch

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley Regional District pre-schoolers will only receive the rubella vaccine if there is any left over from the school vaccination program.

In a recent letter from director of Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, Dr. P. J. Reynolds, Duncan was informed that "of the three regional districts in the health unit, Nanaimo and Alberni-Clayoquot have agreed to make grants available for the purchase of vaccine for the pre-school children. The regional district of the Cowichan Valley has not agreed to make a grant."

Reynolds said the children will only receive the vaccine if any is left over from the program or if further vaccine is made available through government money or donations.

Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife has charged that Cowichan Valley Regional District pre-schoolers are facing discrimination in the provincial rubella vaccination program.

"When people of this province are made to rely on donations and grants for vaccination of school children, then something is drastically wrong," he said.

"It would appear that the efforts of the provincial government to cut back on many of their programs, shirking their obligations and responsibilities, certainly leave much to be desired."

Quaife said it is "high time the minister of health was replaced" if the policy of the department of health is such that the children in the district are being denied vaccination because the regional district board does not agree with the principles and financing of the vaccination program.

He will ask council for direction at the next meeting Monday.

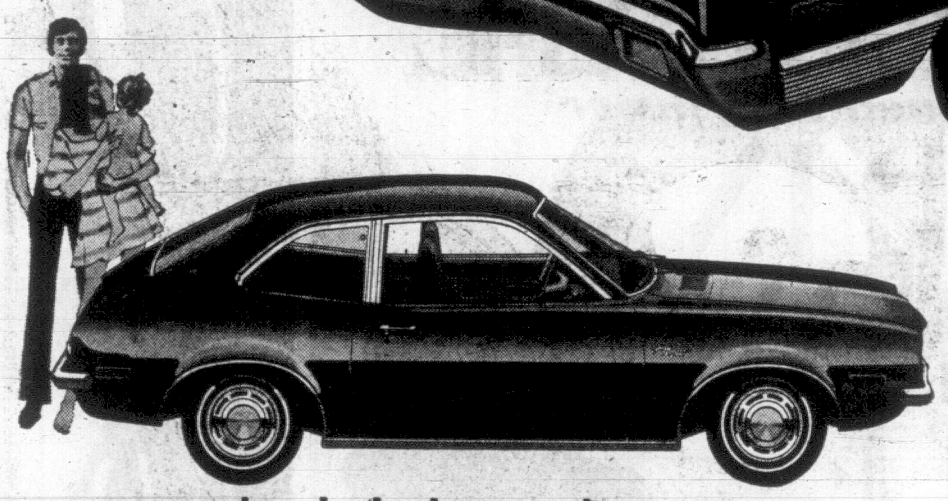
Take your pick. Pinto. Maverick. Mustang. Torino. Ford. Thunderbird. See all the better idea '71 cars now. At your Ford Dealer's.

LTD BROUGHAM

'71 FORD: Take a quiet break

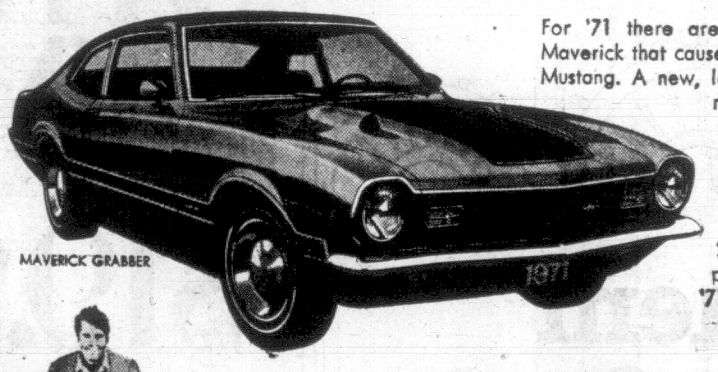
Outside it's getting noisier. Inside an all-new Ford it's a quiet world born of strength and luxury. 17 models to choose from – from the very economical Custom to the super-luxurious LTD Brougham. And when it comes to wagons – nobody swings like Ford. With 3 way Magic Doorgate, and big 351 V8 as standard features. This year come to where the strength is, the luxury is, the value is, and the quiet is. The 1971 Ford.



PINTO: The little long distance car

Meet Ford's brand new Pinto. The little car with a little price and a lot to say. Goes a long distance between gas-stops (the tough 75 hp engine averages 30 miles per gallon). Easy to service. Handles delightfully around town – slips easily into mini parking space – and long distance driving is pure pleasure. For a car of Pinto's size, the interior room is remarkable. And comfortable. Just about everything you need is standard equipment at no extra cost. The options are sensible. Put a little kick in your life. See the little long distance car. Ford Pinto.

'71 MAVERICK: 3 ways to make life beautifully simple



MAVERICK GRABBER

For '71 there are three Mavericks. The original 2-door Maverick that caused the biggest stir on the car scene since Mustang. A new, longer 4-door Maverick that gives more room for back seat drivers. And Maverick Grabber, putting colourful sports pizzaz in driving economy. All three are very low-priced, economical to operate, simple to drive and maintain. A penny-pinching 170 cu. in. Six is standard. 200 and 250 cu. in. Sixes are available for extra power. Make your life beautifully simple in '71. Go get a Maverick.

TORINO 500

'71 MUSTANG: Sets the pace

This is the year of the most extensive styling changes since Mustang was first introduced. Long-nosed, lean and low. With a wider road-gripping stance. With 3 exciting new shapes. With 6 all-new models – Sportsroof – Mach I – the totally new Boss 351 – Luxurious Grandé – Convertible – and Mustang Hardtop that combines the sheer fun of driving with a low price tag. Here's proof that in '71, more than ever, Mustang is Number One. The best-selling sports car of all times.

MUSTANG MACH I

'71 TORINO: The Ford that gives you better ideas...for less

Give all the benefits of big-car features, style, ride, room and comfort – yet keep the price low. That's the whole idea behind the '71 Torino. 14 sleek mid-sized models, with a new low-priced 4-door sedan that makes Torino even easier to own. The '71 Torino is durable. The right size – with comfortable room for six. The handling is nimble. The ride smooth. A full choice of Six and V8 engines. A tempting range of options you'd expect only in big cars. Torino is the car with Better Ideas for less. You'll agree.

Ford gives you better ideas...it's a fact

Pulp Union Heads Blamed For Failure

By BOB MITCHELL
An Analysis

The more than 4,000 members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada have spent the last seven weeks in a futile strike.

Leaders of the breakaway Canadian union must bear a major share of the blame for strike stategy that appears to have backfired.

The real losers are the union's rank-and-file members who have been without pay since July 24, and some of whom have been forced to pick up food vouchers from welfare offices.

When they return to work — some idle mills could resume operations shortly — they will have nothing to show for their two-month strike.

Meanwhile, possibly to save face, PPWC leaders are hoping to re-open negotiations with company negotiators to get a better deal for their members than a settlement accepted last week by two rival international unions.

★ ★ ★

When the Canadian union shut down eight mills in July, strikers expected to be joined shortly by members of the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Papermakers and Paperworkers.

But it never happened.

And last week the international unions accepted a new three-year settlement that will give workers an average increase of $1.25 an hour.

The Canadian union rejected the offer, which would have given its members a 22.5 per cent raise.

This week Don Lanskail, chief negotiator for the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, which represents the companies, said the bureau can't give unequal treatment to employees in different unions.

He said at Crofton and Prince George members of the United Papermakers and Paperworkers work under the same roof as PPWC members. Lanskail turned down PPWC president Fred Mullin's request for further negotiations.

Cracks are beginning to show in the Canadian union's solidarity.

The union announced Monday its members had rejected the three-year contract by a 66.9 per cent vote.

But local 9 at Prince George later revealed it voted 51 per cent in favor of the contract. Company and union officials met to discuss a possible return to work, but no decision was announced.

★ ★ ★

On Tuesday Bill Mewhort, vice-president of local 11 at Gold River, announced the union would resume negotiations with the Tahsis Co. to discuss local issues.

"We are going in the hope that we can negotiate a resumption of operations at our plant," Mewhort said.

At the International Woodworkers of America convention Tuesday a Quebec trade unionist predicted the PPWC would eventually dissolve because it does not have the support of an international organization.

Jean Beaudry, vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the labor movement should consider formation of multi-national unions to deal with international business conglomerates.

He said the CLC wants to ensure that international unions give Canadian locals a wide degree of autonomy, including the right to ratify contract settlements without approval of American officers.

Of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, he said:

"How can they survive in the long run in bargaining with these huge companies?

Beaudry repeated a charge that when PPWC members voted on last week's contract proposal, their ballots did not refer to the proposal but simply asked them if they supported the stand taken by their negotiating committee.

WAGES LESS AN ISSUE

Newspaper Ranks Expected To Seek Editorial Voice

Higher wages and better working conditions could result in newspaper employees asking for a voice in policy-making and production, a visiting officer of the American Newspaper Guild said here Tuesday.

Robert Crocker, secretary-treasurer of the Guild, which has headquarters in Washington, D.C., said employees in some United States cities have become concerned about the content of the newspaper they work for once they are no longer preoccupied with wages and working conditions.

"Perhaps the fact we have been able to negotiate good contracts has enabled people to take an interest in such matters," Crocker said.

Guild members at one Chicago newspaper are attempting to get a voice in editorial policy. Denver employees would like to be consulted in matters of content.

More modest contract demands include such things as the right of reporters not to have his or her byline used with a story, and the stipulation that a reporter should not have to write something which is not true.

The ANG, which represents 3,400 Canadians and 32,000 Americans, could get a new name next year, Crocker said.

The Victoria Newspaper Guild proposed at the ANG's June convention that the name be changed to International Newspaper Guild because the word "American" is synomous with the United States.

Crocker said the name change is overdue and a committee to include several Canadian members will be appointed to consider a new name.

INTEREST NEEDED

Because the guild represents workers for magazines and radio, it is expected the word "newspaper" will also have to disappear when the new name is decided at the 1971 convention in Boston.

Crocker admitted the guild is not trying to organize the large number of non-union newspapers between Vancouver and Toronton, but he added nothing can happen until workers show some interest in getting organized.

"There was a flurry of interest at Winnipeg earlier this year, but when we sent in a man he found the level of interest wasn't as high as expected."

Discrimination against women within the newspaper industry will be the subject of a two-day convention sponsored by the guild in Chicago Nov. 21 and 22.

Labor Here Backs Ottawa For South African Ban

Victoria Labor Council will support Ottawa's policy on arms sales to South Africa when the B.C. Federation of Labor holds its annual convention next month.

The labor council will sponsor a resolution which asks the convention to urge Ottawa to continue to resist arms sale to the white-supremist Cape Town regime.

The resolution says South African products sold on international markets should be regarded in the same way as "hot" products of a mill or plant which has been struck.

A number of resolutions which originated from the labor council executive were approved at a meeting Wednesday.

'DO-GOODER'

One delegate commented that the South Africa resolution is a "do-gooder" gesture. He said if the labor movement sincerely wants to help the black people of South Africa gain freedom it should support revolutionary groups pledged to overthrow the South African government.

Another resolution called on the federal government to consult fully with the Indians of Canada before embarking on policy changes. It said the government's white paper, which was to bring about dissolution of the Indian affairs branch, has been "decisively rejected by Indian opinion."

TAX EXEMPTION

A related resolution called on the government to strike all references to Indian people from Section 91 of the Canadian Constitution. That section, the resolution said, treated Indians as if they were "things," and is an "intolerable affront to the principle of equality between Indians and non-Indians."

A resolution from the labor council's political education committee called on the federal government to raise the basic tax exemption to bring it in line with the poverty level.

According to the federal white paper on tax reform, the basic exemption is to be raised to $1,400 for a single person and $2,400 for a married person.

However, the Economic Council of Canada recently set the poverty level at an income of $1,800 or less annually for a single person, and $3,500 or less for a married person.

Birds Get Tipsy

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Tipsy birds aren't flighty. So they go to the Dallas zoo to dry out. Larry Calvin, zoo director, says the birds get high on fermented berries. Some get so high they can't even leave the ground. The zoo keeps a couple of cages reserved for tipsy visitors. When sovered up, the birds take to the airways again.

Worse Than War

VIENNA (AP) — Damage cause by the floods in Romania in May and June was greater than that suffered in the Second World War, a Romanian official said. In a recent interview with Austrian reporters in Bucharest, a press official in the Romanian foreign ministry said over-all material flood damage was estimated at $770 million. He said 250 persons were killed.

U.S. FLAGS CALLED INSULT

Some local businesses fly foreign flags in hopes of attracting tourist trade, but the flags are an insult to Canadians, Victoria Labor Council decided Wednesday.

In a 10-6 vote delegates decided to write to Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock to inquire whether the displaying of American flags for the sake of a few dollars is really "correct."

SIHANOUK OVERTHROW SIX MONTHS OLD

Cambodia to Become Republic?

By IAN MacKENZIE

PHNOM PENH (Reuters) — Cambodia has been moving steadily toward becoming a republic since Prince Norodom Sihanouk was overthrown as head of state six months ago.

But Gen. Lon Nol's new government is stuck on timing.

On one hand, the government recognizes it must move slowly to prepare domestic opinion for the switch from Cambodia's traditional monarchy.

On the other hand, Nol's government is busy seeking recognition and support from abroad and is wary of putting legal problems in the way of recognition.

Because of this, it appears unlikely that Cambodia will declare itself a republic until the 1970 session of the United Nations General Assembly—scheduled to open in New York next week—is well under way.

The situation is further complicated because, since he was ousted March 15, Sihanouk has set up a government-in-exile in Peking and is also busy seeking foreign recognition.

SOME BACK PRINCE

The China-oriented countries and North Vietnam have come out in support of Sihanouk's government-in-exile as has Yugoslavia, one of the leaders of the non-aligned nations.

Russia and the East European countries appear to have given the Nol government de facto recognition.

So it is the non-aligned, or "third world" countries that Cambodia is most anxious to woo.

Cambodia's own declared policy is neutral non-alignment and this is exemplified by its refusal to join Asian military or political pacts despite the war within its borders.

For several months, Nol's government has been lobbying for support and recognition among non-aligned nations, primarily in Africa.

Phnom Penh needs all the immediate support it can muster to put its case of Communist Vietnamese aggression before international forums.

IWA Delegates Rap Staff Raise

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western Canada regional executive of the International Woodworkers of America asked for a wage increase Wednesday and got a chilly reception.

What's new about that?

They were asking for more money for themselves and about 15 regional staff members. The ones opposing the raises were delegates representing the union's 42,000 Western Canada members at the annual regional convention here.

"You spoil people by giving them good money," said Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver local.

He said union leaders should be dedicated and "willing to work for nothing."

During the heated debate, there were charges that the IWA is a "chintzy outfit" to oppose more money for its leaders, who negotiate with employers for increases for the members.

One member pointed out that regional president Jack Moore—at $232.40 weekly—gets "a heck of a lot more than us in the rank-and-file. Vice - presidents Jack MacKenzie, Wyman Trineer and Jack Munro get $207.40 a week and secretary-treasurer Fred Fieber gets $217.40.

The executive salaries debate was adjourned for consideration by a committee. It will return to the floor of the convention before the five-day gathering ends Friday.

Fly-Past To Mark Battle

A special service and parade will be held Sunday to mark the 30th anniversary of the Battle of Britain.

The service will be held 3 p.m. at Christ Church Cathedral, followed by a parade to the lawns of the legislative Buildings where wreaths will be laid at the Cenotaph.

During the playing of the Last Post and a two-minute silnce, four Voodoo jets from CFB, Comox, will carry out a fly-past.

Taking part in the parade will be members of the Air Force Officers Association, 800 Wing (Pacific) Royal Canadian Air Force Association, and air cadets from Victoria, Sidney and Duncan.

Music will be by the Naden band.

Fish Meet Postponed

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A proposed meeting between Canadian and Russian government officials on fisheries problems off the West Coast has been postponed a few days at the request of the Soviets.

A federal fisheries department spokesman said here Wednesday the Soviet Union has asked the Ottawa meeting be deferred from Monday to the end of the month.

Vancouver Nudist Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sheila Helen Beaupre, 26, of Vancouver was fined $50 Wednesday after being found guilty of committing an indecent act by being nude on a beach near the University of British Columbia Aug. 11.

Miss Beaupre's lawyer, Don Rosenbloom, said the judgment by Provincial Court Judge M. E. Ferguson will be appealed.

In his pre-judgment argument, Rosenbloom said community standards no longer consider nudity indecent.

Judge Ferguson gave Miss Beaupre until Sept. 30 to pay the fine. She was one of 13 persons charged with being nude on the beach.

Problem Solved

PENNY — Penny's seven students will be attending classes in their own community, 75 miles east of Prince George.

When all attempts at convincing the regional school board of their needs failed, residents hired their own teacher, Laurie Allen, who taught last year at the University of Victoria, moved here with her husband for the winter.

A resident said attendance at other area schools would have meant crossing the river in a boat.

1,700 STUDENTS FACE SPLIT-SHIFT ALTERNATIVE

Portable Classrooms—Home Away From Home

By NEILL GADDES

About 1,700 students in the Greater Victoria school district are instructed daily in portable classrooms.

Without the portables, these students would face the possibility of split-shift classes.

The rise of the portable in the building program — Victoria now has 54 portables — is a result of the provincial government's current freeze on school construction as well as the lesser numbers entering Grade 1 in the Victoria district.

★ ★ ★

The government will approve only what is considered essential classroom space and has banned construction of activity rooms and gymnasiums. It also refuses demolition of old buildings for new ones.

School officials point out that the Victoria school system increased by about 670 students this fall while three years ago about 1,200 were added.

★ ★ ★

The result is a crush of students moving through the system creating a classroom space program. Education department officials say Grade 6 is the current peak year.

And with the space problem possibly being temporary as the wave moves through a school, the portable classroom can be the solution.

"When you outgrow a school by one or two classrooms, instead of jamming classes you can whip in a portable classroom or two," a board spokesman said.

The portable classroom, costing $14,000 to $15,000 a unit, can be jacked up, stuck on a truck and moved to another school site.

The effect: instant classrooms, providing the portable is available and the necessary government approval is forthcoming.

★ ★ ★

The Victoria school district intends using this concept to create an instant school on Rogers Road in Saanich for elementary students next fall.

When the time and financing is right the site will be developed into a permanent school and the portables can be removed but until this occurs the students will have adequate classrooms.

And students can become involved in the actual construction of the portables.

Although the major portion of Victoria's 54 portables are built by private industry, one or two are constructed each year by vocational students.

A disadvantage to the build-up of the portables is that the school district may be "locked-in" to a large investment in additional portables.

But then the existing portables could easily be adapted into permanent school structures if the demand for additional classrooms levels off.

NURSING HOMES MUST TAKE WELFARE PATIENTS

'More Antics by Gov't'

Private Operators Angry, Frustrated

Nursing home operators reacted today with anger and frustration to an announcement by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that they will be forced to accept welfare patients.

Gaglardi said acceptance of welfare patients would become a condition of licencing of private hospitals. He was addressing a seminar on welfare at the annual convention of the B.C. Union of Municipalities at Penticton.

Neil de Macedo, a director of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals, called the announcement "another one of the government's antics."

"It amounts to dictating to private enterprise," de Macedo said, "something that could be expected in some other country, like Russia."

De Macedo, operator of Aberdeen Private Hospital on Hillside, said he was certain all nursing homes would be willing to accept welfare patients if the province would pay the home's normal rate, about $11 a day.

This compares with a per diem patient cost of $58 at public hospitals.

The government now offers $9.25 per day to private hospitals which will accept welfare patients.

Half of Patients on Welfare

"The government could save more than $40 per patient per day for the taxpayers, but they won't," de Macedo said. "They consider us (nursing home operators) money-grabbing opportunists."

Most private hospitals now have as many as half of their patients on welfare.

Some homes won't accept patients already on welfare, but if the patients are forced to join the welfare rolls while they are in the home, "we don't kick them out," said Edna Vinden of Glengarry Private Hospital.

Of 75 patients at Glengarry, 28 now are on welfare.

Jon Parker of Glenwarren Private Hospital said the government action "goes against the concept of private enterprise."

He said firms like his would be forced to close or take court action to protect their livelihoods.

In Vancouver, Lora Shields, an executive of the Association of Private Hospitals, called the Gaglardi plan "simply ridiculous."

"The government wouldn't walk into the Empress Hotel and tell them whom they could accept as guests," Mrs. Shields said.

She noted that other provinces take a "more realistic" view of subsidies for welfare patients. The Ontario rate is $12 per day.

Gaglardi said regulations governing acceptance of welfare patients would be proclaimed by next Thursday.

He also rapped municipal welfare administrators for the "looseness" of their administration in distributing welfare cheques too liberally.

He rejected a suggestion by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock that increased funds for welfare use be raised by increases in gasoline and sales taxes.

Formal Barriers Down For Uvic Adult Education

Catering to the learning interests of Victoria's adult community is no simple task — but that's what the University of Victoria's division of continuing education was set up to do.

This week the division distributed brochures outlining courses for adults that will be offered in the fall and spring terms.

Offerings fall under the headings of business and management, creative arts, languages, liberal arts, professional development, as well as a number of special programs.

NO PREREQUISITES

Larry Devlin, associate director of continuing education, said the division this year will offer more than 30 courses, compared with 16 last year.

Most of the courses do not have prerequisistes, nor are students required to have any particular level of formal education to be admitted.

The lack of barriers is deliberate, said Devlin, because one goal of continuing education is to make the resources of the university accessible to as wide a segment of the community as possible.

"What we are trying to do is satisfy the need of people to learn for the sake of learning, and at the same time provide courses for those who want to increase their professional skills," Devlin said.

The professional development area includes two courses for nurses, one to inform them about recent clinical developments, the other on counselling and communication.

COMPUTER COURSES

For scientists and engineers there is a course on applications of computers and one on numerical techniques.

Students with no knowledge of computers can enroll in a four-part course designed to take them from the basics to a fairly high level of understanding.

For students with no previous knowledge of French there is an intensive course featuring the latest audio-visual method. Sessions will total 120 hours.

A series of eight speakers will discuss the past and future of Canadian defence policy. Speakers include former CBC correspondant James M. Minifie, Prof. Reg Roy of Uvic, and Winnipeg editorialist F. S. Manner.

All the courses, except those scheduled for next spring, will start in the week Sept. 21-25. Cutoff date for registration is Sept. 23.

Sunro Gets Funds

The B.C. subsidiary of a Paris-based international mining organization will spend $500,000 jointly with a marketing agent to restore the former Cowichan Copper mine at Jordan River to production.

The Sunro mine, on the banks of Jordan River near B.C. Hydro's reservoir and generating station, could be back to work by February, 1971, said E. C. Dobell, president of Crownex International Ltd., successor to the Cowichan Copper operation.

Pechiney Development Ltd., owned by Pechiney of Paris, and Aumas Fergusson Wild Ltd. have bought 50 per cent interest in the Crownex company, whose lease from Cominco Ltd. to operate the mine is held by Dison Development.

NAME CHANGED

Cowichan Copper changed its name last year to Cerna Copper, consolidating shares on a one-for-five basis, then Crownex took over in a further consolidation of shares on a one-for-four basis.

Pechiney-Aumas plan to rebuild the Jordan River ore concentrator to 1,500 ton per day capacity and meanwhile develop copper deposits to production, mostly underground.

Dobell said plans also include installation of trackless mining in part of the operation, and starting an open pit development to mine some of the reserves near surface.

By the time full production is restored—following a two-year shutdown — it may be necessary to spend more than $1 million, in which Crownex would also participate, Dobell said. This could involve the issue of stock, he said.

Meanwhile, Pechiney backed by its experience in copper mining around the world, will be manager of the Jordan River mine.

Rezoning Plan Urged for City

Victoria Labor Council will urge the city planning department to develop a long-range rezoning plan to prevent developers from taking over choice pieces of waterfront real estate for high-rises.

The labor council move was sparked Wednesday night by a letter from Anthony Miller of 714 Esquimalt Rd., a member of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Miller said without disclosure of a rezoning plan, the planning department is "aiding and abetting speculation" by developers.

Secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan commented that with Greater Victoria divided into four municipalities, each council is in the position of having to "trade off" pieces of valuable land in order to raise revenue.

Several delegates spoke in favor of the principle of regionalization, while others were opposed to the prospect of more high apartment buildings along the waterfront.

The labor council will also urge city council to set a tenants' grievance board to air complaints from people whose rights have been contravened by landlords.

Regional District Looks at Downtown

A look at downtown Victoria in relation to the region, and what kind of place it should be in the future, will be the subject of a public meeting later this month.

It is being organized by the Capital Regional District, responsible for regional planning on southern Vancouver Island, and the Community Planning Association, a private group.

The meeting will be held Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p.m. in the Imperial Inn, 1961 Douglas.

A picture and sound show will set the scene for discussion in which the audience will be invited to take part.

The meeting is part of a program started by the old Capital Region Planning Board, now part of the Capital Regional District. A scheduled meeting about downtown last year was cancelled after next to no politicians showed up.

New Way To Learn The ABCs

This fall parents can learn how to teach their children to read and write using the initial teaching alphabet.

The course is one of more than 30 offerings designed for a wide variety of adult interests by the University of Victoria's division of continuing education.

The initial teaching alphabet, or I.T.A., has gained wide acceptance in Britain as a simplified way of teaching reading and writing without many of the difficulties associated with the standard alpahabet.

A few primary teachers are using I.T.A. in the Greater Victoria and Sooke school districts.

Instructor of the Uvic course will be Dr. John Downing, professor in the faculty of education, who during the last decade has done much of the research comparing I.T.A. and other teaching methods.

The course is designed for parents and teachers, and will provide participants with a knowledge of I.T.A. symbols and the rules for using them to spell English words.

The course will run for 12 sessions, starting Sept. 21. Fees are $25 for a single registration, $35 for husband and wife.

Former Alderman, MLA, Dr. J. D. Hunter, Dies

Dr. Joseph Douglas Hunter, one of Victoria's pioneers and one of its ablest aldermen and MLAs, died Wednesday in his home at 911 Linden. He was 89.

The kindly doctor served on Victoria city council for 12 years altogether and was Victoria's representative in the provincial legislature between 1937 and 1941.

Born in New Westminster in 1881, he came to Victoria two years later and was educated in private schools in the area. Before going to McGill University to study medicine, he became known as one of Victoria's best young athletes.

After graduating from McGill in 1907 he took up practice at Coal Creek, near Fernie, and later returned to Victoria.

LED POLLS

He entered public life in Victoria in 1932 and led civic polls in most of his elections.

Elected to the legislature in 1937, Hunter followed his grandfather and father into B.C. politics. His maternal grandfather was Hon. John Robson, one-time premier of the province.

The doctor served on the Medical Board for the Army during the First and Second World Wars and his only son, Sandy, was killed in action during the Second World War.

Hunter was a life member of the Union Club.

He is survived by his wife Hilda, at home, and a stepdaughter, Nan Stewart, of Winnipeg.

Rt. Rev. Bishop George Calvert will conduct the funeral service Friday at 1:30 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral. Burial will be in Ross Bay Cemetery. Haywards Funeral Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

'Chicks' Do Good Job on Birds

When it comes to coloring birds, it looks like "chicks" do it best.

The three big winners in the second Times coloring contest were all girls, quite a switch after a clean sweep by boys in the first, a week ago.

But there was no lack of imagination anywhere among the hundreds of youngsters who colored Mark Trail's feature on birds.

Seven-year-old Linda Hammill of 3990 Locarno Lane, Saanich, will receive the $15 first prize for her accurate treatment of the comic page.

Lorna Ward, who is 10 and lives at 1000 Esquimalt Rd., Esquimalt, wins the $10 second prize.

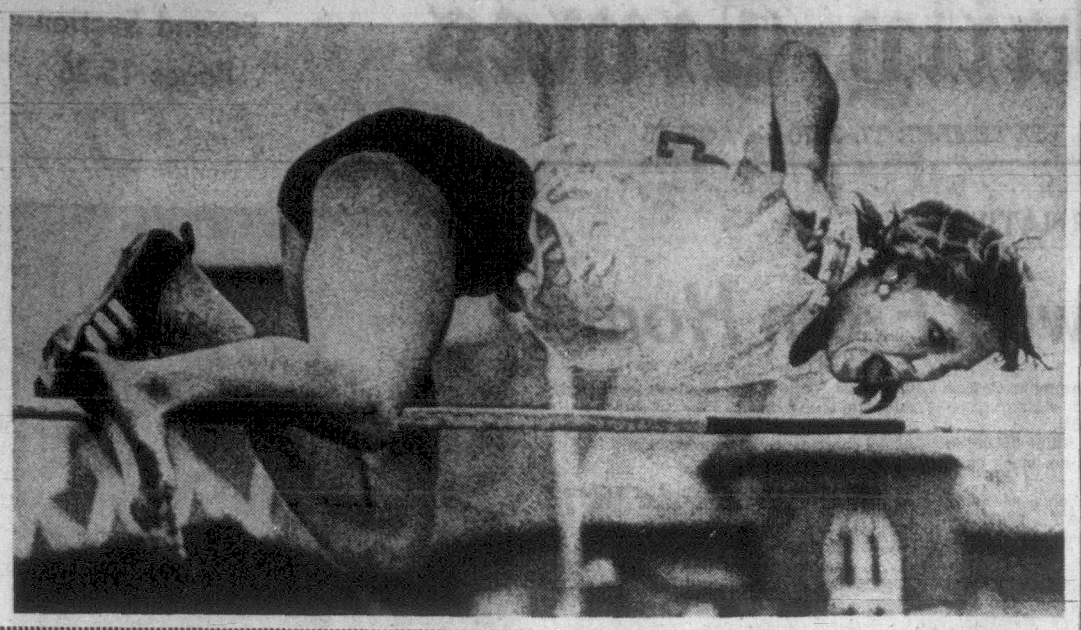
Third prize of $5 goes to Lynne Currie, 12, of 2411 Trent St., Victoria.

The 20 consolation prizes of $1 are awarded to:

Lesley McLaren, 10, 1658 Hillview; Lois Grimshaw, 10, 2564 Penrhyn; Coby De Jong, 11, 3359 Swindell; Marilyn Coulter, 7, 2539 Kilgarry; Christine Gschiel, 9, 350 Linden;

Gary Thomsen, 7, 7005 Brentwood; Kareen Cowie, 11, Garden Apartments, Courtenay; Shelley Cotton, 5, 1694 Foul Bay; Robbie Griffiths, 12, 291 Rudyard; Wendy Davies, 12, 3016 Henderson; Dawn Flynn, 8, 925 Parklands; Sherri Ruddock, 10, 881 McKenzie;

Mary Grogan, 11, 3307 Aldridge; Donny Corder, 7, 409 Campbell; Bruce Dill, 10, RR 1, Cowichan Station; Stephen Insley, 10, 5151 Cordova Bay; Richard Pearson, 11, 2776 Cadboro Bay; Margaret Hale, 12, 1020 Bank; Peter Smyth, 6, 1062 Cloverdale and Lynda Banner, 12, 2010 Norton, Sooke.



BILL WALKER

It was sort of one of those days, or as the baseball fan said: Now, how about those Cubs? And by golly he was correct. The Cubs may be the newest team of destiny just as the New York Mets were last year. They are up to the same sort of mystique.

Because, sure enough, during one stretch when the Cubs were in a slump and lost five of eight games, they actually gained half a game on the league leaders. And now with pitching the key as the teams roar down the tense September stretch, which will it be? Chicago has a good chance, and could even be rated No. 1. The Mets would appear to have the second best chance and mighty Pittsburgh certainly can't be overlooked, but do have a problem. In Ferguson Jenkins, Bill Hands and Ken Holtzman, the Cubs have a fair-to-middlin' pitching threesome, which could see them home. They also have Milt Pappas, who may be the extra one they need most. Pappas has come on well, when it appeared his career might be in jeopardy. But still the Mets hang tough, as manager Gil Hodges says: "by our defence." They are winning the close ones under pressure, and without the excellent pitching they got last year. Only Tom Seaver rates this season. Jerry Koosman is having a so-so year and the others just aren't measuring up, although Ray Sadecki has been a pleasant surprise.

For Pittsburgh, it's the power approach which the others can't match. But the pitching definitely is suspect, and not very good either. And this may hurt the Bucs when it gets down to the pressure-packed finish. If they suddenly get two starters who can consistently get the job done, then it is good bye to everybody and hello Cincinnati. And if the Bucs don't know they have a problem why have they acquired the likes of George Brunel from Washington, Eduardo Acosta from Columbus, and Jim Mudcat Grant from Oakland, in the last little while? Why indeed? . . .

Then there is the pencil that has been put to the National Football League. The earlier odds out of Las Vegas had the Dallas Cowboys as prohibitive favorites for their divisonal title at 1 to 4 . . . But after that whomping they took from the New York Jets, and others, the figures have changed. The Cowboys now are no better than even money, with Washington surprisingly at 3 to 1 . . . And what ever happened to the plan to have Cassius Clay defend his title against Joe Frazier in Toronto? Clay couldn't get a visa to leave the country, that's why, and that's why Atlanta has stepped in where others have feared to tread, and has put Clay back in the ring where he belongs.

And don't hesitate to give Victoria baseballers a helping hand on their world tournament junket to Colombia . . . they deserve it . . . there was a blurb in the mail the other day asking for the same kind of help for Canada's national ski team, from everybody, all across the land . . . The average defenceman in the National Hockey League is making four and one-half times as much as a defenceman who played 25 years ago . . . that is a conservative estimate . . . incidentally when speaking of hockey and the Los Angeles Kings, the uniform colors are not to be referred to as any color but "Forum blue and gold" . . . And in the NHL this year every team may wear colored shoes, but everyone on the club must wear the same color shoe, even the goalie . .

And wouldn't you believe it, there still is no such thing as a curve ball in baseball . . . It's a fake, says the Ernest Lowry ball-flight research authority in Toronto in several hundred words . . . so perhaps the Pirates won't have to worry about the Met and Cub pitchers, after all . . . And I understand, too, that it's fact that everyone on the Los Angeles hockey team must have a "nickname" . . .

For example Dale "Red" Hoganson, isn't "Red" any more . . . it's "Hoagy" . . . the LA fans didn't like "Red" . . . so the order went out: change it . . . and historians may be interested to learn that 40 years ago last Saturday, Mrs. Alf Alexander's gelding Ed Garrett won the first race at Colwood Park and paid $238.85 . . . only $11 had been wagered on the horse in the win pool . . . And whatever happened to Doug Harvey? He was an assistant coach with the Kings last year, but now is the forgotten man . . . well, what happened to him? . . . then there is the story about Cougar coach Ron Maxwell . . . He said earlier this year that he wouldn't stand for an over-abundance ot mod-shag on the Cougar Hockey Club . . . He already has informed the players of his wishes, and only recestly walked into the dressing room with a pair of clippers, and said: "All right now, who didn't get their hair cut?"

OPPOSES DEBBIE AGAIN

High-jumping duel promises to be one of highlights of tri-nation track and field meet at Centennial Stadium Saturday and Sunday when Canadian squad competes against national teams from Norway and Sweden. Only athlete to best Canada's Debbie Brill in major competition this season, Norwegian ace Kari Karlsen (above) will be trying for second straight win over Haney girl, who is only female jumper in world to top six feet this year. Miss Karlsen cleared five feet, eight inches to nip Miss Brill at Winnipeg last Sunday, but Debbie topped that height by half an inch Thursday in winning event against Swedish rivals in Edmonton. Events at Centennial Stadium start at 1:30 p.m. on both days. Tickets ($1 for adults) will be available at gate or may be obtained in advance from YM-YWCA, Bell's Men's Wear or Andrew's Men's Wear.

Pirates Increase Lead As Mets, Cubs Stumble

By Associated Press

There is a bit of daylight in the whacky National League east race today, thanks mainly to the pesky Montreal Expos and powerful Bob Gibson.

Pittsburgh's front-running Pirates took advantage of help from both those sources Wednesday to open a two-game gap over both Chicago Cubs and New York Mets as the season swings into its final two weeks.

The Pirates needed five pitchers—three of them in the ninth inning—but held on to whip Philadelphia Phillies 5-3. Meanwhile, Montreal jolted New York 4-2 and Gibson pitched St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-1 victory over Chicago.

In other National League action, Cincinnati Reds clinched a tie for the West Division title by nipping Houston Astros 3-2 while San Diego Padres were stopping Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0.

Atlanta Braves whipped San Francisco Giants 10-7.

Manny Sanguillen ripped two singles and a double, and scored twice to pace Pittsburgh over Philadelphia. Richie Hebner also had three hits for the Pirates.

Bob Moose went the first five innings, drove in a run with a single and earned the victory. Mudcat Grant, making his first appearace for Pittsburgh, worked until the ninth and then Dave Giusti, Joe Gibbon and John Lamb weaved their way out of a Phillie rally to preserve the victory.

Gibson made it easy for the Cards, cruising to his 22nd victory and 11th in his last 12 decisions on a six-hitter.

Ted Simmons cracked a fourth inning home run touching off a three-run Cardinal rally that put Gibson in control. Joe Torre tagged a two-run homer in the ninth, wrapping it up.

Ron Santo's 26th homer accounted for Chicago's only run off Gibson.

METS EXPO COUSINS

The Expos beat the Mets for the 10th time this season and moved into fifth place in the East Division on Steve Renko's five-hitter. Two of the hits were homers by Art Shamsky, accounting for both Met runs.

Tom Seaver absorbed the loss, seventh in his last nine decisions, with RBI singles by Marv Staehle and Jim Gosger keying a thru-run third inning put Montreal in business and Seaver wild pitched another run home.

The Mets were off today while the Cubs played the Cardinals and the Pirates met the Phillies.

REDS NEAR TITLE

The Reds get a chance to wrap the West all up tonight without even stepping on the field. Cincinnati has the day off but if the Dodgers lose to Houston, it'll be all over.

Cincinnati moved closer to the inevitable on Gary Nolan's 17th victory with Clay Carroll's ninth-inning relief nailing it down.

Nolan contributed a run-scoring triple to a three-run Reds' rally in the fifth inning and then scored on Bobby Tolan's single. Jimmy Wynn ripped his 26th homer of the year for the Astros in the ninth.

ORIOLES CLINCH TIE

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles clinched a tie for the east title as Boston Red Sox beat second-place New York Yankees 3-1 while the Orioles were losing to Washington Senators 2-0.

Detroit Tigers defeated Cleveland Indians 6-3, Oakland Athletics downed Milwaukee Brewers 4-1 and California Angels dropped Minnesota Twins 5-1. Chicago White Sox were rained out of a two-night doubleheader at Kansas City.

Shots on City Street Jolt Los Angeles Trio

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Who says training camps are dull?

Los Angeles Kings will beg your pardon.

They had excitement aplenty last fall in Peterborough when Eddie Shack arrived in a helicopter.

Here, in Victoria, a new kind of excitement was provided Tuesday when a long-haired youth pulled a gun on a city street and fired at three members of the Kings' entourage.

Gary Morrell, a television color commentator, and players Ron Racette and Dennis DeJordy were the victims of the nerve-wracking episode.

★ ★ ★

Walking to their quarters in the Empress Hotel, the trio approached a youth and girl. Just before they were about to pass, the couple made a move to enter a cafe.

The youth stopped, reached into his coat and pulled a gun. He fired once at each of Los Angeles trio.

"I couldn't understand how he could miss from such close range," Morrell said Wednesday. He and the two players didn't wait to ask questions and immediately called the police.

The long-haired idiot was apprehended in the cafe but released when the "victims" declined to press charges.

The gun proved to be a blank-firing "toy."

★ ★ ★

Otherwise, the Kings provided the excitement Wednesday with an intra-squad game that attracted over 1,500 fans to the Arena. The Gold team, coached by Springfield Indians' coach Johnny Wilson, defeated the Purple team, coached by Jimmy Anderson, 8-5.

The line of Juha Widing, Mike Boland and Jim Stanfield sparked the Golds. Widing, the smooth Swede obtained from New York Rangers late last season, scored two goals while his wingers each potted one.

★ ★ ★

Cowboy Bill Flett, Matt Ravlich, Dick Duff and Don Westbrooke scored the Golds' other goals. Al McDonough, Los Angeles' top draft choice, scored twice for the Purple team while Gord Labossiere, John Healy and Larry Mickey counted singles.

Kings' manager-coach Larry Regan, watching from the stands, called the game "impressive." He was happy with the passing and also cited the adherance to fundamentals.

The Kings' roster was reduced to 48 when seven more amateurs were chopped. The list included a Victoria-raised defenceman, Bill Gidden.

Gidden, who played junior hockey in Dauphin, Man., last season, was expected to be reassigned to Toledo of the International League. Also cut, along with Gidden, were Greg Jonasson, Brian Carlin, Dennis Clark, Brian Chinnick and Dennis Gidluck.

FULTS KILLED IN TRIAL RUN

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tommy Fults, a favorite in the 1970 Gold Cup hydroplane championships, was thrown from his speedboat and killed in a trial run Wednesday.

The 29-year-old Seattle driver suffered irreparable brain damage and his spinal cord was severed at the base of the brain, doctors said.

The accident occurred as Fults, the first driver in the water, was going down a straightaway of the 2½-mile course and hit the water at 92 miles an hour.

Volleyballers Meet

Volleyball enthusiasts in the Greater Victora area will have a chance to organize the coming season at a meeting called for 8 p.m. Monday at the YM-YWCA. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Ron Greene at 477-4215.

Old Cats Intact For 'Sneak Peak'

How far have the Victoria Cougars come since spring?

How does the British Columbia Junior Hockey League team's recruiting program stack up?

Who wants to stay?

Those may be three of the questions answered, in part, Saturday night when Cougars stage their "sneak peak" game at Memorial Arena, starting at 8 p.m.

Last year's team, virtually intact, will form one side for the intra-squad game. New recruits, bolstered by some of the younger candidates trying out with Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League will form the other squad.

Los Angeles manager-coach Larry Regan was expected to announce his contribution to the game later today.

Cougars' "veteran" team, announced this morning, includes goaltenders Ed Forslund and Geoff Ward: defencemen Dale Pennock, Gerry Bond, Laurie Moore and Randy Bock; and forwards Chris Riddell, Ted Plowe, Bruce Cowick, Rob Little, Shayne Webster, Scott Munro, Alex Shibicky, Pat Askew, Greg Robinson, Lon Miles and Don Blyth. All were with Cougars last season.

Cougars' "rookie" lineup will be named tonight.

Cowick, who shared team point-getting honors with Plowe last season, worked out with Cougars for the first time Wednesday after returning to Victoria from Ottawa. His return boosted the training-camp roster to 32.

In addition to providing fans with an indication of Cougars' strength this season, Saturday's game also will serve as an important yardstick in helping coach Ron Maxwell to further measure his talent-on-hand.

Several crucial cuts, including reassignment to the affiliated junior "B" Cubs, will be made Sunday or early Monday.

"Every player in camp right now, without a doubt, is capable of playing with almost any other team in the B.C. League. When you get down to those final choices, there really isn't much difference," said Maxwell.

"In a game situation, the players will show me who wants to play here, and who doesn't."

Canadian Girls In Narrow Win

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada was outpointed by Sweden 201-146 but Canadian athletes were far from outclassed in a two-day, dual-nation track and field meet which ended Wednesday.

Canada's women's team defeated the Swedish women—in a come-from-behind effort, 68-67.

Wednesday was women's day, as the Canadian girls won five of the seven events.

The women's team was still behind 60-64 going into the last event, the high jump, but Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., won with a jump of five feet 8½ inches to pick up five points and Debbie Vankiekebelt of Oakville, Ont., was second and picked up three points.

Sweden got two points for third place and one for fourth in the international scoring system used for dual-nation events.

Canada's poorest showing came in long-distance running events.

BREAKS RECORD

Lena Sjostadt of Sweden broke the Canadian open record in winning the 1,500 metres in four minutes 26.9 seconds. She edged out the previous title-holder, Noreen Liepins of Vancouver, who set her mark of 4:28.6 in Tokyo in 1969.

In the gruelling men's 10,000 metres, Peter Fredriksson of Sweden lapped both Canadian competitors.

In the 1,500 metres, Swedish competitors took the top two spots Wednesday and in Tuesday's 5,000 metres and the 3,000-metre steeplechase, the top Swedish times were considerably better than the top Canadian times.

One other Canadian open record was broken Wednesday in the men's pole vault. Kjell Isaksson of Sweden cleared the bar at 17 feet ¼ inch, to break the 16 feet 11¾ inch mark set by Herve d'Encausse, of a European team at an international meet in Montreal in 1967.

PENNY'S MARK FALLS

Meet officials announced Wednesday that a Canadian open record and a Canadian native record were set Tuesday at the first day of the competition.

The open record went to Gun Olson of Sweden who won the women's 100-metre hurdles in 14 seconds, three-tenths of a second faster than the previous mark set by Penny May of Victoria last year.

Elizabeth Deamman of Kitchener, Ont., second in the race, and Jenny Meldrum of Toronto, third, set the native record. Both were timed at 14.2.

Four More Lose Medals For Taking Stimulants

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Four more competitors, three from Iron Curtain countries were disqualified and stripped of their medals in the world weightlifting championships Wednesday. They were charged with taking stimulants.

That brought the two-day total of mass disqualifications to nine, all but one from East European Communist countries, after urine specimen tests showed positive.

Among the quartet knocked out Wednesday were Mecislav Nowak of Poland, who lifted 875 pounds to win the featherweight crown Monday night.

Another Polish champion, Zbigniew Kaczmarek, was cleared after testing. Kaczmarek lifted 964¼ pounds to beat out fellow countryman Waldemar Baszanowski for the lightweight title Tuesday night.

Baszanowski also was cleared.

Disqualified along with Nowak were Jan Woknowski of Poland and Yoshijuki Miyake of Japan, who finished in second and third places respectively in the featherweight lifting, and Janos Bagocs of Hungary third in the lightweight competition.

A physician said there were strong traces of the stimulant phyenylethylamine in the urine specimens of those disqualified. International Weightlifting Federation rules call for tests to be taken of only the first three finishers in each class.

STILL COMPETING

Recognized as featherweight champion was Janos Benedek, 26, of Hungary, who finished fourth in actual lifting with a combined 843 pounds.

The Soviet Union, Poland and Hungary, the countries whose athletes were the first to be disqualified Tuesday, were still competing, despite threats they might return home.

PROTESTS TOSSED OUT — INTREPID FIRST-RACE WINNER

Cup Series Gets Back in Water

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — After a day with the sea lawyers, the 1970 America's Cup series got back into the water today.

Cup rules require a race to be completed within six hours. But it took 22 to decide Intrepid was the winner of Tuesday's first race.

That was the elapsed time for the New York Yacht Club's race committee to decide to disallow protests by Intrepid, representing the United States, as well as her Australian challenger, Gretel II.

B. Devereux Barker III, chairman of the committee, told a news conference Wednesday that neither yacht had fouled the other in a near collision seven minutes before the start of the first of the best-of-seven series.

"That's that. Let's get back to racing," said a Gretel II spokesman.

"We're set. Got the protest flag ready," said Steve Van Dyke, Intrepid's tactitian.

Van Dyke blamed the problem on the Australians' interpretation of the right-of-way rules.

"We don't think a right-of-way boat on the starboard tack is free to change course with another boat. They do."

The deliberations didn't interfere with the racing. Gretel II had already asked for the day off to recuperate from a day inglorious enough to make any Aussie take up sheep ranching.

Her crew worked over her damaged sheet winches and a cap was installed forward to prevent another man-overboard situation which happened in Tuesday's choppy seas.

Intrepid took Gretel II's measure in winds of similar strength Tuesday, winning by five minutes, 52 seconds. The involuntary dip by her crewmember and a six-minute spinnaker tangle contributed to the American boat's margin but not the ultimate result.

That was decided by Barker's committee. He said the cause of the protest arose from the port-starboard situation during pre-race stalking between Jim Hardy, the Australian skipper, and Bill Ficker, the American.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Winter steelhead anglers should now begin planning and preparing for what promises to be an excellent season. Angler success during the summer and fall coho is the major indication of winter steelhead success. The parallel is drawn because of the almost identical life histories of the coho and steelhead.

As fry, both spend the first years of their lives in their native stream. They migrate to salt water late in their second year during the high waters of April and May During their two-year stay in salt water the rich ocean feed gives them their trophy weights. Their two-year fresh water nursery however, determines the limits of their population. It is in the stream that the critical factors of habitat, the temperature, feed, floods and pollution, that determines future angling success.

Coho fishing this year has been outstanding prompting most steelhead anglers to predict an equally excellent winter steelhead year.

Summer-run steelhead are beginning to peak in the San Juan-Harris Creek system, the Stamp-Ash system, and the Gold-Hebber system. The numbers of summer-run fish in these streams continues to increase during the fall reaching a major run of summer or early winter steelhead during the latter part of October and early November. The winter season usually begins in December with early runs of fish in most streams.

During the fall, steelheaders are generally preparing and repairing equipment for the winter season. Paramount at this time of the year is the preparation of bait.

It is well known that a cluster of salmon eggs or roe is the most consistantly successful bait for winter steelhead. At this time when salmon fishing is reaching its peak and the salmon caught are ripe with roe, bait should be prepared.

●

Many arguements are raised over the deadliness of roe. Some claim that eggs should be banned in an attempt to preserve our rapidly diminshing steelhead stocks. Others claim that were another lure used as regularly as roe it would prove to be equally effective and would also have to be banned. Studies on the Big Qualicum River during '65, '66 and '67 showed the following steeelhead angling gear success; 1965-roe 39%, spin-glo 52%, other gear 9%, 1966-roe 29%, spin-glo 56%, other 15% 1967 — roe 53%, spin-glo 32%, other 15%.

In many short rivers on the west coast where a natural barrier restricts the fish to a few miles of the lower river, and where heavy angling pressure occurs, fishing with roe has been banned by regulation. A few rivers on the lower mainland have these conditions and the necessary regulation. However, on Vancouver Island none do.

Why roe is so successful is difficulay to determine. However, it is sure-fire. It gives the beginning steelheader the confidence needed to spend all day on a river. He knows when he locates a fish it will strike.

Many methods of egg preparation are used and al are effective. The following method has consistently proven itself.

●

EQUIPMENT NEEDED: A medium sized mixing bowl; a very sharp knife; a box of commercial laundry borax; a cutting board; pint containers or plastic freezer bags.

UROCEDURE: Take your skein of roe and lay it on the cutting board so that the loose section of eggs is on the board. With your knife cut the skein into two halves, lengthways. Take one half of the skein and lay it on the board with the membrane on the board and the open eggs facing up. Start from the thick end and cut the skein of eggs into half or one inch sections.

While you are cutting you wil notice that the skein has smaller membrances with clusters of eggs that are in distinct layers. Lay each smaller membrane down and cut the main membrane on the board. Cutting in this fashion will ensure that your eggs will stay in a cluster.

When you have finished cutting the skein pour a shallow layer of borax in your mixing bowl. Place a number of roe cuts on the borax and then pour a liberal amount of borax on top. Mix well until the gobs of roe are thoroughly covered with borax. Take the clusters out of the bowl and pack lightly in the containers. Pour a light amount of borax in your container as you pack the clusters. When packed store the container in the freezer.

During the steelhead season take a container from the freezer a few hours prior to your fishing trip. When the eggs have thawed they will appear as fresh as when they were prepared.

Senese Loses To Skillings

Roger Skillings, third-seeded in the Victoria Racquet Club tennis championships, downed Don Senese 6-3, 6-0 in the opening day of play Wednesday.

Competition will continue through to the finals on Sept. 26.

Today's draw:

5:30 p.m. — Jack Cowan and Vic Woodland vs. Frank Berry and Peter Birkett; Tut Jones and Jim Wells vs. Dick Bradshaw and Don Senese; Jill Lightbody and Janet Kenney vs. Gay Clayton and Florence Walther; Gordon Hartley vs. Doug Steick.

Inlet Derby Open To All Fishermen

Members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will have some extra competition Sunday in their annual spring-coho salmon derby at Saanich Inlet.

Usually restricted to VSIAA members, the derby will be open to all fishermen this year.

Tickets for the event, which runs from daybreak until noon, are available at a cost of $1 from most Saanich Inlet boathouses.

Trophies, cash prizes and hidden-weight awards will be presented to fortunate anglers about 12:15 p.m. at the Anglers-Anchorage.

Saturday's the Day

Esquimalt Minor Hockey Association player registration will be held Saturday — not Sunday as reported earlier — in the Jubilee Hall on Fraser Street. Player registrations will be accepted between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Possession Tactic Works for Ticats

HAMILTON (CP) — Joe Zuger utilized short passes and a running game that has been suspect in recent weeks to support a superb defensive effort Tuesday night as Hamilton Tiger-Cats shocked Calgary Stampeders 39-18 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game .

The victory, before 21,100 fans, bolted the Ticats into a three-way tie for first place in the Eastern Football Conference with Toronto Argonauts and Montreal Alouettes, each with eight points.

Calgary remained tied in second place in the Western Conference with British Columbia Lions, each with 10 points and four behind the conference-leading Saskatchewan Rough Riders.

Zuger completed 12 of 17 passes during the game despite operating with an injured thumb on his throwing hand, jammed in the Ticats' outling last Sunday, a 38-23 loss to the Als.

Head coach Joe Restic said this had been the Ticats plan throughout, although Zuger completed only two in the entire first half.

"They go deeper than any other club," said Restic. "You can't throw past them. . . . So our plan was to throw just back of the linebackers." It proved effective, loosening up the Calgary defensive secondary and allowing Hamilton's running backs to move more freely than they have in recent games.

Defensive end Allan Ray Aldridge, playing only his second game with Hamilton, stole the ball from Calgary fullback Hugh McKinnis on the Westerners' first series of plays after the opening kick-off.

MOVED ON GROUND

Playing for control of the ball, Zuger moved the Ticats along the ground with the exception of one 20-yard pass to Dave Fleming. Ed Buchanan scored on a power run over the left side of the Calgary line.

Angelo Mosca was responsible for the second Tiger-Cat score at 13:47 of the first quarter when Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling and McKinnis muffed a pitchout inside the Stampeder five-yard line. Mosc dived for the ball, batted it away from converging Calgarians, and defensive end Paul Schmidtin scooped it up for the score.

Fullback Norn Weslowski, Fleming and Aldridge, the latter on a 27-yard return of an interception late in the game, scored the other Hamilton touchdowns.

BOOSTS POINT LEAD

Tommy Joe Coffey increased his conference leading point total to 61 as he collected eight points, converting all five Hamilton touchdowns and adding a 37-yard field goal.

Herm Harrison and Dave Cranmer, on passes from Keeling, scored the Calgary touchdowns. Larry Robinson, whose convert of Harrison's touchdown gave him 700 career points, added another convert, field goal and single to complete the Stampeder scoring.

Ball Drive Hits Halfway Station

With less than two weeks to deadline, the fund being raised to help send Victoria Centennials to the world amateur baseball championship in Colombia during November has reached the halfway point of its $3,500 objective.

Over the past 12 years, the Victoria and District Baseball Association has contributed about $200,000 to improve playing facilities and promote the sport throughout the lower Island.

Now, when its coffers are drained from giving, the VDBA is learning that its efforts on behalf of baseball in Victoria are appreciated.

Radio station CFAX entered the campaign Wednesday with a contribution of $100 and will accept further contributions either through the mail or at the station.

Other donations that have swelled the fund include a $25 contribution from the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League and a $20 cheque from R. D. Mather.

Donations also are being accepted at Canada Trust, Ingraham Hotel, Al's Esso or Bell's Men's Wear.

12 FL. OUNCES — UNION MADE — FULLY MATURED
O'KEEFE BREWING COMPANY LIMITED
VANCOUVER, B.C.

A special kind of beer.

We're proud to present O'Keefe's Extra Old Stock—a beer you're going to be hearing a lot about during the next few months. Why? Because Extra Old Stock Malt Liquor is a lot more than just an ordinary beer. It's something special.

It starts with the brewmaster and his unique blending of finest Canadian malts and special seedless hops to give unmatched smoothness. Then Extra Old Stock is brewed longer (much longer) and aged to full maturity to give extra flavour, extra enjoyment, extra satisfaction.

Next time you buy a beer—or a case of beer—stock up with Old Stock. See how it pours light and golden in the glass. Then taste it and discover what the brewmaster's skill and extra time can do.

Winter Games to Launch Centennial Sport Program

British Columbia's athletic portion of celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of entry into confederation will be kicked off early in January by the province-wide Centennial '71 Winter Games.

Leslie Peterson, chairman of the provincial physical fitness and amateur sports fund, and L. J. Wallace, general chairman of the centennial committee, jointly announced the winter games as the first of a series of sports projects extending throughout the centennial year.

Sixteen sporting events will be staged in 11 B.C. centres early in January with the bulk of events taking place on the Jan. 9-10 weekend.

"The Centennial '71 Winter Games were conceived as trials for the Canada Winter Games, which will be held at Saskatoon in February, 1971," Wallace said.

"They will challenge British Columbia's leading athletes to reach their best form before representing the province at the Canada Games. The physical fitness and amateur sports fund, and the Centennial '71 Committee, will help defray expenses.

Sites for events have been selected as follows:

Victoria (basketball, judo); Prince George (boxing); Trail (hockey); North Vancouver (figure skating); Langley (gymnastics); Kimberley (skiing); Dawson Creek (speed skating); Burnaby (synchronized swimming); New Westminster (wrestling); and Vancouver (badminton, fencing, table tennis, weightlifting).

Locations for volleyball and curling events are to be announced.

THE AGE OF MERCURY STARTS TODAY

Better ideas make better cars

MERCURY

Getting better all the time

For 1971, the name of Mercury means more than ever before. More choice because Mercury has added a sensational new little car, Comet, to a line that ranges up to the big, luxurious Marquis. More better ideas in action. And more value-because at Mercury, every car we build must live up to the Lincoln Continental tradition.

Introducing the all new

Mercury Comet

The little car with better ideas.

There's never been a car quite like Comet. It handles and parks like a little car. It's priced like a little car. Gas mileage rivals the imports and it's simple to maintain. But Mercury Comet allows you to choose between a 2-door model and a four door model. Between three frugal Sixes and a performance-proven V-8.

Mercury Comet 4-door sedan

Marquis'71

Canada's most luxurious medium-priced car was never so easy to own.

A dramatic new look for Marquis and an entirely new model priced to bring the luxury of Marquis within easier reach. The luxury of a car that is the only one in this class styled in the Lincoln Continental tradition. With a ride only the world's great luxury cars can match. 3-speed Select-Shift automatic, power steering and a quiet-running, powerful V-8 engine are among the many features that are standard on Marquis—but cost extra on lesser cars.

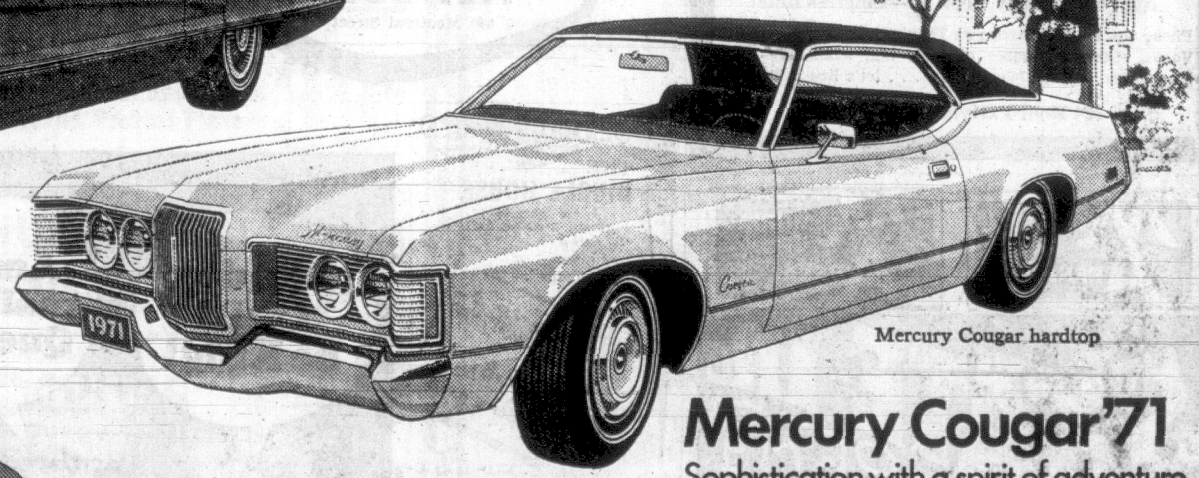
Marquis Brougham 4-door hardtop

Mercury Meteor'71

Your money gets you more.
Costs a little over 3... but well under 4...*

The 1971 Mercury Meteor is completely re-styled to give you more beauty and more riding comfort than ever before. Superbly appointed interiors—designed to give generous head, leg and shoulder room and insulated so the ride is as quiet as it is smooth. Standard features on the models priced in the popular 3 to 4 thousand dollar range include upper-level power ventilation, steel guard rails in every door and a husky V-8 engine.

Mercury Meteor 2-door hardtop

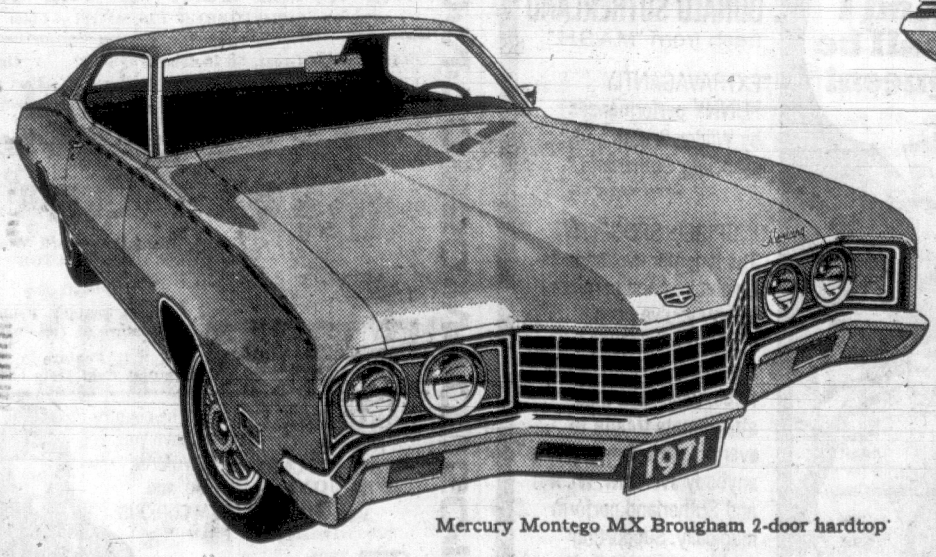


Mercury Cougar hardtop

Mercury Cougar'71

Sophistication with a spirit of adventure.

All new for 1971, Mercury Cougar is a very personal luxury car for people with a taste for action. The ride is satin-smooth and whisper-quiet. The longer, lower, wider body helps provide the handling ease of a sports car. A 351 cu. in. V-8, bucket seats, floor-mounted stick are just a few of the standard features.



Mercury Montego MX Brougham 2-door hardtop

Mercury Montego'71

Break out of your shell... not out of your budget.

A great new way to put some sunshine in your life—at a price within reach of most budgets. You'll like Montego's sporty styling. You'll enjoy Montego's handy size; a foot or so shorter than big cars. You'll appreciate the quiet, relaxed comfort of Montego's hi-styled interiors; the smoothness of the ride, the economy of the sturdy 250 cu. in. 6-cyl. engine. Or you can personalize Montego with options that include a 429 four-barrel V-8, power steering, Whisper-Aire conditioning and many more.

Defence Studies Plan for New Sub Patrol Fleet

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence department officials are reported working on a plan for a fleet of new coastal reconnaissance aircraft that could cost Canada about $400 million.

Non-government sources say the proposal calls for purchase of about 30 Lockheed P-3B Orion, an anti-submarine patrol aircraft that defence planners have had under consideration for some time.

A department spokesman denied any firm proposal has been prepared for the Treasury Board. He described as speculation a report the Orion had been chosen over Hawker Siddeley's Nimrod reconnaissance plane.

Defence department planners still are looking at both planes, said the spokesman. He predicted a decision before the end of the year — in line with previous indications.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced last year that Canada's Argus reconnaissance plans will be replaced after 1973. The Argus, a modified Bristol Britannia manufactured by Canadair of Montreal, has been in service with the Canadian forces since 1958.

There are squadrons based at Summerside, P.E.I., Greenwood, N.S., and Comox. The new aircraft, if and when acquired, will be based at Greenwood and Comox.

Recently there have been reports that at least part of the 32-plane Argus fleet will be retained for service in the Arctic, even after a new plane has been purchased. However, the spokesman said this is not likely.

At current flying rates, the Argus airframe will reach the limit of its approved safely endurance between 1972 and 1974.

Negotiations have not yet reached the hard bargaining stage, but it's reported unofficially that the price per Orion could be $12 million to $15 million, depending to some extent on the number purchased.

They Screened the Ideas and Images in Their Minds

By PETER McNELLY

The first screening of the ideas and images in the minds of more than 30 young Victoria film-makers took place Wednesday night in the National Film Board's Tiny Theatre at 811 Wharf.

The NFB and the adult education division of the Greater Victoria school board sponsored the program, "Challenge For Change," a summer project which gave the fledgling movie-makers here their first crack at film production.

The results, seen mostly through the eyes of eight and super-eight millimetre cameras, were often delightful, funny and provocative.

The idea behind the project, said Victoria's NFB representative Peter Grant, was to give "young people and those who think young an opportunity to go out and explore the Victoria environment."

●

Three of the films did exactly that. Red Balloon, produced by Henriette Pilon, Sue Stephens, Carolyn Zaph, Burney Hiney and David Brougham, stacked the picture of a child running across a field against a mixed bag of local sights and residents.

Red Balloon's Victoria carried the weight of creeping shabbiness across old buildings and old faces. The viewer was left to imagine the child's future if the decay continues as he, too, ages.

Another movie which stared directly into our region's face and didn't like what it saw there was the ironically titled Progress In Saanich.

This film was the work of three people, Gordon Kidd, Justus Havelaar and Jamie Bertie. Mixing narration with live sound, Progress in Saanich showed how housing development is eating away agricultural land on the Saaanich Peninsula.

One shot said it all: A lovely farm house nesting in a field's corner with a "for sale" sign on a nearby fence. Shots of stucco tract homes in contrast to fertile fields drove the message home.

The third film which looked directly at our environment was Vic West School. It, too, cast a cold eye.

●

This film — a 16-millimetre documentary in black and white with a good, clear soundtrack — was the co-operative effort of Pat Martin Bates, Djanne and John Durkin, Grenfell Featherstone and Karl Spreitz.

Almost everyone in Greater Victoria knows about the wretched state of that school, but seeing the lousy lights, dessicated washrooms, comical wood and coal furnaces and condemned top floor proved far more powerful than any story could ever be.

In many ways, Vic West School was the film which most accurately captured the "challenge for change" spirit under which the project developed.

The movie uses two screens to compare the feelings of Vic West mothers with sights of the interior and exterior of te school itself.

The camera work in and about the school is graceful and hard. The movie captures the decrepit sense of the building so well, it very nearly transforms it into a beautiful portrait of what education must have been like eons ago.

The remaining three movies were more personal than explicitly social. Each had its own brand of charm.

●

Cycles, a brief look at life and death in hospital waiting rooms and old photographs, was the work of Mike Hoppe, Leslie Cox, Sherry Ruddick, John McCorkell and Ron Nordli.

On one screen, a young man waits to become a father. On another an elderly woman waits to become a widow. Before the quick ending, several old photographs reveal two families' steps from birth to maturity to death. Cycles is simple, quick, and filled with hints of longing and love.

Summer Sedan was the work of six people — a vibrant parade of imagery and catchy camera angles.

The efforts of Yvonne Norrington, Lynne St. Hilaire, Lar Hurdle, Arron Kloheid, Bob Garfat, and Vito Cianci, Summer Sedan produced a hard-edge put-down on businessmen.

●

The put-down is obvious, but the imagery is exhuberant, colorful and strange. Much is made of masks and mirrors, and things or oddly springing on to camera, wiggling or suddenly slowing down.

Summer Sedan gets lost for a while somewhere in the middle, but comes back home at the end for more surreal visual delights.

Why, a short piece, is five people's collective impression of some of the problems of a young marriage.

Why was shot and edited by Joanne Rose, Colin Griffiths, Kathy Jorgensen, Roger Bailey and Ron Bennett. It's theme is too large to be successfully executed in a short time, but Why manages to caputre a few feisty instances of marital disharmony which match the joy of the couple's early days together.

Challenge For Change this summer produced a collage of entertainment, trickery and social comment.

Bob Dewhurst of the adult education division said he hopes that these films and some others which could not be completed in time for Wednesday's program will be shown to the area's mayors and councils, local MLAs and school board officials.

The public may see them at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday nights at the NFB theatre. Why not drop in?

Man Sentenced

SMITHERS (CP) — John Ceda Moisic, 41, a transient from the Montreal area, was sentenced to 28 months in the British Columbia penitentiary Tuesday on seven counts of defrauding the government. He was charged with collecting welfare payments by giving false information.

Lewd, Rude Heckling Draws Spiro Blast

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, after telling chanting demonstrators "you're pathetic," accused some Democrats Wednesday night of encouraging "the most rude, crude and lewd heckling imaginable."

He wrote the accusation into his speech at a Republican fund-raising dinner, fashioning his encounter with the noisy dissenters into political weaponry for his continuing assault on "radical-liberals."

"The obscene shouts of an arrogant few will never in the state of Michigan drown out the quiet voices, young and old, of dignity and decency," the vice-president told more than 1,200 people in Grand Rapids as he wound up a week of election campaigning in six states.

The Michigan demonstrators, perhaps 100 strong, chanted peace slogans interspersed with obscene taunts from the rear of the crowd of more than 1,100 people in an airport hanger in Saginaw.

He shook a finger toward the hecklers and told them:

"You people out there preach a lot about dissent but you're afraid of other points of view because you don't have the strength of your own convictions."

"One, two, three, four, we don't want your f—— war," the hecklers shouted.

Agnew waved his right hand back and forth like a conductor as if to keep time with the chant.

"You're pathetic," he said.

LEIXLIP, Ireland (AP) — A light plane crashed during filming of a movie about German fighter ace Baron von Richthofen, killing the pilot, spokesmen for the movie company said. The plane piloted by Charles Boddington, went into a spin and crashed.

Castle 'Neglected, Abandoned'

The city is not meeting its commitment to keep up Craigdarroch Castle, in spite of the fact it has had $7,200 given it for this purpose by the society, James K. Nesbitt, president of Craigdarroch Castle Preservation Society, said Wednesday.

★ ★ ★

Most of the castle's grounds, says Nesbitt, are neglected, "almost abandoned."

Visitors to the castle this year provided a profit of $6,000, which was turned over to the city. In addition, they gave $1,600, which was handed to the guides who are hired by the society.

In addition to the $6,000, the city has another $1,200, left over from last year's donations.

"It seems that the city, until questioned, had forgotten it had $1,200 left over in the castle fund. It is not too co-operative where the castle is concerned."

In contrast, says Nesbitt, the provincial government has given the society $6,000 over a period of 18 months. Earlier this year the society spent $850 to have the lower hall and staircase washed and veneered and another $1,400 for new light fixtures in the library and lower hallway.

"There is a tremendous amount of work to be done and it is all very costly."

★ ★ ★

"The two top towers are in deplorable condition, with much of the wood rotting because of leaks in the doors and windows. The hardwood floors, with their priceless parquet, need sanding and polishing. More expensive light fixtures are required.

"Handles on doors and drawers are missing. The magnificent mantels are shabby beyond description. The white paint should be removed from the mahogany in the drawing room."

Nesbitt said the city gave no response when asked to do something about the grounds except to say it couldn't afford to maintain them.

Warning that the job of restoring the castle will take years, Nesbitt said only a handful of the businesses catering to the tourist industry contribute through substaining $25 memberships.

Police Seize Marijuana Cache

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police seized more than 30 pounds of marijuana, worth about $3,500 on the illicit market, and arrested two men and two women in a raid on a South Vancouver house Wednesday.

No charges were laid immediately. It was the third major seizure of marijuana here in less than three weeks; earlier raids netted caches of 35 and 40 pounds of marijuana.

Captain Fined

TORONTO (CP) — The captain of a Liberian oil tanker was fined $3,000 or three months in jail, after pleading guilty in provincial court to polluting Lake Ontario. Captain Sotiris Georgopoulos is master of the MV Tainaron which discharged an oily solution May 13, leaving a 1½-mile oil slick on the lake.

SKINNY SURVIVORS pose on board rescue ship USS Niagara Falls after being picked up in ocean off Hawaii following 49 foodless days in 42-foot sailing boat. Wiefreid Heiringhoff, 28, Laurene Knox, 21, and Julian Ritter, 62, were two months overdue on a voyage from Tahiti to Hawaii when they were found near death Monday. (AP Wirephoto.)

Trio Lasted 49 Days By Eating Oddities

HONOLULU (AP) — Three gaunt sailing buffs said Wednesday they survived 49 almost foodless days on an errant yacht by eating such oddities as the philodendron and elephant ear plants that decorated the cabin.

Other food was algae scraped from the hull and boiled with nutmeg, cloves and cinnamon. Six flying fish and three squid caught with makeshift equipment were culinary bonanzas.

"We stayed alive by algae and encouraging each other," skipper Julian Ritter, 61, told a news conference aboard the U.S. naval vessel Niagara Falls, which rescued the three Monday.

Ritter, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; Laurene Louis Kokx, 21, of Ojai, Calif., and Winifried Bernard Heiringhoff, 28, of Sendenhorst, West Germany, were picked up 422 miles northwest of Honolulu. They were 230 miles off their course from Tahiti to Hawaii. A coast guard search had been under way since Aug. 1.

Miss Kokx's weight dropped from 120 to 86 pounds during the odeal, Ritter's dropped from 165 to 113 and Heiringoff's from 162 to 114.

NARWHALS DIE AT AQUARIUM

VANCOUVER (CP)—Three of the Vancouver public aquarium's six narwhals died "about a week ago" from undetermined causes, Curator Vince Penfold disclosed Wednesday.

He said the information was not released earlier because "nobody asked."

★ ★ ★

He said autopsies are being conducted to determine the cause of the death of the three, all young calves.

Three surviving adult narwhals, or tusked whales, are in good condition, the curator said.

The narwhals, only ones in captivity, were captured by an aquarium expedition in August on Baffin Island in the Canadian north.

Study Says GM Trucks Collapse

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United States government study showing that some General Motor's pickup trucks collapsed under normal use has prompted a hearing Sept. 30.

In the past, similar allegations that GM used unsafe steel wheels on its three-quarter ton Chevrolet and GMC 1960-65 pickup trucks were answered by GM claims that the vehicles broke apart only when overloaded.

Last March, consumer advocate Ralph Nader brought suit against the government to force the reopening of charges that GM used steel wheels "which disintegrate suddenly and explosively" on the pickup trucks in question.

The wheels were manufactured by Kelsey-Hayes.

Last October, the highway safety bureau and its parent department of transportation has accepted a GM compromise under which the company agreed to replace the three-piece, 15-inch disc wheels on any of its 50,000 trucks equipped with campers or other special bodies.

However, the bureau disclosed Tuesday that a government research study dated Sept. 3 has found 98 cases of wheel failures in the models of pickup trucks not equipped with the weight-adding camper or other heavy bodies attached.

Some 200,000 pickup trucks in question were manufactured by GM.

Quints Turn 7

ABERDEEN, S.D. (AP) — It was just another school day for the Fischer quintuplets as they marked their seventh birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fischer have preferred to keep the children out of the public eye, for the most part. The children were born at St. Luke's Hospital seven years ago. The four girls and one boy are Mary Magdalene, Mary Catherine, Mary Margaret, Mary Ann and James.

'I CAN DO ANYTHING'

He LIVES With New Heart!

DETROIT (AP) — Donald Kaminski, a heart transplant patient who boasts "I can do anything," went to the horse races this week, consumed a half-dozen bottles of beer, smoked a few cigarettes and bet every race.

"There is no restriction on my physical activity or what I can eat," said Kaminsky. "I hunt, fish, ride horses, water-ski, ride a motorcycle and pilot a plane."

Kaminski, a 38-year-old grandfather, received the heart of a fatally injured 22-year-old college student Dec. 2, 1968, at the University of Michigan Medical Centre in Ann Arbor. Only two heart transplant patients have survived longer than Kaminski, Michigan's longest - surviving transplant patient.

Kaminski said he's sure his body won't reject the new heart.

"I don't even think about it. I've only got one physical problem. My doctor says I'm getting too heavy. I've got to lose 15 pounds. Otherwise, I'm in great shape."

Boy Wounded In Vietnam Becomes Father At Age 15

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Walter Lee Martin, twice-wounded Vietnam veteran who now is 15, became the father of a son Wednesday as he prepared to re-enter Grade 8.

Alma Lee Jones, Martin's widowed mother, said her son's 17-year-old wife, Rosa Lee, gave birth to a 10-pound, three-ounce son who was named Walter Lee Martin Jr.

"We're trying to scrape together some clothes so Walter Lee can get back in school," Mrs. Jones said.

"It's not orange-picking time, so the money's all gone."

Martin gained national attention last month when it was discovered that he had served three years in the army, including two Vietnam tours at age 15. His mother said Martin entered the army at age 12.

Science Council Backs Short Takeoff Plane

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Science Council of Canada was putting finishing touches today on a proposal that Canada devote a major effort to the design and construction of a transportation system based on short-takeoff - and - landing aircraft and related navigation and air traffic control.

Dr. O. M. Solandt, council chairman, said the council, meeting here as part of an arctic tour, is just about decided on making such a recommendation to the federal government.

He envisages "a major program of research and development leading to production and use of a complete short take-off-and-landing aircraft and system."

The proposal has been under study by the council's transportation committee which has placed a recommendation before the council that it be given backing in a report to the federal government.

Dr. Solandt said a complete STOL (short takeoff and landing) system including navigational and air traffic control features "would be a solution to the problem of transportation" between cities such as Montreal and Toronto in high-density ribbons of population.

WOULD SUIT NORTH

"It also would produce an aircraft particularly suitable for many of the problems of the north and it seems to be a field specially suitable for Canadian expenditure."

Council members have been given first-hand evidence of the advantages of STOL aircraft during their northern tour which began last weekend. Many persons with whom they have come in contact have highly praised the Otter, a STOL plane, which one oil company officer told them earlier this week is beginning to revolutionize arctic transportation.

Dr. Solandt said Canada has a technical lead over other countries in STOL aircraft such as the Otter. Not only would development of a STOL system benefit the north and solve the central Canada transportation problem but it held promise of being a money-earner in export markets.

The Otter is a de Havilland aircraft product. Dr. Solandt is a former de Havilland vice-president of research.

WILL SEEK COMMITTEE

At sessions Wednesday, the science council decided to ask a special committee on the environment whether a new study needs to be launched in this area.

The privy council office and the energy, mines and resources department have just completed several environmental studies and there have been reports the government may ask parliament to legislate into being an environmental council.

The science council committee was asked to take a look at these studies and also to define the term environment so that at its November session it can decide whether to make a major study.

Dr. Solandt said he personally believes "we should see if we can evolve a better mechanism to co-ordinate the attack on environmental problems."

It was possible the science council could look more objectively than other studies at this question.

Dr. Solandt said the organizations involved in examination and preservation of the environment must be better co-ordinated and the import problems identified so that action can be taken.

PROBLEMS MANAGEABLE

He maintained that most, if not all, the environmental problems are manageable. What was needed was recognition that the decisions about the environment will always involve compromises.

A perfect example was the miles of seismic lines cut across the Arctic by oil exploration crews which disturb the insulation above the permafrost, gradually creating deep gullies that among other things, effect movement of wildlife.

Dr. Solandt said that these lines have been cut indiscriminately but, with proper organization, not nearly so many need be done to find promising oil deposits.

In considering its own environmental study, the council was aware of a need for considerable contribution from social scientists since environmental problems, especially in the cities, were essentially sociological.

He said he believes social scientists would be ready to participate with the science council which is predominantly composed of men trained in the natural sciences.

Dr. Gabriel Filteau is chairman of the council environmental committee and Dr. Peter Larkin, director of the institute of environmental studies, University of British Columbia, has been invited to be vice-chairman.

Bourassa Claims Win; Will Quebecers?

By DON MacPHERSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa returns to his home province today claiming success at his first constitutional conference and at Wednesday's federal-provincial conference on non-constitutional matters.

Whether Quebecers will see the results of Mr. Bourassa's work the same way is another matter.

The 37-year-old economist who came to power in the April 19 general elections was received enthusiastically by Canada's other first ministers for his conciliatory approach a tthe talks, but they were less excited by his proposals.

For the second straight day one of his main proposals put aside by his counterparts in favor of matters which they feel are more pressing.

The Quebec premier proposed the creation of a federal stabilization fund to help provinces such as his own which have higher unemployment. The plan calls for loans and grants to be paid out of federal tax revenues to be spent as the province involved decides.

OTHERS CAUTIOUS

Although he told reporters "several other premiers accepted the idea," that acceptance was more cautiously expressed by the other premiers themselves.

A statement issued by the first ministers at the end of the conference said that, while some found the proposal "of special interest," others spoke of "the totality of resources already being redistributed from the higher-income to the lower-income regions."

Premier John Robarts of Ontario described it as another form of 'the equalization programs already in existence. He asked: "Isn't it time we took a look at the total effect on the total country of these transfers?"

Mr. Bourassa defended the proposal as one way of fighting regional economic disparities, a campaign to which all Canadian governments were committed, and mentioned federal government spending as another means.

MISSES CLEAR ANSWER

Mr. Bourassa also did not receive a clear answer to his request for the re-imbursement of $236,000,000 his government estimates has been paid out by Quebecers under the two-percent social development surtax on personal income.

The Quebec government maintains that the surtax was imposed to pay for the federal medical care insurance plan. Quebec has not yet entered the plan, and the province wants the money back.

Mr. Bourassa said the federal government has agreed to consider Quebec's position when it draws up new equalization arrangements in 1972, and he expects an answer from Ottawa in six or seven months.

The previous day, Mr. Bourassa's appeal for accelerated constitutional negotiations was received with an apparent lack of enthusiasm.

Mr. Bourassa said Quebec had scored a "certain achievement" when the conference approved bilateral considerational talks among the provinces and the federal government, but the idea was Mr. Thatcher's, not his.

Mediation Commission Sets Terms

VANCOUVER (CP) — The controversial British Columbia Mediation Commission ordered its first binding settlement in private industry Wednesday, setting terms of a new contract between the Teamsters Union and three Vancouver-area cement companies.

The commission, set up by the provincial government in 1968, had previously confined itself to ordering binding decisions in the public sector, such as between policemen and their municipal employers.

In a landmark 16-page decision, the three-member commission ordered a 75-cent hourly pay boost for 900 Teamsters, spread over two years, on a base rate of $3.71 an hour. The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1.

The decision was expected to draw sharp criticism from the B.C. Federation of Labor, which has been sharply critical of the commission and has urged its affiliated unions to boycott it.

City's Help Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said Tuesday it will ask city council to create make-work projects to combat a disturbing increase in unemployment in its ranks.

Money Study Continues

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

PENTICTON — The B.C. government has refused to complete a joint financial study of municipal government financing, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said here Wednesday.

In his report as president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, Curtis told the annual meeting in Penticton's Peach Bowl Centre that the UBCM will continue with the second part of the study initiated in 1968 and come up with conclusions from the technical data already gained.

The government of B.C. agreed in 1968, said Curtis, "to participate in a joint study to pinpoint financial problems effecting the province, the municipalities and other local units, to determine areas of responsibility and financial resources available and being spent."

A review of data was carried out by a joint committee of government officials and a UBCM technical group, including a professional firm hired for the job.

"To my great disappointment," Curtis told delegates, "I received a letter from Dan Campbell (minister of municipal affairs) last week which said in effect that the government now considers the task completed with the publication of the data collection phase."

Campbell's letter claimed that when the study was initiated "it was conceived that our joint efforts could be concluded following receipt of the statistical material objectively gathered by the technical staffs.

"The intent was, as I understood it," quoted Curtis from the letter "that there would be an objective recitation of the facts, following which anyone could draw such conclusions as they wished on their own responsibility."

Reading from terms of reference for the study, Curtis said the UBCM executive and Campbell were to have responsibility "for the direction in which the study will be pressed and for making final conclusions. ..."

Curtis promised to complete the study.

"We therefore have decided to go ahead on our own — regretfully no longer on a joint basis — and produce what we consider to be this the study."

'AID ONLY OUTSIDE B.C. FULLY UNACCEPTABLE'

Times Staff

PENTICTON — Federal "deals" that aid urban areas outside British Columbia are "completely unacceptable" to the B.C. government, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said here Wednesday.

Under pressure from the Union of B.C. Municipalities to provide more funds for welfare and other urban projects, Campbell promised nothing, but lashed the federal government for spending $2 billion on urban projects in other provinces.

A "growing" and "massive" involvement by Ottawa in urban projects, said Campbell, "has implications for British Columbia that cannot be ignored, because it rests ... on the myth that developing areas need no help."

Campbell was speaking to the opening session of the UBCM annual convention.

Campbell cited a $225 million project in Prince Edward Island and a project to compensate for the "diminishing potash industry" in Saskatchewan as examples of projects he disagreed with.

"The diminishing plywood industry in British Columbia is apparently not part of the national scheme," Campbell said.

Campbell claimed that "pollution control in Halifax is no different than pollution control in Vancouver."

The federal government through these projects "completely ignores equity in all its forms," said Campbell.

The projects are "completely unacceptable to the government of British Columbia ... it will be a complete and utter failure" if it continues.

Instead of the federal involvement on a "special, selected" basis, said the minister, Ottawa should concentrate on overall problems such as housing.

Classics Student Wins Award

Janette Barker, 1565 Wilmot, has won a $150 scholarship from the Provincial Association of Teachers of Classics for attaining high marks on the department of education scholarship Latin examination.

Miss Barker, now attending the University of Victoria, received a mark of 91 per cent in Latin 12 scholarship examination last June, as a student of Oak Bay Senior Secondary.

She received the award by reversion from David Newberry, 249 Wildwood, also an Oak Bay student who achieved a 98 per cent mark on the Latin exam.

Eggs Of Sea Birds Said Contaminated

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) —A University of California zoologist says coastal sea birds are laying soft-shelled, unhatchable eggs with high concentrations of pollutants. Franklin Gress said he found such eggs not only from pelicans, which other scientists say are becoming extinct because of chlorinated hydrocarbon residues, but from cormorants and murres.

UBCM Seeks Citizenship Requirement

Times Staff Reporter

PENTICTON — B.C.'s municipalities want only Canadian citizens to be eligible to sit on city councils.

Delegates to the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities meeting here voted in favor of a resolution sponsored by West Vancouver that would exclude British subjects from councils unless they were also Canadian citizens.

The resolution means nothing unless it is accepted by the provincial government and incorporated in the Municipal Act.

RESOLUTION

The resolution says: "Whereas it is reasonable that only a person who is a Canadian citizen by birth or who has become a Canadian citizen should be eligible to be nominated, elected and to hold office as a member of council," that Canadian citizenship should be a required condition for holding office.

During debate on the resolution, it was pointed out that Canadian citizens are allowed to run for office in Britain because they are British subjects.

Delegates turned down resolutions calling for pensions for council members who have served more than 12 years and calling for a change from two- to four-year terms of office for city aldermen.

Taku Officers Begin Defence

SEATTLE (AP)—Two ships' officers aboard the Alaska ferry Taku, which ran aground near Prince Rupert, B.C., July 29, began their defense Wednesday to charges of negligence.

Cornelius Norden, 52, second mate on the Taku, testified briefly. His attorney, Harold F. Vhugen, said Norden had just gone on watch and had not had time to verify the vessel's position as given him by Thomas Aspinwall, 34, the chief mate, who also is charged with negligence.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1970 —PAGE 27

AUDIENCE GROANED

'I Feel Sorry For the Model'

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

The fashion show audience groaned or giggled.

Commentator Helen Biernes grinned and said "Are you trying to tell us something?"

Later, a model said "Every time I get into one of those things I want to go off in a corner and tell people not to look at me."

The midi went down to defeat by ridicule at the Royal Colwood Golf Club when the Business Ladies Division sponsored Eaton's fashion show.

Another model said "I'll be the last person in Victoria to by a midi," and they all said "Tell people they don't have to buy them."

The audience felt sorry for "the poor girl who gets to model all the midis," and there was a general feeling that the midi is a disaster.

"Reminds you of high school?"

"Yes, unfortunately. Now I know better."

Women at the show were wearing either mini or basic-length dresses (just above the knee) or pantsuits.

Helen Biernes played it safe in a pantsuit, and admitted they were very useful garments this year.

"This has to be the worst year for fashion — it's hopeless."

Blame Is Shared

Who's to blame?

Not the clothing store buyers, who can hardly ignore them. The garment manufacturers have had to produce them.

Part of the blame goes to designers who ran out of ideas for the mini after it became micro. They say it is more fun to engineer something in a longer length — and never mind what the customers think.

(High fashion couturier customers are said to like the way they look.)

Other sources say the textile manufacturers gave the designers a mighty push.

According to Time magazine, the villain of the piece is John Fairchild of Women's Wear Daily, the catty garment trade journal, who is determined to push the new style.

While publisher Fairchild campaigns for the Ugly Look, he may find dictatorial methods aren't working quite so well. In spite of being told they must buy, women are deciding they won't.

There are pockets of acceptance such as Washington, where, as Time points out, "a few senior wives have gratefully followed Mrs. Nixon's return to the midi as a way of dealing with the ravages of time."

Suits Designers

There are lots of theories about the women's firm refusal to buy the midi.

Could it be that it's just too soon after the last long look came and went?

Or could it be that the midi is in no way made to suit women.

It's made to suit designers and garment manufacturers' pocket books — if they win the battle.

They may not.

Women are bright enough to know that "if gorgeous models with perfect figures look awful, we're going to look devastated instead af devastating."

Although the midis and other wild ones got more reaction, other outfits made the Eaton's show a well balanced look at fashions for fall.

The audience cheered the first "ordinary" dress, its hemline still above the knee.

"That's smart. Anyone could wear that."

There were mix-and-match outfits in bright gay colors and classic knits as well.

A pair of knickers, like old-fashioned plus-fours, got a good laugh from the golfers, and the Gaucho look is a great look — on a tall blond model or in a Spanish film.

Other comments overheard at the Colwood show:

"It makes her look old and depressed." (She was, see above.)

"This is the new look? It's the old look in more ways than one."

Re midi coat and boots: "Looks like a Russian about to start dancing."

Pantsuits were generally accepted as great for "apres golf," but one was referred to as "sort of like a pair of sloppy pyjamas."

Describing one pantsuit with a long tunic top, Helen Biernes commented:

". . . of course, you could be old fashioned and wear the top alone as a mini."

Was she trying to tell us something?

fashion flashes

There will be knits everywhere, from couture clothes to mass-produced pants, because knits are soft, easy to move in even when midi length.

There will be a renewed interest in natural fibres, such as pure wools, because they are often softer than man-mades and take the new muted colors better.

You will find a turnover in the whole color range, phasing out the shrieking bolds, bringing in soft, hazy, even muddy and sad colors for a quieter era.

MIDIS IN THE AIR

CP Air has taken the midi route and given stewardesses on executive jet flights their third new uniform of the year. Above, stewardesses Marlene Peitch (left) and Gitte Rahbek pose in the new uniforms at Vancouver International Airport. Coming in a choice of mulled wine, Spanish brick or cognac colors, the outfit is reminiscent of the 1920's—hence the antique car. (CP Air photo.)

Midis Judged Incompatible With East German Aims

EAST BERLIN (Reuters) — Communist East German has come out as a champion of the miniskirt—for ideological reasons.

"We reject extremely long models, mid-calf to ankle length, which are internationally propagated," said Lucia Knoechel, artistic director of the state-owned Fashion Institute.

Midis and maxis "do not agree with our active style of life," she said at a showing here of the institute's unadventurous 1971 spring-summer collection.

"They are incompatible with our task, which is to develop the female personality in socialist society by bringing about a modern style of clothing.

"The main characteristics of our fashion are young, optimistic and purposeful."

For the srping-summer collection, the Fashion Institute drew a strict line between daytime and leisure-time clothes.

SHORT FOR DAY USE

For day wear the short skirt, two to three inches above the kneee, dominated. Some hems reached the knee, some just covered it.

But the main emphasis was on interchangeable clothes-trouser suits and minidresses worn over trousers with knee-length knitted cardigans.

For leisure wear, the institute showed various lengths. Some knee-length dresses had sleeves that ended in a cuff just below the elbow. They were worn with broad-brimmed straw hats.

Long beach wear looked young and colorful.

Made mainly of terry cloth, it included a bright yellow long skirt and short top featuring long cuffed sleeves, and a flower-printed terry cloth dress buttoned half-way down the front.

Evening dresses were long, in rich colors ranging from toffee brown to bright red. Many were made of lace.

Two beautiful long gowns were knitted. One was striped and made of different shades of silver.

But for the 1971 autumn-winter season, the institute is permitting longer skirts.

Two cocktail dresses previewed for the season were midi-length and made of Lurex, one in a brilliant green with red stripes.

This midi-dress with tartan pants to match the trim is not for the socialist female. Featured in the Jean Varon Collection, it is called Moat.

Cross-Canada Gamble Says Midi Will Sell

By JEAN SHARP

Lots of women are going around saying: "I'll never wear a midi; I'll never wear a long skirt." Probably they know all the time that they will, though, if the makers and marketers of clothes decree it.

And they have. The spring shows had many midis, and a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press of fall fashions indicates that Canadian retailers have bought them and expect to sell them.

In Toronto some store owners have told saleswomen they must wear midis at work. One large department store has midi-length uniforms on its elevator operators. While all around town miniskirts and dresses are on sale, the boutiques are showing midis, and — surest sign of all — the occasional midi-length you see worn is on someone chic and attractive.

In other areas, predictions say that the midi will have taken over completely by winter. Though there is some acknowledgement of buyer resistance, only Regina reports minis selling as well as last year. A department store manager there says: "We've sold next to nothing in the new midi length."

HEMLINES DROP

Perhaps by way of easing people into accepting the longer lengths, some centres predict a gradual decline of the hemline. A Vancouver fashion expert says hems in coats and dresses are, on the average, two inches longer than they have been.

In St. John's, Nfld., retailers expect a length two inches above the knee will be the big seller for the early months of the fall. Two inches below and mid-calf are expected to be leaders by winter.

In Montreal, all newspaper ads and store mannequins are showing midis or lengths just below the knee now.

An Edmonton boutique operator says: "Even customers who thought they wouldn't, wind up trying a midi on and buying. It makes a woman feel feminine."

The maxi appears to have disappeared, except for the odd appearance as a rain or sports coat in vinyl or tweed.

Sales of pant-suits are booming. One Toronto fashion writer suggests they represent a way out for women not ready to buy a midi length.

They are around in a variety of styles from skin-fitting jump suits to kindlier, many layered versions worn with midi-length sleeveless vests, jackets cropped at the waist and in-between-length tops.

STYLES CLING

An Edmonton store owner is one of several who say the gaucho look will be big this fall. It features a la Rudolph Valentino, a midi-length flared pant-skirt, blouse, vest and gaucho hat and boots.

With a few such exceptions, styles generally are clinging. There is no more room for the average amount of pudge in a midi style than there has been in minis.

Fabric favorites in Saint John, N.B., are typical in their tendency to cling. They are knits in polyesters or wool, arnel plus nylon, woven dacron and wool, chiffon and crepe.

Fashion colors are purples, burgundy, mauve and plum. Winnipeg retailers lead their list with red, a Vancouver fashion co-ordinator tops hers with brown, but both add the purples.

Ottawa buyers say the basics will be accompanied by heavy belts and chains, big rings and other jewelry, clunky shoes and big purses of suede and leather.

Coats will be knee-to midi-length with belts and buttons, and slightly flared skirts.

Shoes are chunky, with higher, heavier heels than last years. Crushed vinyl or soft patent, metallic heels and bright colors are expected to sell well, though the neutral colors are best-sellers as always.

The knee-high fitted boot should continue to lead the field this year in wet-look vinyl of kid. There is some interest in a mid-calf height.

To buy or not to buy? This mini-skirted girl is no closer to the answer than most of her sisters across Canada. After all, no one really wants to plunge. (CP Photo)

deep and shallow!

Wide and narrow? Right. New Confidets, from Scott — the first tapered sanitary napkins ever: wide in front, narrow in back. Just like natural body contours. And that's why a Confidet fits perfectly. Stays put. Gives you greater comfort than you've ever known before! Deep and shallow? Yes, both. A Confidet is twice as deep in the middle because that's where you need the greatest protection. Yet shallower at the ends, so there's no bulkiness. That means you get the security of a super pad (when you need it) without the worry of embarrassing outlines! It's the extra absorbency that makes Confidets so unique. And so comfortable. Confidets have just recently come to the West. Have you tried them yet?

DOUBLE FACE

All over Europe and America the fashion wise are talking about "double-face." The wild enthusiasm is for the marvelous two-layered fabrics with two right sides, no wrong side. Each side is distinctly different from its counterpart by way of color, texture or design and turnabout is fair play, because this fabric begs to be made reversible.

Double-faced fabrics are composed of two layers either woven or bonded together. Woven layers are held with tiny threads and are separable. Bonded layers are held together with adhesive. Sometimes these layers can be separated at edges, sometimes not.

Stitchery for the double-face, while not difficult, requires out-of-the-ordinary techniques and a good bit of hand sewing, but this is more than compensated for since no interfacings, facings or linings are needed.

To keep problems minimal, here are some things to know:

Double-face is primarily suited to coats and easy-jacketed suits. Simple dresses can be made but, remember, the fabric is bulky.

Select only the simplest designs, the fewer pieces the better. Try to find a pattern with the shape in the seaming. Darts can be made only if fabric is separable. Patterns with gathers, pleats, tucks and intricate detail are simply not suitable. If possible, avoid collars and set in sleeves, these can be used satisfactorily on separate layered fabrics but better still, choose a design where the sleeve is cut in one with front and back or yoke and the neckline is collarless.

No in-seam pockets can be made. Welt pockets are possible if backed on reverse side by a patch pocket. Patch pockets are preferable.

Bound buttonholes are not recommended. Work buttonholes by hand when garment is finished or use loops and buttons or snap fasteners.

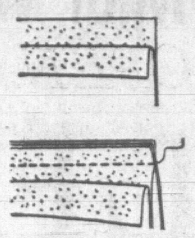
CUTTING: No special technique required. If either side of fabric is napped, cut all pieces in one direction. Allow 1" for construction seams. Allow ⅝" at edges, lower edge of sleeves and hems. No other hem allowance is needed.

MARKING: Mark with tailor's tacks and lines of basting. Do not use tracing wheel and carbon.

SEAMS: Require special handling. Flat fell. Try a sample first.

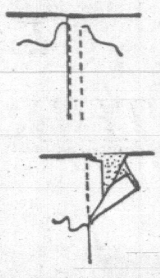
SEPARABLE FABRIC: Separate the layers of one section to be joined by pulling apart from edger. Snip connecting threads if necessary.

Pin under layer of separated section to matching but unseparated section, keeping sides of similar color together. (3 layers in all). Stitch together on seam line.

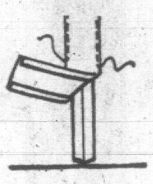


Trim seam in graduated layers. Press seam toward single layer.

Turn in seam allowance on remaining single layer. Pin and slip-stitch over seam concealing stitching. Top stitch along slip-stitched edge and ½" to ¾" inside if desired.



NON-SEPARABLE FABRIC: Strap seams. Join sections with matching sides together. Trim seam to ⅜" and press open. Cut bias strip 1½" wide. Pin lengthwise centre of bias strip along seam. Turn in raw edges of bias and slip-stitch or edge-stitch in place covering seam allowance underneath. Or cover seam with braid.



DARTS: Pull layers apart. Stitch dart on wrong side of each layer. Slash fold of dart, trim and press open. Baste together.

FINISHING EDGES: Separate layers. Turn seam allowances inside towards each other, clipping curves. Baste. Slip-stitch edges together. Top-stitch along edge and ½" to ¾" inside (to match seams) if desired. Prepare patch pockets and outer collar edges the same way.

Similarly prepare neck and armhole edges to insert collars and set-in sleeves. Slip collar and sleeves between separated layers before stitching.

NON-SEPARABLE FABRICS: Trim off seam allowance along seam line. Bind edges with braid or bais.

Shopping List Tells Tale on Modern Life Style

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Take a look at the contents of your neighbor's shopping cart in the supermarket if you want to know what kind of life he or she leads.

Distinct new life styles and consumer attitudes are reflected clearly in food buying patterns, says Chain Store Age, a trade publication, in its annual supermarket sales manual issue.

You hear a lot about the new "singles" society—groups of young adults banding together in large metropolitan areas. The report showed them largely responsible for the current boom in single-portion prepared food products, ranging from frozen casseroles to canned puddings.

In the United States these desserts now represent 42 per cent of all pudding sales, ahead of multi-service canned puddings and packaged mixes —and this after only nine months of national distribution.

If you think dry cereals are just kid stuff, think again. The study said they're the number one breakfast product, up 10 per cent in dollar volume. The figures are for 1969. One Maryland-based buyer said sales do fantastically well with "singles" living five to six to an apartment in Washington, D.C.

Singles and two member households also largely are responsible for pushing sales of eight-slice cheese packs ahead of the 12-slice variety, the survey showed.

The magazine added that the wide acceptance of instant breakfast products indicates both a stepped-up pace of life for the average city-dweller and a breakdown in formal eating patterns. A 300 per cent increase in the informal snack market in the past three years is another clue to irregular family eating habits.

New England buyers told the magazine that instant breakfasts have taken over as part of the convenience market for the 70 per cent of families who don't breakfast together.

The report also showed that families with two or more children are the major consumers, demographically, of these instantly made, instantly consumed foods.

The impact of the new consumerism is reflected in a coming trend to non-code bread dating forecast by manufacturers.

Increasing interest in good nutrition shows up in sales of everything from pasta products and bread to dairy foods and canned fish. The report showed young families responsible for a six to 10 per cent growth rate in premium bread sales last year. Their education and life style makes them more aware of nutrition and less wiling to sacrifice it in the name of economy, the magazine added.

It showed premium pasta products selling faster than less expensive ones for the same reason. But raising pasta sales in the last six months of 1969 were credited largely to budget problems.

Nutrition and good health considerations also led to increased sales of high protein dairy products in all categories, with fat-free milk, cottage cheese and yogurt among the heaviest growth products.

The magazine said 30 to 40 per cent of yogurt users buy the cultured milk product for health or weight-watching, but up to 40 per cent of it is bought by persons—especially teenagers—who eat it because they like it. Seems teenagers consider it a "kookie" snack.

Rising sales of canned fish are indicators both of hard times and growing interest in high-protein diets and good nutrition. They are an outstanding value compared with fresh meat, fresh and frozen fish, lunch meats and cheese.

But paradoxically, convenience foods at premium prices also are booming. Flavored rice sales have risen 80 per cent in the past five years—both regular mixes and gourmet blends such as mushroom and onion, rice pilaf and long grain and wild rice combinations.

Gourmet spice blends in fancy jars are up 10 to 20 per cent over regular box and tin packs. It's the youth market again— as young families' incomes rise, upgrading of food quality becomes a way of life, the magazine reported.

But the fastest growing seetion in the supermarket features pet food. It's not that table scraps aren't good enough for Fido and Kitty any more. The widespread use of convenience foods has virtually eliminated trimmings and leftovers.

KNIT AND CHAT

Plan Projects To Match Time

By MAY MAC LEAN

Now that September is here and the children back to school it is time to think of winter months knitting projects.

If you plan on making Christmas gifts, now is the time to start. The size of the project you plan depends on the amount of time you have — or can arrange to have — for knitting. I myself love to knit or crochet so much that I have to discipline myself to do household chores.

I found, for instance, that during a trip to the west coast, that I could complete one of the vest I am featuring this week in my pattern offer. I knit while I watch my favorite television show and take my knitting when I babysit the children next door. Odd moments like this add up.

If you cannot devote much time, make smaller gifts such as stoles, scarves or tam and scarf sets. One of those top hat toilet tissue holders is often welcome and is easy to make. I have instruction for one on leaflet No. 3-69.

Many of my readers have written asking for knitted vest patterns. I am now able to offer a pattern for light, airy, see-through vests with soft turn-down collars and neat ties at the bustline. Instructions are for sizes 12-14 and 16-18 and call for a double knitting yarn.

To order leaflet No. 7013, send 35 cents in coin or money order (no stamps or personal cheques please) to May Mac Lean, Knit and Chat, care of the Victoria Daily Times. Your order must be accompanied by a stamped, fully addressed return envelope, long if possible. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering and allow at least three weeks for delivery.

This week May Mac Lean offers the instructions for these lacey knitted vests with rolled collars and neat ties at the bustline. Instructions come for two lengths and two sizes.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Sleeping Beauty

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband's parents are vacationing in Europe, and they left the key to their apartment with us so we could water their plants.

My husband's younger brother is a professional man and the father of two children. It was rumored that he is having an affair with his young, single secretary.

Last evening when my husband and I stopped by my in-laws apartment we found this secretary, half-asleep, naked in the bedroom. (My brother in law was not there.) We just said "Hi" to her and left quickly.

Should we say something to my brother-in-law for using his parents' apartment for a love nest?

Should I tell my sister-in-law? Should the in-laws be told when they return? Should anything be said? And if so, to whom? — New Yorkers.

DEAR NEW YORKERS: There is no point in saying anything to anybody. If you said "Hi" to the sleeping beauty, she knows you saw her and she will surely tell her Lothario that his choice of a love nest was for the birds.

DEAR ABBY: I thought your reply to the girl whose fiance thought they should live together before getting married was very old-fashioned.

Before I marry a guy I plan to find out what he's like to live with, (I mean his disposition, habits, etc.) and living together for a while is a perfect way.

Just because two people live together doesn't mean they have to sleep together. — Kay

DEAR KAY: You're right. It doesn't mean they have to—but they usually end up that way. If you want to find out what a guy is really like to live with, (I mean his disposition, habits, etc.) ask his mother.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a very fine nursing home. It's a 50 mile drive to the home and back. When I get there, about half the time I find my mother asleep, and she sleeps the whole time I am there, so she doesn't even know I've been to visit her. And on those rare occasions when she's not sleeping, she confuses me with my cousins and aunts. Sensible conversation is out of the question as she babbles, rambles and is very forgetful. And she's deaf on top of it.I am 48 years old and have started my "change," and those drives take an awful lot out of me. I used to go three times a week, but now, on my doctor's orders, I go only once a week. My problem is my father. He keeps telling me I should go more often, which makes me feel guilty and depressed. I gave the nurses at the home my telephone number and I told them if Mother needs anything to call me and I would come right out with it. What more can I do? — Depressed Daughter

DEAR DEPRESSED: Listen to your doctor. Visit when you are able. And don't feel guilty.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANDREA: Don't trust a man who tells you about his past romances. One day he might be telling others about yours.

What is your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

recipe

TUNARONI

2 cans (6½ oz. size) chunk light tuna
15 oz. can macaroni and cheese
½ cup cubed cheese
¼ cup diced celery
1 tsp. instant minced onion
¼ tsp. seasoned salt
1 Tbsp. lemon juice.
Paprika or chopped pimiento for garnish.

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan or frying pan. Heat gently about 20 minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very hot. Accompany with pineapple cole slaw. (Makes four servings.)

Little Squads Share in Glory

By Reuters

Feyenoord of Holland, the reigning World and European Club champions, were held to a 1-1 draw on their home ground by U.T. Arad of Romania in the major surprise of Wednesday's big European program.

More than 50 matches were played Wednesday in the three European competitions—the European Cup, Cup-Winners' Cup and Fairs Cup—and the little clubs had more than their fair share of the glory.

Hibernians put Malta on the soccer map when they held mighty Real Madrid to a scoreless draw in the Cup-Winners' Cup. Real, six-times European champions, failed to qualify for the European Cup for the first time.

Northern Ireland's Linfield also shook the giants, restricting defending-champion Manchester City to a mere 1-0 Cup-Winners' Cup victory.

NO BRITISH UPSETS

But Britain's 18-club assault on the three European trophies started without any major setbacks and European Cup contenders Everton and Celtic both piled up big first leg leads.

Everton allowed Iceland's Keflavik to score first before winning 6-2 and Celtic, 1967 European champions and losing finalists last season, hammered Finland's Kokkola, 9-0.

Italy's Cagliari made a successful start to their European Cup campaign with a 3-0 victory over French champions St. Etienne.

Top marksman was Bulgarian World Cup player Dimiter Yakimov who scored five goals in C.S.K.A. Sofia's 9-0 Cup-Winners Cup triumph over Valkeakoshen Haka of Finland.

Anderlecht of Belgium and Zeljeznicar Sarajevo of Yugoslavia shared a nine-goal Fairs Cup spectacular in Brussels. Anderlecht won the second leg Fairs Cup match, 5-4, to complete a 9-7 aggregate victory.

Holland, challenging Britain as Europe's top soccer nation, had more than Feyenoord's dismal showing to dampen their spirits. Ajax Amsterdam, European Cup finalists two years ago, could only draw, 2-2, against Nendori Tirana in the soccer outpost of Albania.

Violence was kept well under control and only two players were sent off—Dempsey of Chelsea and Belis of P.A.O.K. Salonica.

Crowds ranged from 1000 in Vienna to see Wiener S.C. play Beveren Waas in the Fairs Cup to the combined crowd of 150,000 who watched two matches in Chorzow, Poland. Ruch Chorzow and GKS Katowice both played Fairs Cup matches at the same time.

LOTUS RACING TEAM WITHDRAWS

MONTREAL (CP) — The Lotus racing team from England has withdrawn from the Canadian Grand Prix for Formula I cars Sunday at the Le Circuit track.

The withdrawal of the two Team Lotus cars was announced by Bob Hanna, executive director of the Canadian Automobile Sports Club.

He received a telegram from the team manager Peter Warr that said "under the circumstances, Team Lotus has no alternative but to withdraw entries from Player's Grand Prix Canada."

Jochen Rindt, the 28-year-old Australian who led the Lotus team, was killed Sept. 5 during practice for the Italian Grand Prix at Monza.

Rindt won five of the last eight Grand Prix and built up a 20-point cushion for the 1970 world driver's championship.

Prior to Tuesday's telegram, Lotus had given verbal assurance that it would enter cars for Argentinian Emerson Fittipaldi and Briton John Miles.

ALBERTA'S FIRST FULL-BLOODED INDIAN LAWYER

This Red Man Is Rare—A Hell-Raising Moderate

By DENNIS BELL

CALGARY (CP) — William Ivan Clarke Wuttunee, first full-blooded Indian admitted to the Alberta Law Society, has a penchant for mod suits, fast cars and fights he almost always loses.

Mr. Wuttunee, one-time president of the now-defunct National Indian Council of Canada, is a rare commodity —a hell-raising moderate in an era of quietly understated militancy among the nation's 250,000 Indians.

A 42-year-old Cree from Saskatchewan's poverty-stricken Red Pheasant reserve, Mr. Wuttunee runs a highly successful law practice from fashionable offices in the downtown Calgary Herald building.

When he talks about Indians he invariably says "they" instead of "we." Perhaps this is because he is a smashing success as a functional part of white society, something that few of Alberta's 27,000 other Indians have in common with him.

Mr. Wuttunee hasn't lived on a reserve for 27 years and speaks contemptuously of those who do. He has even less patience with contemporary Indian leaders.

'JUMP IN RIVER'

"Tell them to go to hell like I do," Mr. Wuttunee advises whites faced with rising demands from leaders such as Harold Cardinal, an arch-enemy who is president of the Indian Association of Alberta.

"They're all a headache. Tell them to go jump in the river. These leaders are exploiting Indian people worse than anyone ever has. They are like a pack of wolves feeding on the carrion of a bygone age."

It was verbal cannonades such as this that earned the silver-haired solicitor the epithet "Uncle Tomahawk" and formal banishment from the Red Pheasant reserve this spring. The move was announced by his nephew Gerald Wuttunee, who said:

"He is a paid-off tool of the Alberta Establishment. It is hard for me to say this, but my uncle has been bought out."

When Mr. Wuttunee told reporters he would challenge the banishment by returning to the reserve, the Red Pheasant band council ordered road blocks and increased police patrols.

Discretion proved to be the better part of valor and the band council decree went unchallenged. Mr. Wuttunee later partially recanted his hard line on Indian rights, but the ban is still in effect.

Mr. Wuttunee is a strange blend of quasi-mystical Indian beliefs and hard-headed white business sense. A literate, urbane man, he proudly boasts that his 14-year-old daughter Wanda lends money to her younger brothers and sisters and charges them interest.

CUTS DASHING FIGURE

He cuts a dashing figure in expensive bell-bottomed suits, gunning around Calgary in a cream-colored fastback sports car. Endowed with strongly handsome Indian features, Mr. Wuttunee could well have stepped from the set of a typically Hollywood remake of Geronimo.

He credits his success in breaking out of the reserve poverty cycle to his father, "who had the brains to leave the reserve with the family in 1943, move to the city and get a job."

"I was raised in white society, we had no problems in integrating into it. I finished high school and won a scholarship to university."

After studies at McGill University in Montreal Mr. Wuttunee returned to the University of Saskatchewan and earned a law degree in 1954. He subsequently moved to Alberta and was admitted to the bar here in 1962.

During this period Mr. Wuttunee evolved into an outspoken advocate of Indian rights and a harsh critic of the federal government's Indian policy in a time when few others were speaking out.

At one point he even dared attack the sacrosanct Calgary Stampede far "showing life among the Indians as it was in 1905 despite our many cultural advances."

OUTLOOK CHANGED

Indian leaders across the country, working to form the National Indian Council of Canada, took notice of the voice in the wilderness and tapped him to head the new organization.

Half way through his term as NICC president Mr. Wuttunee's outlook on the Indian problem changed. He credited this to a conference he attended sponsored by the Moral Re-Armament movement, often linked to the political and philosophical far right.

"After attending that conference I realized I had to overcome my bitterness. The National Indian Council had been formed to unite the Indians in bitterness . . . we had decided to separate from the white man if necessary.

"I apologized for leading my friends astray."

With the change in Mr. Wuttunee's outlook the fortunes of the NICC took a nosedive. The organization itself was an unwieldly amalgam of treaty Indians, non-treaty Indians and Metis. All three groups had differing priorities and methods.

The other factor was a strikingly beautiful Mohawk fashion model named Kahn-Tineta Horn, leader of the militant faction of the NICC. Miss Horn's battles with Mr. Wuttunee blew the organization apart.

Miss Horn called Mr. Wuttunee a "traitor to his people." Mr. Wuttunee responded by taking back her title of "National Indian Princess," as well as bouncing her off the NICC's Indian centennial committee, which was then drafting pavilion plans for Expo 67.

RETREATED TO LAW

By the time Centennial Year rolled around the NICC was finished and Mr. Wuttunee retreated to Calgary and his law practice.

A truce was arranged on all fronts by the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada, a predominantly white group. Those NICC leaders that were still talking to one another agreed to split into two separate bodies—the National Indian Brotherhood and the Metis Society of Canada.

The militants, many of whom got their combat experience in the NICC, continued in the ascendancy but Mr. Wuttunee steered clear of the kinetic world of Indian politics.

He jumped back into the fight in June, 1969, when Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien issued his long-awaited white paper on the native population.

The white paper, damned virtually unanimously by Indian leaders across the country, advocated dissolution of the Indian affairs department in five years, surrendering of jurisdiction to the provinces and taxation of reserve lands.

Mr. Wuttunee sided with Mr. Chretien and tore into the critics of the white paper with a slashing rhetoric that stunned and infuriated Indian leaders across the prairies, culminating in the Red Pheasant reserve ban.

On treaty and aboriginal aren't worth the paper they're written on. You cannot rerights: "One of the very basic facts is that the treaties write or negotiate on a document 100 years old because conditions have changed so drastically."

CALLS HIM IMMATURE

On Harold Cardinal and his best-seller The Unjust Society: "This book was written by an immature Indian leader 25 years old. He is dancing to strings being pulled by the extreme left and the rebellious people influencing Indians throughout this country."

On Indian poverty: "The people who are really badly off are the poor whites because the Indian can always go back to the reserve. The Indians have access to free education, free room and board, free clothes and free spending money not available to other people. This puts them into the category of year-round vacationers."

Universities Coping With Enrolment Onslaught

By RON SUDLOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Computers are still digesting mountains of student enrolment applications across Canada, but university administrators say all qualified students will be admitted this fall.

However, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press has shown that some universities have been forced to put ceilings on some specialty courses because of a lack of facilities.

One significant indication that universities will be able to cope with expected record enrolments is that none polled in the survey said it had raised its academic requirements for entrance.

These ranged from completion of Grade 12 in British Columbia to a 70-per-cent average in that grade for McGill University in Montreal.

Most universities reported more applications than they could handle for first-year students, but spokesmen were quick to point out that many students had applied to more than one university.

Richard Fleming, admissions officer for Carleton University in Ottawa, seemed to echo the view of his colleagues across the country when he said qualified students "will find a niche somewhere" although not all may be accepted in programs to which they applied.

Several institutions said a summer of rotating postal strikes delayed processing of applications and made their enrolment pictures fuzzy, but none said a qualified student would be turned away.

Helping universities find niches for their students are multi-million-dollar building programs that are reflecting changes in education trends.

Although millions are being used to finance buildings such as residences and gymnasiums, more and more is being spent on centres that will focus on scientific studies.

Medical centres are being constructed at the University of Alberta in Edmonton and the University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon.

Science centres will open soon at the University of New Brunswick, Memorial University of Newfoundland and Dalhousie University in Halifax.

McGill and the University of Ottawa will soon have child study centres.

The most costly project is at the University of Toronto where $41 million will be spent on a humanities and social sciences research library and a building for the school of library sciences.

By dovetailing the two projects, a reference library will be created second in size in North America to the Library of Congress in Washington.

Next month, U of T will officially open its $36 million medical sciences building which was completed earlier this year. Parts of it have been occupied since 1969.

Here is a look at enrolment pictures and building programs across the country:

Multi-Million-Dollar Building Programs Launched

NEWFOUNDLAND

Memorial University in St. John's has applications from 3,017 first-year students but only about 1,800 are expected to register. There is room for 2,300. Last year's total enrolment was 4,909 and this year's is expected to reach 5,200.

The biggest building project at Memorial is a planned $1.7 million extension to the sciences building. The money is available but a construction date has not been set.

NOVA SCOTIA

Dalhousie University has received 2,800 applications for first-year entrance and a spokesman says no qualified student will be turned away. This figure will be trimmed when results of final high school exams are applied to application forms.

The university will be able to accept about 1,600 more freshmen this year than in the 1969-70 academic year. A record total enrolment of 6,500 is expected, about 900 more than the last academic year.

Dalhousie has the largest building program of any Nova Scotia university with 13 projects worth $88 million either under construction or in the planning stage.

NEW BRUNSWICK

With the exception of Mount Allison University at Sackville, New Brunswick's universities will show enrolment increases. Mount Allison has held its enrolment at 1,300 for years.

About 650 will be accepted for first-year studies at the University of Moncton where enrolment is expected to climb to a record 1,755, up from 1,503 last year. At the University of New Brunswick, where administrators say not all applicants will be admitted to the faculty of their choice, enrolment will reach a record 5,100, compared with 5,068 last year.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Enrolment at the University of Prince Edward Island is expected to climb to 1,750 from 1,556 last year. Like Memorial in Newfoundland, UPEI will accept students on the basis of results of final high school exams. In the past, only results of provincial examinations counted.

QUEBEC

In Montreal, McGill will have 1,360 freshmen compared with 1,650 last year. Next year's freshman class will drop to 900 because English junior colleges are taking over the first two years of teaching from universities.

Sir George Williams received 4,800 first-year applications but expects a total of 1,200. An admissions officer said "a large, large percentage" of those applying will never complete their applications because they will decide to go to university elsewhere or fail to meet the 60-per-cent average for entrance. Loyola College expects to enroll 1,100 first-year students.

McGill has the most ambitious building program. It includes a $3.7 million education building; a $5 million building for faculty of management and the planned $5.3 million Burnside Hall which will house academic offices as well as classrooms.

ONTARIO

Most universities in Ontario expect a slight enrolment increase, but so far only the University of Waterloo has indicated it might limit enrolment in its art faculty.

Western Ontario at London will see its enrolment of 12,020 of last year rise to about 14,000 this fall. Queen's in Kingston, which had an enrolment of 7,400 last year, expects a modest increase. In Ottawa, Carleton expects about a 1,200 increase to 8,400 while the University of Ottawa will swell from 6,973 to nearly 7,200 this year.

McMaster University in Hamilton will cope with its rising enrolment with a $100 million building program that will stretch over the next few years. Biggest project for the university of 7,000 students is a $56 million health sciences centre.

The University of Toronto, which also has a mammoth building program, expects 5,600 freshmen this year and a total student population of 27,300, compared with 26,344 last year.

York University, also in Toronto, will grow to 20,000 full- and part-time students. Coinciding with the growth is a $3 million lecture hall and a $7 million library to be ready for this fall.

The University of Ottawa is spending $9 million on its science and engineering building and $2 million on its child study centre, and Carleton University's $3.75 million student centre has just been completed.

Sciences Research Library Second Only to Congress Library

SASKATCHEWAN

The University of Saskatchewan expects a total enrolment of about 10,000 at its Saskatoon campus and another 4,750 in Regina. The prime building project at the Saskatoon campus is an $8 million medical building addition. The college of education opened a $6 million building in June.

ALBERTA

The University of Alberta, where enrolment is expected to reach a record, 19,500—up from 17,342 last year — has four buildings under construction worth an estimated $12.5 million.

The University of Lethbridge is expecting a 100-student increase to 1,500 full-time students this fall and the University of Calgary's attendance is expected to increase to 9,260—up from 7,962 last year.

Biggest building expenditure at the University of Calgary will be a $25 million medical school which will be completed in 1971.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Two B.C. universities are expecting enrolment decreases as a program of two-year colleges continues to grow.

Anticipating decreases were the University of British Columbia, which expects its enrolment to dip to 20,648 from a record 20,767 last year, and Notre Dame University in Nelson which expects 400 students compared with a high of 641 last year.

Simon Fraser University in the Vancouver suburb of Burnaby expects enrolment to remain at about 5,500 while the University of Victoria anticipates a 500-student increase to 5,500.

Storm Kills Man

EDMONTON (CP) — Reports received here Wednesday say one man was killed in a storm Monday which washed a trailer one mile across a small island 125 miles northwest of Inuvik, N.W.T.

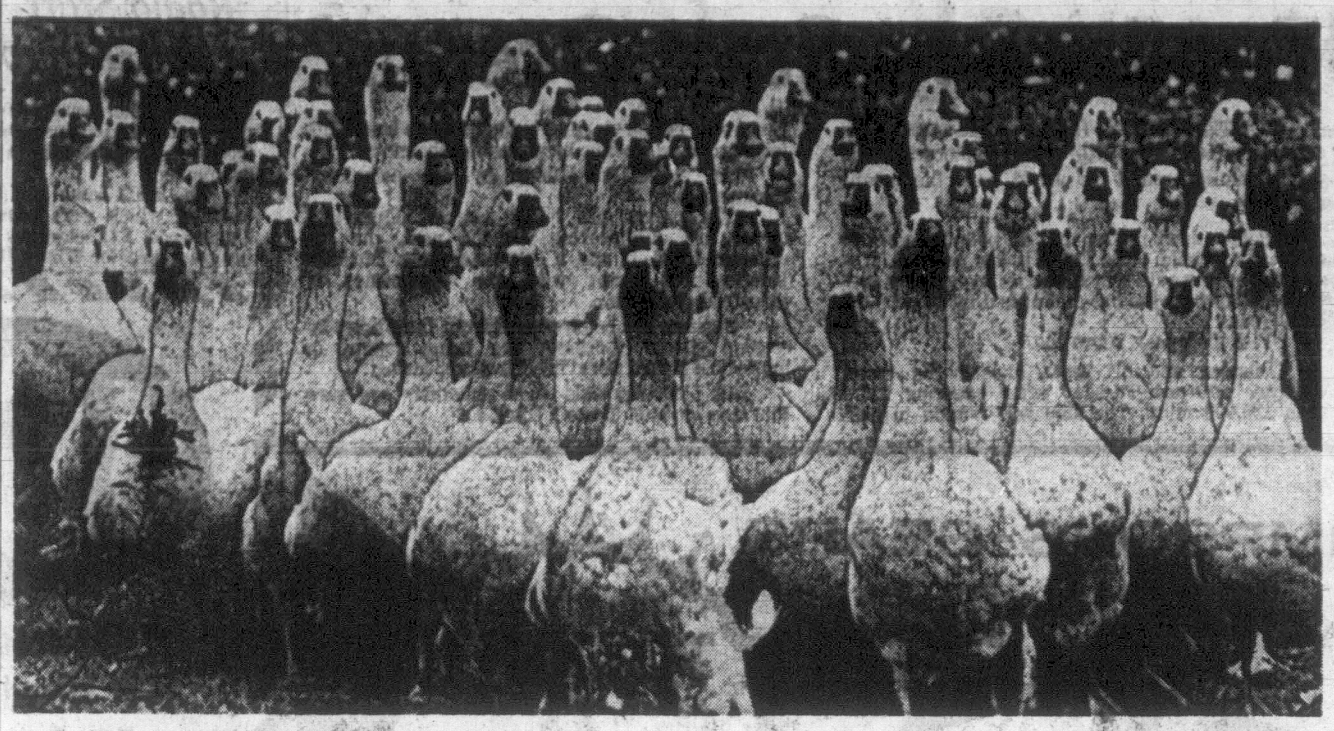
Reinie Smit, 24, of Leamington, Ont., died in the storm, but his companion, identified only as Peter Allan, was rescued.

RCMP said the two were employed by Computer Devices of Canada Ltd. of Ottawa.

The two men sent out a distress signal when their trailer began to float in the rising water. They later abandoned it for the safety of a nearby radio beacon tower until the water receded. The temperature was 10 degrees above zero and winds reached 80 miles an hour.

Police said an Imperial Oil Company aircraft answered the distress call and dropped sleeping robes and food, but they landed on the far side of a nearby stream. Smit fell into the icy water while attempting to recover the food.

A helicopter evacuated Allan and the body of Smit a few hours later.



'SOMEHOW, WE STILL FEEL INSECURE.' Doomed gaggle of fat geese stick close together as they stroll around the farm of Phares Martin at St. Jacobs, Ont., near Kitchener. Soon they will go marching together to the chopping block for Thanksgiving feasts on Oct. 12. (CP Wirephoto.)

VANCOUVER (CP) — A photo analyst testified Wednesday that the collision between the British Columbia ferry Queen of Victoria and the Soviet freighter Sergey Yesenin appeared to have happened in the middle of the shipping channel through Active Pass.

The expert, Cyril Kelly, a civilian employee of the national defence department, based his testimony before a federal inquiry on his analysis of a color photograph taken of the two ships four seconds after the collision.

Three ferry passengers were killed in the Aug. 2 collision in the narrow, zig-zag channel.

Kelly explained his methods of calculation and said they were accurate to within 50 feet.

Earlier, testimony by members of the freighter crew and by Capt. D. G. Crabbe of Victoria, the Canadian pilot aboard the freighter Aug. 2, placed the freighter on the Mayne Island (starboard) side of the pass. They said the ferry was in the wrong side of the channel.

Testimony by ferry crew members and by Capt. James Pollock of the Queen of Victoria was the opposite — that the ferry was correctly on the Galiano Island side of the channel and that the freighter had made a "wide" entry into the pass.

Kelly's evidence, marked on a chart, indicated the collision took place about midway between the positions given by the two sides of the controversy.

The photograph he analyzed was taken by A. J. Austin of Coquitlam, from the Galiano side of the channel.

Too Late to Save Oceans?

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Jacques Yves Cousteau, back from 3½ years' exploration and movie-making around the world, says the oceans are dying.

"People don't realize that all pollution goes to the seas," he said. "The Earth is less polluted. It is washed by the rain which carries everything into the oceans where life has diminished by 40 per cent in 20 years.

"Fish disappear. Flora too."

Cousteau and his crew, aboard the vessel Calypso, returned Tuesday after covering more than 155,000 miles. The ship will remain in port two weeks before starting to look for the best route for a proposed pipeline between Algeria and Sicily.

"An excess of fishing is also pollution," Cousteau said.

"The oceans are being scraped. Eggs and larvae are disappearing. In the past, the sea renewed itself. It was a complete cycle. But this balance was upset with the appearance of industrial civilization.

"Shrimps are being chased from their holes by electric shocks. Lobsters are being sought in impossible places. Coral itself is disappearing."

But Cousteau said some scientists are sure that it is too late. "I don't think so."

Radio Staff Tripped Out By Gift From Listener

ROME, Ga. (UPI) — Three employees of a radio station were recovering Wednesday from unexpected LSD trips — the gift of a listener who wished to express his "appreciation for the programming."

The LSD came in 10 bottles of soft drinks, some of which were consumed by newsman Bill Underwood, 22; secretary Nancy Nichols, 20, and program director Windy Miller, 31.

McGeer Comment Deplored

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Bird, counsel for the B.C. Ferry Authority, Wednesday accused provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer of making "deplorable and irresponsible" statements about the ferry service.

He said that if McGeer makes any more of them, he should be called to explain them before the current federal inquiry into the Aug. 2 collision of a ferry and a Soviet freighter.

McGeer said Tuesday he had sent a wire to Donald Jamieson, federal transport minister, asking "immediate investigation into the operating procedures" of the ferry service.

He said he sent the wire in the interests of public safety and that public confidence had been shaken by ferry mishaps, the collision and the grounding of another ferry last weekend.

Bird, representing the ferry authority at the collision inquiry, said one of the questions before the inquiry is that of operating procedures.

"I don't know what McGeer knows about public safety. Even for a politician I consider his statements deplorable, irresponsible and also contemptuous of the proceedings of this court (the inquiry)."

County Judge E. J. C. Stewart, inquiry commissioner, said the timing of McGeer's statements was "unfortunate" but nothing should be done about them at the moment.

Nixon Urges Crackdown On Campuses

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — President Nixon made a rare visit to a college Wednesday and said "destructive activists" should be cleared from the nation's campuses. He was heckled by a small group of the youths he criticized.

In some of his toughest remarks so far on radical dissent on campus, the President told a Kansas State University audience of 15,500 that responsible students must "stand up and be counted."

"Only they can save higher education in America," Nixon said. "It cannot be saved by government. To attempt to blame government for all the woes of the universities is to seek an excuse, not a reason, for their troubles."

As he spoke, a group of youths shouted obscenities.

"The destructive activists at our colleges and universities are a small minority," Nixon said over the hecklers' remarks.

Woman Wanted Private Hearing—Police

TALKING outside the Toronto courtroom where an inquiry is being held into the connections between Ontario Provincial Police officials and underworld figures are Morton Shulman, NDP member who sparked the probe, and witness Mrs. Elizabeth Citron. (CP Wirephoto).

TORONTO (CP) — Two Burlington, Ont., police officers and a lawyer testified Wednesday that Mrs. Elizabeth Citron requested that a charge she had been threatened with a gun be heard in private.

In earlier testimony at an inquiry into alleged improper relationships between provincial police and persons of known criminal activity, Mrs. Citron said she agreed to a private hearing but did not initiate the suggestion.

Sgt. Clare Richardson and Constable Robert Alferink testified they were standing in a corridor outside the office of Crown Attorney Douglas Latimer at Milton, Ont., and heard a voice that they presumed to be Mrs. Citron's ask for privacy in the case.

They testified she said she made the request to spare Mrs. George Duke in the case. Mrs. Duke, a friend of Mrs. Citron's, is the wife of the man Mrs. Citron accused of threatening her with a gun.

Ernest Hennessey, who represented Duke at the Milton hearing and who was in the Crown attorney's office with him and Mrs Citron, agreed that the request came from Mrs. Citron. He said he also was anxious to avoid publicity for the sake of the Citrons as well as Mrs. Duke, whom he described as a "well-known and well-loved person in Burlington."

It was Mrs. Citron's criticism of the handling of the case that led to the allegations by Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for High Park, that Duke was on friendly terms with OPP officers and with men associated with organized crime.

Earlier Wednesday, the inquiry under Mr. Justice Campbell Grant of the Ontario Supreme Court was in recess while a three-judge panel of the Ontario Court of Appeal rejected an application by Duke's present counsel, Harvey Daiter, to stop the hearings.

Mr. Daiter argued that Mr. Justice Grant had harmed the legal rights of individuals by not adjourning for a Court of Appeal ruling when he was asked to defer the identification of a woman alleged to be the mistress of Duke, a Burlington millionaire.

However, in dismissing his motion with costs, Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder of the Court of Appeal said that the court has given widest discretion to commissioners of public inquiries concerning questions that can be asked and the determination of their relevance.

"If that were not so, the fundamental purpose of any inquiry would be frustrated," he said. "You could stifle these proceedings by raising trifling objections."

After the hearing reopened, Mr. Justice Grant gave permission to Dr. Shulman to comment on the terms of the inquiry. He also said he would allow the politician to question witnesses—if the questions were relevant and affected Dr. Shulman.

Gripping Drama In Old Bailey

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Turmoil in the Middle East still occupies most headlines, but there's nothing that grabs the attention of the London public more than a classic murder trial at the Old Bailey, and the McKay case, entering its fourth day today, is no exception.

To inhabitants of Sherlock Holmes' city that has produced such legendary villains as Jack the Ripper and Dr. Crippen, the most gripping drama comes not in threats but in the cosy, panelled No. 1 courtroom of that grey stone building under the gilded figure of justice.

Each day a queue of Londoners forms outside the Old Bailey —properly known as the Central Criminal Courts—for tickets to the public benches in No. 1 court. There, Attorney-General Sir Peter Rawlinson is conducting the prosecution in the bizarre case labelled by some newspaper scribes the "murder without a body."

On trial are two Trinidad-born brothers, Arthur and Nizamodeen Hosein, respectively a tailor and a farm laborer, who live at a remote farm in Hertfordshire guarded by two fierce dogs. They are charged with the kidnapping and murder of Muriel McKay, 55, wife of a newspaper executive, and of demanding £1 million in ransom from her husband, Alick McKay.

Both have pleaded not guilty to the charges—seven in all.

BODY MISSING

Mrs. McKay, whose husband is deputy chairman of the mass-circulation Sunday News of the World, disappeared from her South London home last Dec. 20. Her body has not been found.

The prosecution alleged at the opening of the trial Monday that Mrs. McKay had been kidnapped in mistake for Mrs. Rupert Murdoch, wife of the Australian proprietor of the News of the World and Sun newspapers.

On Wednesday, a leading expert in Scotland Yard's fingerprints bureau testified that a palm-print found on a ransom note for £1 million was that of Arthur Hosein and that a fingerprint on a note from Mrs. McKay also was his.

DIVE TO SUNKEN BARGE DELAYED

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — Brisk 27-knot winds churned up choppy seas in the Gulf of St. Lawrence early today, delaying indefinitely the descent of a diving bell to the wreck of the oil-laden barge Irving Whale.

A transport department spokesman said it was not known when the diving bell, with its two-man crew, would make its first plunge to the wreck 240 feet below the surface of the gulf 35 miles off northwestern Prince Edward Island.

The divers will secure large canvas bags over the open ends of ventilating pipes through which bunker C oil is escaping. The rate of flow has slowed because of the 30-degree water temperatures.

Meanwhile, a large slick which developed following the sinking Sept. 7 of the 2,300-ton Whale has been reduced by sea action and dispersant chemicals.

H-Bombs Power Source?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hydrogen bombs exploded in layers of hot rock two miles underground may provide a pollution-free future power source for producing electricity.

The project, called Plowshare-geothermal, was conceived by the American Oil Shale Corp. of Salt Lake City. It sought to line up financial backing at a briefing for utility company executives—also attended by government officials—which ended Wednesday.

Natural steam and hot springs have been tapped for power in various parts of the world, but the yield has been too limited and too expensive for large-scale use.

Plowshare-geothermal, named for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's Plowshare program of developing peaceful uses for nuclear energy, proposes to use a series of hydrogen bombs to fracture the dry, hot rock that exists under portions of 10 western states at depths beginning at 10,000 feet.

Water would be piped into the fractured rock and turned to steam by the 350-degree heat.

Captured as it flowed to the surface through the fracture, the superheated steam would be piped to the turbines of a conventional electrical generating station. The steam would then condense into water, which would be recirculated.

The Salt Lake City firm has commissioned a feasibility study in which the AEC is participating. Results of the study will be ready next February.

Hearing Opens

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — A total of 17 witnesses, most of them promoted, demoted or suspended highways department employees, testified Wednesday in the opening day of a preliminary hearing into charges against two former highways department officials.

Raymond Percy Levi Daniels, 47, faces five charges of breach of trust and two charges of theft in connection with incidents which occurred during his tenure as highways engineer in this Western Manitoba community.

A second man, Ronald James Aube, 38, faces one charge of breach of trust, but evidence in that preliminary hearing is not expected to start before Friday.

Manning 'Welcome'

RED DEER (CP) — The progressive Conservative party would welcome former Alberta Premier Ernest Manning if he decided to run for political office again, Robert Thompson, Conservative MP for Red Deer, said Wednesday. The former national leader of the Social Credit party was commenting on a petition being circulated in Central Alberta in hopes of getting Manning back into politics. Manning has not commented.

Challenge Accepted

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — This city's "challenging mayor," Harry Veiner, has done it agoin. Mayor Veiner has challenged Calgary Mayor Rod Sykes to a harness-horse racing match and Sykes has accepted. The race will be held Sunday in Calgary. Veiner earned his reputation as a challenger by cutting sugar cane in Cuba, kicking a soccer ball in Dundee, Scotland, shearing sheep in New Zealand and racing saddle horses. He also wrestled un alligator in Florida.

Talks Too Slow

EDMONTON (CP) — George de Rappard of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Junior Chamber of Commerce, says the Jaycees are concerned about the lack of tangible progress in federal-provincial talks on the constitution. He said some delays result from lack of continuity in federal and provincial representatives due to elections. He suggested opposition leaders be allowed to sit in on the conferences as observers to facilitate continuity.

Booking Cancelled

EDMONTON (CP) — Parks official A. V. Pettigrew Wednesday cancelled a Sept. 28 booking of the Kinsmen Field House for a closed-circuit television showing of the nude musical Oh! Calcutta! Pettigrew said he "didn't think a recreation facility like the Kinsmen Field House should be used for a production of this nature." He said he had not seen the play. It is being piped into Edmonton by a private promoter.

Time to Bring Plants Indoors

By HILDA BEASTALL

At the weekend we thought we were the only area to have ground frost in early morning. Roofs on the west side of houses were completely white, yet everybody we spoke to just looked vague about it. During the week over the full moon period, the pattern was more established, making it necessary to bring indoors any house plants grown outdoors during summer.

Hilda

Poinsettias, Crassula argentea (Jade-tree), Grevillea robusta (Silk-oak), and any cacti or other succulents which normally are house plants, will benefit from the summer spent outside. Their growth will be firmer, less stringy and tender, and at this time of the season you notice they take a temperature of 38 deg. F. without flinching.

The reason is the gradually built-in resistance gained by living outdoors in summer. At the other end of the scale, putting house plants outdoors in April will cause leaf and bud drop, if nothing worse. And it happens in temperatures higher than 35 deg.

The cause of the damage is shock in moving the plants from 75 deg. indoors with comparatively poor light and no air movement to the strong outdoor light, with continual breezes and probably 40 to 50 deg. F. temperature readings.

Since ground temperatures have already been to 25 deg. F. in some parts of Greater Victoria, it is a wise plan to clean the potted plants of soil splashes, look them over for any obvious insects which might be hiding in the drainage holes of the pots, and take the plants into the coolest, lightest place you can find indoors.

This may be a basement rumpus room, but not where the drapes are drawn over the windows all day. The light will be too poor. A sunny but cool utility room is good if not already chock full of utilities!

The old fashioned, delightfully relaxing sunrooms are ideal. With complete wall space of glass on three sides, the light and coolness and air is just what newly brought-in pot plants need. Later, with the sun warmth augmented by house heat, the plants thrive there in winter too.

If home designers and builders would get together and incorporate these sunrooms into present construction plans, indoor gardeners would stay with live potted plants, instead of having to give them up gradually for lack of light and air.

Remember to water more carefully when the plants are back indoors, and don't forget the humidity pan of stones and water to add a little moisture in the air around the plants.

Teen-Agers Become Involved

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Keefe, a Phoenix, Ariz., teen-ager, didn't want to spend the summer "sitting at home all day, doing nothing." So he volunteered to work with disadvantaged youngsters in Operation Leap, a government-financed anti-poverty program.

"It's involvement," said Tom. "Once you get involved, you just don't want to quit."

Tom is one of thousands of youngsters across the United States who got involved this summer — in cleaning up their communities, in helping the disadvantaged, in working with the handicapped, in bridging the generation gap.

The teenagers worked for little or no pay, sometimes bypassing more lucrative summer jobs.

Bill Kux, 17, a high school senior, said he turned down a job as a camp counsellor to teach dramatics to inner-city youngsters in Detroit "because I thought I could do more good."

After spending five days a week for six weeks with the youngsters, Bill said, "The kids are really great. I made a lot of friends."

John Turner of Glendale, Ariz., another Operation Leap volunteer, explained his involvement: "If I can help just one child to start out and be able to compete on at least an even scale with the student who has had normal opportunity, then I've really accomplished something great."

Clean-up and conservation programs drew the attention of youths in many areas.

About 2,000 young people worked to clean up the banks of the Little Miami River near Cincinnati, taking refuse to a city incinerator and hauling away abandoned cars.

A group of high school students in Raleigh County, W. Va., planted 57,000 trees and a Boy Scout troop in Blue Creek, W. Va., leased 500 acres of land from a coal company for $1 and worked to turn it into a recreation area.

About 45 volunteers from the Neighborhood Youth Corps went to work with rakes, shovels and brooms on a section of the south Bronx in New York.

"Fantastic," said a police sergeant of the clean-up. "I've never seen anything like this."

Youth in California tried to explain their ideas to the over-30 generation through the campus Committe to Bridge the Gap. College students visited homes and explained their ideas to adults, stessing the need to open up lines of communication. A spokesman said about 2,000 youngsters were involved in the program and had reached 11,500 adults since early May.

The youthful volunteeers said they get as much as they give.

"They teach me something and I teach them something." said Howard Ching, 15, of the blind people he worked with this summer at the Ho'opono Rehabilitation Centre in Honolulu.

"It's really exciting. I just get the neatest feeling. I can't explain it." That's from Kathy Barnum, 16, who was a volunteer counsellor at a day camp near Pittsburgh for retarded children.

Organizers of volunteer grups said they had more trouble getting adult sponsors than teen-age workers.

"We are finding that students more than their parents are probably placing a greater value on their time, not in dollars and cents, but in terms of involvement with the problems of the community," said Jo Larsen, director of Seattle's volunteer bureau.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

There is no question but that deception in the play of the cards is sometimes necessary if one is to obtain the optimum result. But there are occasions when a player tries to deceive when he should not have done so — and his opponents capitalize on it.

The latter was the case in today's deal, in which our South declarer was ill-advised in attempting his deceptive tactic. Can you find South's misapplied play? Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

East put up the heart queen on the opening lead, and South captured the trick with his ace. He then led a low club, East's ace taking dummy's king. After a few moments of thought, East played back the diamond jack. Before declarer could turn around, the defenders had cashed four diamond tricks. What was declarer's error?

When declarer won the opening heart lead with his ace, he gave the show away to East. He should have won the trick with his king.

Everybody around the table knew that West had started with either four or five hearts. (He had led the three-spot, as his fourth highest. If West didn't have the deuce, then he had exactly four hearts; and if he had the deuce, then he was the possessor of five hearts.)

Thus East knew that South had either three or four hears, headed by the ace (which had made its appearance at trick one). Why, reasoned East, did South, holding, let us say, the A-x-x of hearts, not decline to take his ace until the third lead of hearts had been made? When South next drove out the club ace — as it was obvious he was going to do— then if East possessed the club ace and only three hearts (originally), the latter would be unable to lead back a heart to West.

East therefore concluded that South was not worried about the heart suit; and that South's justification for taking the heart ace at trick one must have been that he also had the heart king. Hence East's decision not to play back a heart at trick three, and his shift to a diamond.

Had South won the opening lead with the king, East would have had a serious problem. After all, West could have started with the A-J-9-3-2 of hearts, with South possessing the K-8-4.

Golddiggers To Brighten Jaycee Fair

The 10 girls that appeared in the Dean Martin summer replacement show Golddiggers on U.S. television will also star in the 1971 Victoria Jaycee Fair next May 17-22.

Jaycee officials announced a contract has been signed with the Golddiggers.

The TV show named for the girls earned the highest ratings of any replacement program in June, July and August, beating such shows as the Smothers Brothers.

The Jaycees said the girls will give two shows daily during the six days of the fair, at 4 and 10 p.m. Their emcee will be Johnny O'Brien, who travels with them whenever they go on tour.

Tenders Called For Main Line

Tenders have been called for more work on the new sewerage main line running to the outfall now being placed into position at Macaulay Point, Esquimalt.

Known as the Admirals section of the Esquimalt trunk sewer, the work calls for installing 3,400 feet of 14-inch and 5,110 feet of 12-inch asbestos cement forcemain and 920 feet of 20- and 14-inch fibreglass forcemain.

Tenders will be opened at the Capital Regional District offices Tuesday.

Music Store Had Fire

With a look of desperation etched on his face, this New Westminster fireman strains to contain the fire and smoke billowing from the rear entrance of the Kelly-Deyong music centre on Clarkson Street. City firemen fought for over an hour to contain the fire which apparently centred around an electrical outlet in the third floor of the store. No estimate of damage was given.

KELLY DEYONG HAD A BIG FIRE

OUR STORE IN NEW WESTMINSTER HAD A FIRE RECENTLY WHICH ALMOST COMPLETELY GUTTED THE STORE

SYMPATHY SALE

THIS GIGANTIC SALE STARTS THURSDAY, SEPT. 17 AT ALL STORES

We had a big fire in our New Westminster store . . . it was almost completely gutted. Every manager and manageress in the Kelly Deyong chain felt real sorry for Gordon Kaufman, manager at New Westminster. How could they help him for his loss of revenue for an indefinite period? They came up with the answer in a "SYMPATHY SALE." All are donating a portion of their profits during this great event to assist Gordon Kaufman. That's co-operation . . . the kind of co-operation that is prevalent in Kelly Deyong. As the values are truly outstanding, you, our customers, are enjoying not only saving money, but are assisting our staff to help a fellow manager in distress.

The gratitude and appreciation in our hearts can never be fully expressed. — Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Barrett and Family, Kamloops, B.C. Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Barrett and Family, Victoria, B.C.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MAPES — Merl (Molly) N. Mapes. In loving memory of my beloved husband, dear dad and grandpa, who passed away Sept. 17, 1969.

Always so true, unselfish and kind,
Few in this world, his equal you'll find;
A beautiful life that came to an end,
He died as he lived — everybodys friend.

—Always remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife Eva; Bernice and Maurice and grandchildren Garth, Karen and Merle.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

SPECIAL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Volcano. This half-hour news special focuses on the birth of Surtsey, a volcanic island which rose from the sea off the south coast of Iceland in 1963, the first such birth of an island in this century.

★ ★ ★

DEAN MARTIN SHOW. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10 p.m., Channel 5. (Season's Premiere) Come September and Orson Welles walks on to launch Dean Martin's sixth season — it's becoming a tradition. Welles clowns with Dino in a pet maternity ward sketch and roars a bit imitating a famous singer. Petula Clark and Dean offer a happiness medley, little Laurie Ichino does "I'd Like to Get to Know You," and Joey Bishop becomes a construction worker celebrating 12 years with hard-hat pal Martin. Another show addition is Kay Medford, aboard to play her favorite-mother role to pianist Ken Lane.

★ ★ ★

FAMILY AFFAIR. 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30, Channel 7 (Season's Premiere) Little Buffy, leg completely healed, takes charge of inaugurating season No. 5, gathering house tenants together for a "Good Neighbor" party. Eavesdropping in elevators, the kids encounter testy neighbors, and Buffy decides to take action. This is a do-gooder opening and little has changed except Anissa Jones' health, allowing the charmer to become the focal point once again.

★ ★ ★

THE FLIP WILSON SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (Premiere) Everybody liked his special last season so here's Flip Wilson with his own weekly variety hour. Flip is an extremely clever comedian and he proves it straight off by managing to tell a long, long joke without losing his audience for a moment. And, his opening $104,000 production number is amusing. Guest star David Frost is used throughout and he comes off quite well in a funny sketch with Flip about movies in commercial airliners, and performing a routine on the Hilton Hotels, which he's done before on TV. Wilson is at his best in the last bit portraying a preacher and in an elongated interview routine with Frost which Flip plays in drag.

THE JIM NABORS HOUR. 8 p.m., Channel 7 (Season's Premiere) After helping Carol Burnett start her season Monday, Nabors goes to work. His big coup is getting the Jackson 5, one of the nation's top recording groups, to join him. The kids plug their best-sellers, join Jim and cast for "Gospel, Now" and try a few gag lines with Jim and Frank Sutton. The "Brothers-in-Law" segment is back along with loser Ronnie Schell. Otherwise, no changes — no one cares to tinker with the show's success.

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5 (Season's Premiere) "A Killing Will Occur." Here's our wheelchair-bound Sherlock Holmes back for his fourth season of saving San Francisco from master criminals. The opener is a good example of the formula for the series' success. The familiar story-line, threatening phone calls to the Chief from a mysterious would-be killer, has enough little clues which unravel at the appropriate rate of about two between commercial breaks to keep you interested and give the Chief a chance to demonstrate his extraordinary powers of deduction. And let's not forget another reason for the fans' continuing support — R[illegible]

★ ★ ★

THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7 (Season's Premiere) "The Brotherhood of the Bell." (1970) Professor Glenn Ford loses his young wife, father, all his possessions and his reputation in a one-sided battle aimed at exposing a secret college fraternity whose members apparently control the business world. The idea of a secret Mafia-like organization originating in a Catholic college may be hard to swallow at first, but David Karp's script gains plausibility over the distance. Movie star Ford, in his first TV film, suits the harassed professor, displaying wild, frustrated anger fighting an invisible force, but he can't cover up the tale's weak point — the professor's obvious naivete in waging an amateur counterattack.

VANCOUVER ISLAND ACC

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A recent Gallup Poll showed that 52 per cent of U.S. residents reported that they are often having a hard time to sleep. I sympathize deeply with insomniacs because ever since my greatly fatiguing and distressing overwork during the terrible flu epidemic of 1918, I have had spells of severe insomnia. I commonly go to sleep around 10:30, but then I am likely to wake at 11:30 and remain so wide awake that it is very difficult to get back to sleep. Many persons tell me that as they have grown older, they who once slept so well, are now having more and more trouble with insomnia.

★ ★ ★

Many people of mature age have a tendency to painful arthritis, which keeps waking them in the night. Also, many people, especially men, as they grow older, will wake three or four times at night to urinate. Some of these men can be helped by having an enlarged postate gland trimmed a bit. The ideal operation is what is called a transurethral one. This is performed through an electrically lighted tube which is passed down through the penis to the neck of the bladder where the prostrate gland is. In the hands of an expert, this operation has practically no mortality, and the patient is up and around that afternoon. The old bloody operations used to have a mortality around 16 per cent.

As many hard-working men and women have found, the heavier the day's work or the more strenuous the evenings' work, the less likely they are to get a good night's rest. Perhaps, on a vacation, they will sleep soundly. During the 25 years in which I lectured all over the U.S. I often found myself so "lit up' after a banquet talk that I could not sleep and a barbiturate capsure would have no effect on me.

Some sleepless people will admit that they lie awake trying to solve a business or home problem, and that is most unwise. I rarely try to solve any mental problem after going to bed, but still I may be unable to "turn off the machinery." Many insomniacs spend the night worrying, but I practically never worry, and certainly I refuse to worry at night. I try to remember that night time is for sleeping, and day time is for solving problems.

★ ★ ★

Many depressed persons complain much of insomnia. Naturally, the manic (overly active mentally) person is likely to lie awake. As many of us know (and especially hospital nurses), many a sensible person will swear up and down that he was awake for hours when actually he was sleeping soundly most of the time! Many a time I will wake at 5:30 a.m. and after that will drowse; I will have the impression that I have been awake the whole time, but when I glance at the clock and see that it is 7 a.m. I know that I must have been asleep nearly the whole time. Often the wife of an insomniac man will sa yto me, "Yes, often he rouses and tells me that he has been awake for hours, when I know that several times when I woke, he was snoring."

Convention Supports Farm Tax Relief

Times Staff

PENTICTON — The Union of B.C. Municipalities will again press the provincial government for properly tax relief for farmers.

A resolution to the effect, sponsored by Central Saanich, was adopted on a close vote after one of the longest debates on any resolution yet put before the union's annual convention.

Some 40 resolutions out of a total of 75 have been considered at the mid-point of the three day convention.

The Central Saanich resolution, if accepted by the provincial government, would grant exemption from school taxes to farmers' land except for a home and half-acre lot.

Despite arguments that granting such relief would place a heavier burden on non-farmland, and open the way for land speculators, delegates agreed that farmers need the relief and greenbelts might be thus preserved.

The UBCM has passed similar resolutions in past years.

The convention also adopted a resolution co-sponsored by Victoria and Saanich that would give the municipal finance authority power to borrow from the Canada Pensios Plan and other pension funds.

The finance authority was set up earlier this year to create collective credit by selling bonds for most municipalities in the province.

An attempt by North Saanich to limit school budget iscreases was turned down after the UBCM executive said school financing is too complicated to attack in this way.

Retail Price Advance Stalls While Economic Activity Slows

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The almost-unbroken advance of retail prices in Canada stalled last month while economic activity generally slowed from the inflationary pace of the last two years.

The consumer price index of August, published Wednesday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, was unchanged from the 130.5 points in July.

The housing-price component failed to advance last month for the first time since early 1965 and clothing prices registered the biggest summer decline in years. Summer food prices went up by a smaller margin than usual.

As a more reliable guide to longer-term trends than month-to-month fluctuations, the August price index was only 2.8 per cent ahead of the reading in August, 1969.

That was the smallest year-to-year increase since the 12 months to February, 1967, and followed annual jumps of between four and five per cent in the last two years.

While the statistics indicate that price inflation is faltering, others show that the same thing is happening to production, trade and employment.

Figures issued this week show industrial production declined in July for the second month running. Exports in August fell back from the pace in the earlier months of this year when seasonal variations are discounted. Unemployment is riding high.

The chief problem facing federal economic tacticians is how to reinvigorate production, trade and employment without generating a revival of inflation.

The August consumer price index, calculated from a base of 100 points for 1961 prices, indicates roughly that a wide range of goods and services valued at $10 in 1961 advanced to a price of $12.69 in August, 1969, and held at $13.05 throughout July and August this year.

The August price performance contrasts with an average increase during the last five summers of three-tenths of one per cent.

The slowdown in price inflation began last spring. The monthly index actually showed a fractional decline in May, although it increased in June and July.

The index has risen by only 1.8 per cent in the first eight months of this year, compared with an advance almost twice as great in the same stretch of last year.

RENTS INCREASE

In the housing component of the price index, which makes up almost one-third of the whole index, marginal August increases in rents and home-ownership costs were offset by a decline in the costs of household operation, mainly because of lower prices for home furnishings.

The clothing component fell by six-tenths of one per cent in the month because of lower prices for footwear and most categories of garments.

The food index went up by two-tenths of one per cent—against the usual summer advance of more than one per cent—mainly because of higher milk prices in Ontario.

Increased air fares, higher prices for toilet soap and toothpaste and increased ticket prices for Vancouver and Toronto football games all contributed to marginal advances in the transportation, personal-care and recreation components.

Cigarette bargains in some places led to a narrow dip of one-tenth of one per cent in the tobacco-and-alcohol component to the position it held a year earlier.

11,000 IN OSHAWA ALONE

Strikers Crowd Streets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The streets of Oshawa, Ont., are unusually crowded with men these days.

They are the strikers from giant General Motors of Canada, about 11,000 of them in Oshawa alone.

Behind the store fronts, businessmen speculate about the length of the strike and worry about the future.

"The entire city will suffer if this turns into a prolonged strike," says Mayor Bruce Mackey.

"It's bad for the city, bad for the nation, and it's bad for us, too," says striker Arthur Bickle. "But it's the only thing we can do."

"Business has slowed a bit," says Maurice Berg, who runs a men's wear shop. "People are a little more cautious about spending money but it's a little premature to start worrying about it."

ALL FEEL IT

In Oshawa, everyone feels the effects of the strike.

But with 27,000 workers in Canada and more than 300,000 in the United States on strike against GM, what will it mean to the economy of the nation as a whole?

Most economists say only time can tell because a key factor is how long the strike lasts.

The consensus seems to be that a six-or-seven-week strike won't have a drastic effect. Anything longer than that would be much more serious.

The snowballing effects are the ones that could really hurt over the long haul as smaller plants which normally produce for the auto industry have to close up shop.

A number of these already have closed, some have reduced their work week and others will have to follow suit in the weeks ahead if the strike isn't settled.

In addition, the economy loses the purchasing power of the strikers who earn a basic $160 a week and now will have to get by on about $40 a week strike pay. GM's payroll at Oshawa alone was $2 million a week.

Arthur Kruger, a University of Toronto economist specializing in labor, says the economy could "go along with GM shut down for four weeks, or six weeks, without any fantastic damage."

"A strike of five or six weeks doesn't mean that you've got five or six weeks of lost output."

But he warned that sales lost to imports are a loss to the national economy. Already, 20 per cent of Canadian auto sales are made by foreign suppliers.

The strike cut off about $3 million worth of supplies and services purchased daily by GM from about 900 Canadian suppliers. Every day it needs more than 10,000 tires, 3,000 tons of steel and thousands of other items.

The last GM strike in 1964 lasted 10 days, but the previous one against the company in 1945-46 was 119 days.

Each day GM is strikebound, the U.S. and Canadian economies lose $12 million daily income for the strikers, and GM loses $90 million a day in sales through lost production of 26,000 cars and trucks.

COULD HIT ZINC

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. of Toronto said if the strike lasts longer than two weeks the company "will have to take a serious look at its refined zinc production rate."

Algoma Steel Corp. of Sault Ste. Marie said extension of the strike to four weeks would have the definite effect of a slowdown on steel and particularly on flat-rolled products.

A. R. McMurrich, vice-president of manufacturing for Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto, said a four-week strike "will start to affect us." Between nine and 10 per cent of Stelco's business is accounted for by the Canadian auto manufacturing industry.

Mr. McMurrich estimated that the Canadian steel industry would lose sales of between $10 million and $15 million a month if the GM strike continues over a period of three months.

"It's a waiting game," said Robert Varah, director of commercial sales for Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. of Hamilton. He said a strike of about two months at GM's Canadian operations would cause a considerable shrinkage in the consumption of Canadian steel.

Mr. Varah estimated that 850,000 tons of Canadian steel, or more than 11 per cent of total Canadian steel output, is used annually by the domestic auto industry. General Motors of Canada Ltd., is the biggest single steel user in the domestic auto industry.

Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd., Montreal, said the direct effect of the strike will be minimal on that company.

QUEBEC FEELS IT

Meanwhile, the strike of 2,400 workers begun Tuesday at the GM plant in Ste. Therese, Que., was expected to have a major impact on side industries in Quebec.

A plant which manufacturers coil springs for GM will lay off 28 employees Friday in Lacolle, Que., on the Canada-U.S. border.

"We had been hoping for a settlement of the strike so that this would not be necessary," a company spokesman said Wednesday.

"But unfortunately, as of Friday, our production will be stopped and our people will be let go."

Lacolle plant which produces carpeting for new cars has also laid off about 50 people on the production line in the last two weeks.

Other centres likely to feel the impact of the strike include Hawkesbury, Ont., where windshields for the Ste. Therese plant are manufactured, and Joliette, Que., which has a tire manufacturing plant.

A plant in St. Jerome, Que., which provides GM with dashboards, is also vulnerable, as is a tire company in Valleyfield, Que., which sup plies rubber products.

Canada To Take Tibetans

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will become home for up to 240 Tibetan refugees, the immigration department announced this week.

Although negotiations are not yet complete, 40 to 50 families are expected to begin arriving from India in November. If the experimental program succeeds, more refugees may be allowed into the country.

The program was initiated after representations received by Prime Minister Trudeau from the Dalai Lama, the exiled Tibetan leader, concerning the plight of refugees in India.

Tibetans began an exodus from their country after the Chinese invasion in 1950.

In order to ease the refugees into the Canadian way of life, the government will probably train them under the Canada manpower training program.

In announcing the program, Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen said "the experience of other countries which have accepted Tibetan refugees, notably Switzerland, indicates that a successful adjustment can be made, although it is frequently slow and difficult because of the differences in social and cultural backgrounds.

Since the Second World War, 300,000 refugees have settled in Canada from various countries.

'FIGHT TO THE FINISH'

Times News Services

AMMAN — Exploding mortar shells and rockets and the crackle of heavy machine-gun fire woke the city at dawn today as King Hussein sent in his tanks and troops in a huge blitz against Palestinian Arab guerrillas in the Jordanian capital which left the city in flames.

The fighting spilled over into Lebanon and Palestinians seized the Jordanian embassy in Beirut.

Heavy fighting was reported in the northern Jordanian cities of Zerga, Salt, Irbid and Ramtha — guerrilla bases hit repeatedly in the past by Israeli air strikes. Each side said it was in control, but a note of anxiety crept into Damascus radio broadcasts directing the guerrilla efforts.

The guerrillas were apparently in control of key areas of Amman at the start of the fighting but broadcasts from both sides said the army troops were driving into the Jordanian capital. The guerrillas appealed for help from thousands of Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

SURRENDER CALL

Field Marshall Habis Majali, military leader of the new Jordanian government proclaimed Wednesday by King Hussein, called in an Amman radio broadcast for the guerrillas to surrender.

"We are marching on the principal quarters of Amman to establish control," the marshall said. "All armed men must surrender to army troops, who are their brothers, in order to avoid bloodshed and spare your lives."

The guerrilla radio in the Iraq capital, Baghdad, said army tanks were "trying to break into Amman's city centre."

REPULSED

The broadcast said the guerrillas had beaten back the armored advance, destroying three tanks and disabling two others with bazooka fire.

Later a guerrilla broadcast heard in Israel said the Jordanian army had advanced on two guerrilla strongholds in Amman's outskirts — Jebel Amman and Jebel El-Hussein. It appealed to guerrilla fighters to stand fast and fight and called on "progressive Arab states" to help.

"All Amman is on fire," the broadcast said. Earlier dispatches reported smoke rising over the capital.

Following the guerrilla broadcast, the Jordanian government radio said regular forces had "restored order" in three areas on the eastern side of the city — one of them near Hussein's palace.

FEAR INTERVENTION

The radio also broadcast a special announcement saying the fighting in Jordan was "an internal matter" and no foreign power had a right to intervene.

ARABS WARNED

By United Press International

President Nixon and British Prime Minister Edward Heath warned the Palestinian guerrillas today they would be held responsible for the safety of American and British hostages in their hands.

Nixon, in Chicago, said in a statement issued by his press secretary, Ronald Ziegler:

"The president wants it clearly understood that the holding of American citizens as hostages is to be abhorred, and also that those who hold American citizens as hostages will be held responsible for their safety."

Towboat Strike Averted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Wednesday night in a dispute that threatened to bring about British Columbia's second towboat strike this year.

Federal conciliator Donald Tysoe said a memorandum of agreement is to be signed today by representatives of the B.C. Towboat Owners Association and two unions — the Seafarers' International Union and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers seamen's local.

Tysoe declined to give details of the settlement, but called it a good contract and said negotiators for all sides were happy with it.

The unions represent about 700 deckhands, oilers and cooks on coastal tugs. Their contract expired Sept. 30, 1969.

UNEMPLOYMENT in Canada fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, 5.1 per cent of the total labor force, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and manpower department said today. August unemployment was down 70,000 from July but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment Total Declines But It Still Looks Grim

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of unemployed fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, down 70,000 from July, but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago, it was officially reported today.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said there were 29,000 fewer employed persons. Although a reduction of employment also occurred last midsummer, there usually is an expansion of employment at this time of year.

There was a sharp reduction in the total labor force. It dropped to 8.72 million from 8.82 in July.

As a percentage of the total labor force, the number of unemployed fell last month to 5.1 from 5.9 per cent in July and 6.1 per cent in June. But last month's unemployment rate was sharply higher than 3.7 per cent in August last year.

The monthly employment report contained more than the usual amount of data on seasonally-adjusted employment and unemployment figures. Statisticians adjust the figures to take into account seasonal trends that otherwise make it difficult to compare one month's figures with another.

★ ★ ★

On the seasonally-adjusted basis, unemployment in August was 6.7 per cent of the labor force, unchanged from July but the highest since early 1964.

It was the second successive month of decline in actual unemployment figures, while the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment rose from 6.1 per cent in June to 6.7 in July, remaining there in August.

For the first time, the report gave seasonally-adjusted unemployment rates for regions. These showed a drop to 8.5 per cent from 9.5 per cent in July for the Atlantic provinces. The rate continued high at 8.9 per cent in Quebec, unchanged for the month, but declined in Ontario to 4.4 from 4.7 per cent.

The seasonally-adjusted rate rose in the Prairies to 5.3 — the highest this year — from 4.5 in July. In British Columbia it slipped to 9.2 per cent from 10.1 in July.

The actual figures are estimates based on a survey of 35,000 homes late in August, recording the job situation for all Canada except the northern territories in the week ended Aug. 22.

★ ★ ★

The labor picture in brief, with estimates in thousands, was:

	Aug. 1970	July 1970	Aug. 1969
Labor force	8,720	8,819	8,489
Employed	8,272	8,301	8,171
Unemployed	448	518	318

The report said there was an unusually large drop in unemployment among younger workers, aged 14 to 24, but there were still 75,000 more of them unemployed late this August than a year arlier.

On the employment side, there was the usual slight reduction in farm employment between July and August, but a larger-than-usual reduction in the service and trade industries. The latter was only partially offset by increases in employment in other industries.

'STAY WITHIN CANADA' BENNETT URGES B.C.

An angry Premier Bennett today asked the people of British Columbia "to be patient and stay within Canada."

At a noon press conference, Bennett said he has been getting a lot of mail from residents of the province expressing dissatisfaction with Confederation.

Asked whether Prime Minister Trudeau had indicated B.C. had better not hold its breath on the proposal, Bennett snapped:

"These Quebec French Canadian nationalists who control the government of Canada had better hold something stronger than their breath."

Pulp Strike Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations have resumed between the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC) and the employers' representatives in an attempt to end a seven-week strike at eight British Columbia pulp mills.

Don Lanskail, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said Wednesday night that talks resumed after letters outlining terms of reference for meeting were exchanged by the parties. (See also Page 12.)

Provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer prompted the exchange of letters and is acting as mediator for the negotiators.

REFUSED TO MEET

The bureau had refused to meet the PPWC until now after the 4,000 PPWC members turned down a three-year contract offering a 22.5 per cent increase in wages. Some 7,000 members of two international pulp unions recently accepted the three-year settlement.

Meanwhile, a threatened split in the PPWC failed to materialize Wednesday night as 350 members of the Prince George local of the union voted 94 per cent against accepting a back-to-work offer of two pulp mills in the area. The Prince George local was the only PPWC local to vote against the three-year contract but is bound by the over-all vote of the union.

'CANADA BAD FOR JOBS'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today it now is more imperative than ever for the government to tell Canadians what, it anything, it has in mind to improve the employment situation.

He said in a statement, commenting on the latest unemployment figures that despite the complacency of the Trudeau government, Canada still has the highest rate of unemployment in the developed world.

"It's hardly a record to be proud of," he said.

PHIL'S NEWEST POLICY

'I'm Sole Spokesman'

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi confirmed today he has taken the role of sole policy spokesman for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

But he disagreed with suggestions that he has muzzled his department personnel to the point of denying their right to talk to reporters.

"I read in the press every day what someone has said," he replied to questioning in an interview.

Reporters seeking information from department officials have been told that official statements must come from the minister. Former welfare minister Dan Campbell had a policy of allowing officials considerable freedom to discuss policy.

MEET SUPERVISORS

Meanwhile, Gaglardi today was meeting supervisory welfare personnel from across the province. The meeting in the Legislative Buildings, one of a regular series, was believed likely to discuss transfers of supervisory personnel which became public knowledge last week after it was learned that most of the 16 persons believed transferred were appealing the moves.

Many of those attending the meeting are understood to be upset about the transfers. No public statement on the matter was expected.

Premiers Leave Empty-Handed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had good, if possibly only short-lived, news for Canadian taxpayers Wednesday night.

The provinces did not succeed in getting any more money out of Ottawa at their three-day summit conference here, he said. (See also Page 25.)

The heads of government came down from Monday's and Tuesday's scaling of the constitutional heights to Wednesday's subject which is really dearest to their hearts; public money.

British Columbia asked for a grant of $500 million annually from Ottawa.

Trudeau told a news conference that his government did not encourage B.C. to think the money would be forthcoming soon.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec wanted even more money — a multi-million-dollar stabilization fund to help economically weaker provinces in time of high unemployment, plus $236 million which he claims the federals owe Quebec from their take from the two-per-cent social security tax.

QUEBEC DOESN'T PRESS

Trudeau said Quebec itself did not hold too strongly to its stabilization-fund formula.

Ottawa again gave no ground on the $236-million request.

The provinces not only played energetically their old game of how to get more cash out of the federals, they also bickered politely among each other about how much each is getting from Ottawa now.

Premier John Robarts of Ontario told reporters that the wealthier provinces, out of taxation, would have to finance Quebec's proposed stabilization fund.

There was already a multiplicity of programs such as equalization payments designed to lessen regional economic disparities, he said.

The total tax take needed to support all these programs might be hurting the national economy, he added. It was time for a little addition to

Aid to Two B.C. Cities Expected

Prince Rupert and Prince George will be considered for special federal incentive aid, Premier Bennett said Wednesday on his return from the constitutional conference in Ottawa.

Bennett said Tom Kent, deputy minister of regional development, will come to B.C. in the next two or three weeks to study these and other regions as possible special incentive areas.

The premier said a commitment from Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand to study the areas was one of a few possible increases in federal aid to B.C. resulting from his Ottawa visit.

But he said his request for an additional $500 million annually in federal aid received only a sympathetic hearing and nothing more.

'BAD DEAL'

Bennett said in an interview that the $500 million represents the difference between what Ottawa takes out of B.C. in taxes and what it returns in various types of assistance.

"We're Canadians and we intend to remain so," Bennett said, "but I'm more convinced than ever that British Columbia is getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The Trudeau government is oriented toward the needs of Eastern Canada and Quebec in particular, he said.

Bennett said a meeting between federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Provincial Resources Minister Ray Williston will be held to discuss a proposed Prince Rupert superport.

Bennett said constitutional changes are still "a long way off" after the Ottawa meetings.

Cong Presents New Peace Plan

PARIS (Reuters) — The Viet Cong presented today a new series of proposals aimed at a military and political settlement in South Vietnam.

The proposals were based on the guerrillas' existing 10-point peace plan, including their demands for total American withdrawal and the replacement of the present Saigon leadership.

The Viet Cong said that if the United States agreed to withdraw all its troops and those of its foreign allies from South Vietnam by June 30, 1971, the guerrilla forces would stop attacking them and would discuss safety guarantees and the question of releasing prisoners.

The proposals, made by chief Viet Cong negotiator Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh at the Paris peace conference, called for talks to establish a coalition government composed of members of the Viet Cong-backed provisional revolutionary government, members of the present Saigon administration who want peace, independence, neutrality and democracy, and political exiles.

As a first step Mrs. Binh said the provisional regime is ready to talk with a Saigon administration which would exclude President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice-Preisdent Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem.

Dollar Moves Up To Near-Parity

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian dollar came close to parity with the U.S. dollar today.

The dollar gained 7-16 cents in terms of U.S. funds Wednesday and continued to gain today, hitting 99.6 cents U.S. at one stage.

19-MONTH INVESTIGATION ENDS

Kuhn Charged in Osland Murder

Egon Kuhn, 35, a Saanich contractor, today was charged in Victoria Provincial Court with the non-capital murder of William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Judge William Ostler remanded Kuhn to 2:15 p.m. Friday without election on request of the accused's counsel, Dermod Owen-Flood.

No application for bail was made.

In a statement from his office Wednesday, city police chief J. F. Gregory, with Inspector John Post of Saanich, announced that Egon Kuhn had been arrested late Wednesday afternoon.

The bizarre Osland case began Feb. 3, 1969, when the prominent businessman was reported missing.

His bound body, wrapped in plastic and weighted with a 150-pound marine valve stem, was recovered three weeks later from the bottom of the Inner Harbor.

He had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument.

The 35-year-old Osland was vice-president and comptroller-treasurer of Diversified Management and Development, the operator of a dozen companies.

A financial expert, the six-foot-one, 180-pound Osland was also an outgoing man — a sailor, skier and squash player — with many acquaintances.

He left his office at Fort and Cook at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 3 to visit the Robert M. Emery, a ship being renovated in the Inner Harbor to serve as a floating restaurant.

Osland was a partner in the ship along with contractor Siegfried Marquardt and lawyer David Hummel.

The day after Osland disappeared, the former U.S. Navy supply ship left under tow for San Francisco. The

Science Council Backs Short Takeoff Plane

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Science Council of Canada was putting finishing touches today on a proposal that Canada devote a major effort to the design and construction of a transportation system based on short-takeoff - and - landing aircraft and related navigation and air traffic control.

Dr. O. M. Solandt, council chairman, said the council, meeting here as part of an arctic tour, is just about decided on making such a recommendation to the federal government.

He envisages "a major program of research and development leading to production and use of a complete short takeoff-and-landing aircraft and system."

The proposal has been under study by the council's transportation committee which has placed a recommendation before the council that it be given backing in a report to the federal government.

Dr. Solandt said a complete STOL (short takeoff and landing) system including navigational and air traffic control features "would be a solution to the problem of transportation" between cities such as Montreal and Toronto in high-density ribbons of population.

WOULD SUIT NORTH

"It also would produce an aircraft particularly suitable for many of the problems of the north and it seems to be a field specially suitable for Canadian expenditure."

Council members have been given first-hand evidence of the advantages of STOL aircraft during their northern tour which began last weekend. Many persons with whom they have come in contact have highly praised the Otter, a STOL plane, which one oil company officer told them earlier this week is beginning to revolutionize arctic transportation.

Dr. Solandt said Canada has a technical lead over other countries in STOL aircraft such as the Otter. Not only would development of a STOL system benefit the north and solve the central Canada transportation problem but it held promise of being a money-earner in export markets.

The Otter is a de Havilland aircraft product. Dr. Solandt is a former de Havilland vice-president of research.

WILL SEEK COMMITTEE

At sessions Wednesday, the science council decided to ask a special committee on the environment whether a new study needs to be launched in this area.

The privy council office and the energy, mines and resources department have just completed several environmental studies and there have been reports the government may ask parliament to legislate into being an environmental council.

The science council committee was asked to take a look at these studies and also to define the term environment so that at its November session it can decide whether to make a major study.

Dr. Solandt said he personally believes "we should see if we can evolve a better mechanism to co-ordinate the attack on environmental problems."

It was possible the science council could look more objectively than other studies at this question.

Dr. Solandt said the organizations involved in examination and preservation of the environment must be better co-ordinated and the import problems identified so that action can be taken.

PROBLEMS MANAGEABLE

He maintained that most, if not all, the environmental problems are manageable. What was needed was recognition that the decisions about the environment will always involve compromises.

A perfect example was the miles of seismic lines cut across the Arctic by oil exploration crews which disturb the insulation above the permafrost, gradually creating deep gullies that among other things, effect movement of wildlife.

Dr. Solandt said that these lines have been cut indiscriminately but, with proper organization, not nearly so many need be done to find promising oil deposits.

In considering its own environmental study, the council was aware of a need for considerable contribution from social scientists since environmental problems, especially in the cities, were essentially sociological.

He said he believes social scientists would be ready to participate with the science council which is predominantly composed of men trained in the natural sciences.

Dr. Gabriel Filteau is chairman of the council environmental committee and Dr. Peter Larkin, director of the institute of environmental studies, University of British Columbia, has been invited to be vice-chairman.

Bourassa Claims Win; Will Quebecers?

By DON MacPHERSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa returns to his home province today claiming success at his first constitutional conference and at Wednesday's federal-provincial conference on non-constitutional matters.

Whether Quebecers will see the results of Mr. Bourassa's work the same way is another matter.

The 37-year-old economist who came to power in the April 19 general elections was received enthusiastically by Canada's other first ministers for his conciliatory approach a tthe talks, but they were less excited by his proposals.

For the second straight day one of his main proposals put aside by his counterparts in favor of matters which they feel are more pressing.

The Quebec premier proposed the creation of a federal stabilization fund to help provinces such as his own which have higher unemployment. The plan calls for loans and grants to be paid out of federal tax revenues to be spent as the province involved decides.

OTHERS CAUTIOUS

Although he told reporters "several other premiers accepted the idea," that acceptance was more cautiously expressed by the other premiers themselves.

A statement issued by the first ministers at the end of the conference said that, while some found the proposal "of special interest," others spoke of "the totality of resources already being redistributed from the higher-income to the lower-income regions."

Premier John Robarts of Ontario described it as another form of the equalization programs already in existence. He asked: "Isn't it time we took a look at the total effect on the total country of these transfers?"

Mr. Bourassa defended the proposal as one way of fighting regional economic disparities, a campaign to which all Canadian governments were committed, and mentioned federal government spending as another means.

MISSES CLEAR ANSWER

Mr. Bourassa also did not receive a clear answer to his request for the re-imbursement of $236,000,000 his government estimates has been paid out by Quebecers under the two-percent social development surtax on personal income.

The Quebec government maintains that the surtax was imposed to pay for the federal medical care insurance plan. Quebec has not yet entered the plan, and the province wants the money back.

Mr. Bourassa said the federal government has agreed to consider Quebec's position when it draws up new equalization arrangements in 1972, and he expects an answer from Ottawa in six or seven months.

The previous day, Mr. Bourassa's appeal for accelerated constitutional negotiations was received with an apparent lack of enthusiasm.

Mr. Bourassa said Quebec had scored a "certain achievement" when the conference approved bilateral considerational talks among the provinces and the federal government, but the idea was Mr. Thatcher's, not his.

Mediation Commission Sets Terms

VANCOUVER (CP) — The controversial British Columbia Mediation Commission ordered its first binding settlement in private industry Wednesday, setting terms of a new contract between the Teamsters Union and three Vancouver-area cement companies.

The commission, set up by the provincial government in 1968, had previously confined itself to ordering binding decisions in the public sector, such as between policemen and their municipal employers.

In a landmark 16-page decision, the three-member commission ordered a 75-cent hourly pay boost for 900 Teamsters, spread over two years, on a base rate of $3.71 an hour. The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1.

The decision was expected to draw sharp criticism from the B.C. Federation of Labor, which has been sharply critical of the commission and has urged its affiliated unions to boycott it.

City's Help Asked

'FIGHT TO THE FINISH'

Times News Services

AMMAN — Exploding mortar shells and rockets and the crackle of heavy machine-gun fire woke the city at dawn today as King Hussein sent in his tanks and troops in a huge blitz against Palestinian Arab guerrillas in the Jordanian capital which left the city in flames.

The fighting spilled over into Lebanon and Palestinians seized the Jordanian embassy in Beirut.

Heavy fighting was reported in the northern Jordanian cities of Zerga, Salt, Irbid and Ramtha — guerrilla bases hit repeatedly in the past by Israeli air strikes. Each side said it was in control, but a note of anxiety crept into Damascus radio broadcasts directing the guerrilla efforts.

The guerrillas were apparently in control of key areas of Amman at the start of the fighting but broadcasts from both sides said the army troops were driving into the Jordanian capital. The guerrillas appealed for help from thousands of Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

SURRENDER CALL

Field Marshall Habis Majali, military leader of the new Jordanian government proclaimed Wednesday by King Hussein, called in an Amman radio broadcast for the guerrillas to surrender.

"We are marching on the principal quarters of Amman to establish control," the marshall said. "All armed men must surrender to army troops, who are their brothers, in order to avoid bloodshed and spare your lives."

The guerrilla radio in the Iraq capital, Baghdad, said army tanks were "trying to break into Amman's city centre."

REPULSED

The broadcast said the guerrillas had beaten back the armored advance, destroying three tanks and disabling two other with bazooka fire.

Later a guerrilla broadcast heard in Israel said the Jordanian army had advanced on two guerrilla strongholds in Amman's outskirts — Jebel Amman and Jebel El-Hussein. It appealed to guerrilla fighters to stand fast and fight and called on "progressive Arab states" to help.

"All Amman is on fire," the broadcast said. Earlier dispatches reported smoke rising over the capital.

Following the guerrilla broadcast, the Jordanian government radio said regular forces had "restored order" in three areas on the eastern side of the city — one of them near Hussein's palace.

FEAR INTERVENTION

The radio also broadcast a special announcement saying the fighting in Jordan was "an internal matter" and no foreign power had a right to intervene.

ARABS WARNED

By United Press International

President Nixon and British Prime Minister Edward Health warned the Palestinian guerrillas today they would be held responsible for the safety of American and British hostages in their hands.

Nixon, in Chicago, said in a statement issued by his press secretary, Ronald Ziegler:

"The president wants it clearly understood that the holding of American citizens as hostages is to be abhorred, and also that those who hold American citizens as hostages will be held responsible for their safety."

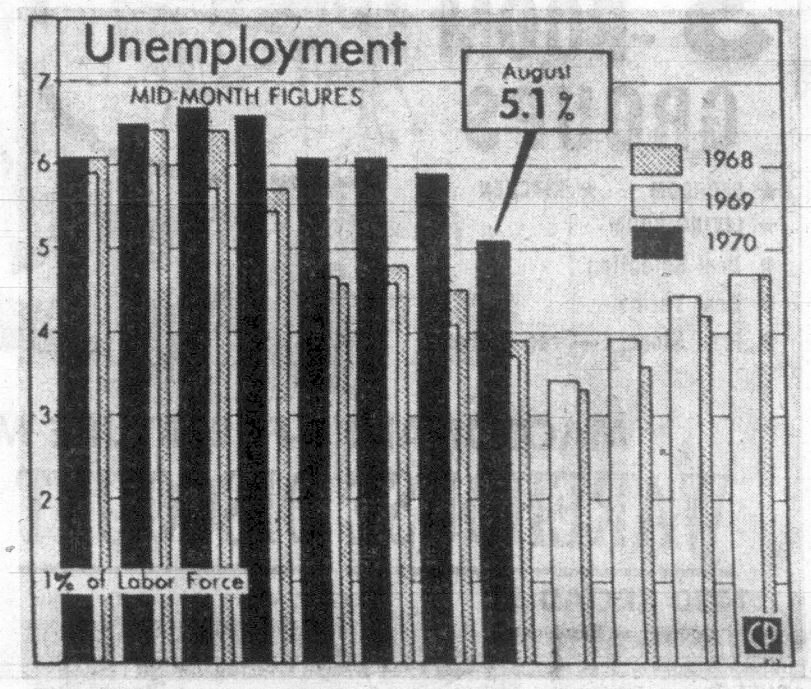
Towboat Strike Averted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Wednesday night in a dispute that threatened to bring about British Columbia's second towboat strike this year.

Federal conciliator Donald Tysoe said a memorandum of agreement is to be signed today by representatives of the B.C. Towboat Owners Association and two unions — the Seafarers' International Union and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers seamen's local.

Tysoe declined to give details of the settlement, but called it a good contract and said negotiators for all sides were happy with it.

The unions represent about 700 deckhands, oilers and cooks on coastal tugs. Their contract expired Sept. 30, 1969.



UNEMPLOYMENT in Canada fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, 5.1 per cent of the total labor force, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and manpower department said today. August unemployment was down 70,000 from July but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment Total Declines But It Still Looks Grim

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of unemployed fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, down 70,000 from July, but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago, it was officially reported today.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said there were 29,000 fewer employed persons. Although a reduction of employment also occurred last midsummer, there usually is an expansion of employment at this time of year.

There was a sharp reduction in the total labor force. It dropped to 8.72 million from 8.82 in July.

As a percentage of the total labor force, the number of unemployed fell last month to 5.1 from 5.9 per cent in July and 6.1 per cent in June. But last month's unemployment rate was sharply higher than 3.7 per cent in August last year.

The monthly employment report contained more than the usual amount of data on seasonally-adjusted employment and unemployment figures. Statisticians adjust the figures to take into account seasonal trends that otherwise make it difficult to compare one month's figures with another.

★ ★ ★

On the seasonally-adjusted basis, unemployment in August was 6.7 per cent of the labor force, unchanged from July but the highest since early 1964.

It was the second successive month of decline in actual unemployment figures, while the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment rose from 6.1 per cent in June to 6.7 in July, remaining there in August.

For the first time, the report gave seasonally-adjusted unemployment rates for regions. These showed a drop to 8.5 per cent from 9.5 per cent in July for the Atlantic provinces. The rate continued high at 8.9 per cent in Quebec, unchanged for the month, but declined in Ontario to 4.4 from 4.7 per cent.

The seasonally-adjusted rate rose in the Prairies to 5.3 — the highest this year — from 4.5 in July. In British Columbia it slipped to 9.2 per cent from 10.1 in July.

The actual figures are estimates based on a survey of 35,000 homes late in August, recording the job situation for all Canada except the northern territories in the week ended Aug. 22.

★ ★ ★

The labor picture in brief, with estimates in thousands, was:

	Aug. 1970	July 1970	Aug. 1969
Labor force	8,720	8,819	8,489
Employed	8,272	8,301	8,171
Unemployed	448	518	318

The report said there was an unusually large drop in unemployment among younger workers, aged 14 to 24, but there were still 75,000 more of them unemployed late this August than a year arlier.

On the employment side, there was the usual slight reduction in farm employment between July and August, but a larger-than-usual reduction in the service and trade industries. The latter was only partially offset by increases in employment in other industries.

FATHER GROWS POT TO KEEP SON HOME

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A man, arrested on charges of raising marijuana plants in his backyard, said fatherly concern prompted him to cultivate the crop.

"I grew it for my son so he would not come in touch with the bad element which sells marijuana," Louis C. Catz, 41, said after his arrest Wednesday.

Catz was released under $2,000 bond.

Premiers Leave Conference Empty-Handed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had good, if possibly only short-lived, news for Canadian taxpayers Wednesday night.

The provinces did not succeed in getting any more money out of Ottawa at their three-day summit conference here, he said. (See also Page 25.)

The heads of government came down from Monday's and Tuesday's scaling of the constitutional heights to Wednesday's subject which is really dearest to their hearts; public money.

British Columbia asked for a grant of $500 million annually from Ottawa.

Trudeau told a news conference that his government did not encourage B.C. to think the money would be forthcoming soon.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec wanted even more money — a multi-million-dollar stabilization fund to help economically weaker provinces in time of high unemployment, plus $236 million which he claims the federals owe Quebec from their take from the two-percent social security tax.

QUEBEC DOESN'T PRESS

Trudeau said Quebec itself did not hold too strongly to its stabilization-fund formula.

Ottawa again gave no ground on the $236 million request.

The provinces not only played energetically their old game of how to get more cash out of the federals, they also bickered politely among each other about how much each is getting from Ottawa now.

Premier John Robarts of Ontario told reporters that the wealthier provinces, out of taxation, would have to finance Quebec's proposed stabilization fund.

There was already a multiplicity of programs such as equalization payments designed to lessen regional economic disparities, he said.

The total tax take needed to support all these programs might be hurting the national economy, he added. It was time for a little addition to

Pulp Strike Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations have resumed between the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC) and the employers' representatives in an attempt to end a seven-week strike at eight British Columbia pulp mills.

Don Lanskail, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said Wednesday night that talks resumed after letters outlining terms of reference for meeting were exchanged by the parties. (See also Page 12.)

Provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer prompted the exchange of letters and is acting as mediator for the negotiators.

REFUSED TO MEET

The bureau had refused to meet the PPWC until now after the 4,000 PPWC members turned down a three-year contract offering a 22.5 per cent increase in wages. Some 7,000 members of two international pulp unions recently accepted the three-year settlement.

Meanwhile, a threatened split in the PPWC failed to materialize Wednesday night as 350 members of the Prince George local of the union voted 94 per cent against accepting a back-to-work offer of two pulp mills in the area. The Prince George local was the only PPWC local to vote against the three-year contract but is bound by the over-all vote of the union.

'CANADA BAD FOR JOBS'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today it now is more imperative than ever for the government to tell Canadians what, it anything, it has in mind to improve the employment situation.

He said in a statement, commenting on the latest unemployment figures that despite the complacency of the Trudeau government, Canada still has the highest rate of unemployment in the developed world.

"It's hardly a record to be proud of," he said.

PHIL'S NEWEST POLICY

'I'm Sole Spokesman'

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi confirmed today he has taken the role of sole policy spokesman for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

But he disagreed with suggestions that he has muzzled his department personnel to the point of denying their right to talk to reporters.

"I read in the press every day what someone has said," he replied to questioning in an interview.

Reporters seeking information from department officials have been told that official statements must come from the minister. Former welfare minister Dan Campbell had a policy of allowing officials considerable freedom to discuss policy.

MEET SUPERVISORS

Meanwhile, Gaglardi today was meeting supervisory welfare personnel from across the province. The meeting in the Legislative Buildings, one of a regular series, was believed likely to discuss transfers of supervisory personnel which became public knowledge last week after it was learned that most of the 16 persons believed transferred were appealing the moves.

Many of those attending the meeting are understood to be upset about the transfers. No public statement on the matter was expected.

Lottery Wanted

CALGARY (CP) — The public school board has decided to ask Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart to determine the feasibility and legislative changes needed to allow the board to hold a lottery. The trustees voted 3 to 2 Tuesday to seek govrnment advice about a lottery to raise funds to lower local education costs.

Aid to Two B.C. Cities Expected

Prince Rupert and Prince George will be considered for special federal incentive aid, Premier Bennett said Wednesday on his return from the constitutional conference in Ottawa.

Bennett said Tom Kent, deputy minister of regional development, will come to B.C. in the next two or three weeks to study these and other regions as possible special incentive areas.

The premier said a commitment from Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand to study the areas was one of a few possible increases in federal aid to B.C. resulting from his Ottawa visit.

But he said his request for an additional $500 million annually in federal aid received only a sympathetic hearing and nothing more.

'BAD DEAL'

Bennett said in an interview that the $500 million represents the difference between what Ottawa takes out of B.C. in taxes and what it returns in various types of assistance.

"We're Canadians and we intend to remain so," Bennett said, "but I'm more convinced than ever that British Columbia is getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The Trudeau government is oriented toward the needs of Eastern Canada and Quebec in particular, he said.

Bennett said a meeting between federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Provincial Resources Minister Ray Williston will be held to discuss a proposed Prince Rupert superport.

Bennett said constitutional changes are still "a long way off" after the Ottawa meetings.

Cong Presents New Peace Plan

PARIS (Reuters) — The Viet Cong presented today a new series of proposals aimed at a military and political settlement in South Vietnam.

The proposals were based on the guerrillas' existing 10-point peace plan, including their remands for total American withdrawal and the replacement of the present Saigon leadership.

The Viet Cong said that if the United States agreed to withdraw all its troops and those of its foreign allies from South Vietnam by June 30, 1971, the guerrilla forces would stop attacking them and would discuss safety guarantees and the question of releasing prisoners.

The proposals, made by chief Viet Cong negotiator Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh at the Paris peace conference, called for talks to establish a coalition government composed of members of the Viet Cong-backed provisional revolutionary government, members of the present Saigon administration who want peace, independence, neutrality and democracy, and political exiles.

As a first step Mrs. Binh said the provisional regime is ready to talk with a Saigon administration which would exclude President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice-Preisdent Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem.

Too many provincial premiers look on Ottawa as a mystic spring from which they kin bring back a bucket of eternal life fer their own regimes.

19-MONTH INVESTIGATION ENDS

Kuhn Charged in Osland Murder

Egon Kuhn, 35, a Saanich contractor, today was charged in Victoria Provincial Court with the non-capital murder of William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Judge William Ostler remanded Kuhn to 2:15 p.m. Friday without election on request of the accused's counsel, Dermod Owen-Flood.

No application for bail was made.

In a statement from his office Wednesday, city police chief J. F. Gregory, with Inspector John Post of Saan-Kuhn had been arrested late Wednesday afternoon.

The bizarre Osland case begins Feb. 3, 1969, when the prominent businessman was reported missing.

His bound body, wrapped in plastic and weighted with a 150-pound marine valve stem, was recovered three weeks later from the bottom of the Inner Harbor.

He had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument.

The 35-year-old Osland was vice-president and comptroller treasurer of Diversified Management and Development, the operator of a dozen companies.

A financial expert, the six-foot-one, 180-pound Osland was also an outgoing man — a sailor, skier and squash player — with many acquaintances.

He left his office at Fort and Cook at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 3 to visit the Robert M. Emery, a ship being renovated in the Inner Harbor to serve as a floating restaurant and aquarium.

Osland was a partner in the ship along with contractor Siegfried Marquardt and lawyer David Hummel.

The day after Osland disappeared the former U.S. Navy supply ship left under tow for San Francisco. The

1,700 STUDENTS FACE SPLIT-SHIFT ALTERNATIVE

Portable Classrooms—Home Away From Home

By NEILL GADDES

About 1,700 students in the Greater Victoria school district are instructed daily in portable classrooms.

Without the portables, these students would face the possibility of split-shift classes.

The rise of the portable in the building program — Victoria now has 54 portables — is a result of the provincial government's current freeze on school construction as well as the lesser numbers entering Grade 1 in the Victoria district.

★ ★ ★

The government will approve only what is considered essential classroom space and has banned costruction of activity rooms and gymnasiums. It also refuses demolition of old buildings for new ones.

School officials point out that the Victoria school system increased by about 670 students this fall while three years ago about 1,200 were added.

★ ★ ★

The result is a crush of students moving through the system creating a classroom space program. Education department officials say Grade 6 is the current peak year.

And with the space problem possibly being temporary as the wave moves through a school, the portable classroom can be the solution.

"When you outgrow a school by one or two classrooms instead of jamming classes you can whip in a portable classroom or two," a board spokesman said.

The portable classroom, costing $14,000 to $15,000 a unit, can be jacked up, stuck on a truck and moved to another school site.

The effect: instant classrooms, providing the portable is available and the necessary government approval is forthcoming.

★ ★ ★

The Victoria school district intends using this concept to create an instant school on Rogers Road in Saanich for elementary students next fall.

When the time and financing is right the site will be developed into a permanent school and the portables can be removed but until this occurs the students will have adequate classrooms.

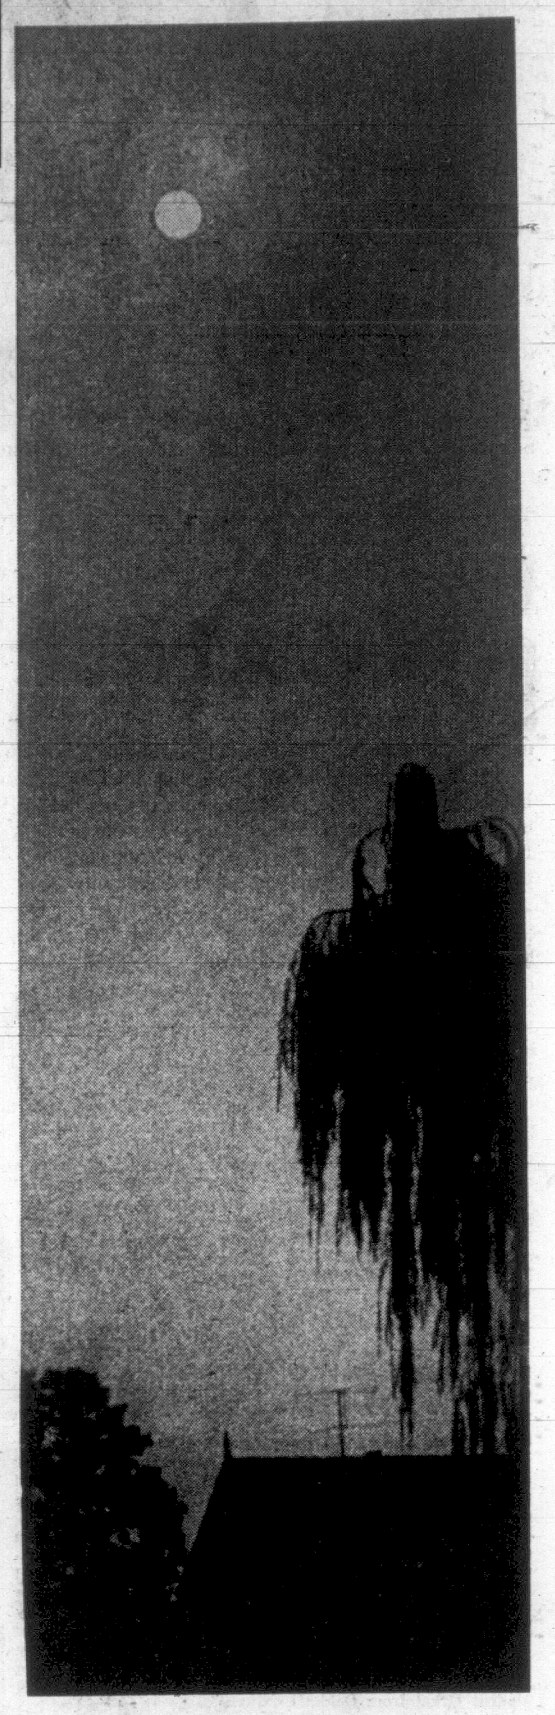
And students can become involved in the actual construction of the portables.

★ ★ ★

Although the major portion of Victoria's 54 portables are built by private industry, one or two are constructed each year by vocational students.

A disadvantage to the build-up of the portables is that the school district may be "Locked-in" to a large investment in additional portables.

But then the existing portables could easily be adapted into permanent school structures if the demand for additional classrooms levels off.



Tropical Sunset?

Not quite. The hazy effect this picture takes on is actually just the sun trying to peer through a combination of Victoria's rainy morning fog and smoke from various slash-burning operations in the area. Photographer Bill John took this shot at 8:30 a.m. today in Victoria West.

NURSING HOMES MUST TAKE WELFARE PATIENTS

'More Antics by Gov't'

Private Operators Angry, Frustrated

Nursing home operators reacted today with anger and frustration to an announcement by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that they will be forced to accept welfare patients.

Gaglardi said acceptance of welfare patients would become a condition of licencing of private hospitals. He was addressing a seminar on welfare at the annual convention of the B.C. Union of Municipalities at Penticton.

Neil de Macedo, a director of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals, called the announcement "another one of the government's antics."

"It amounts to dictating to private enterprise," de Macedo said, "something that could be expected in some other country, like Russia."

De Macedo, operator of Aberdeen Private Hospital on Hillside, said he was certain all nursing homes would be willing to accept welfare patients if the province would pay the home's normal rate, about $11 a day.

This compares with a per diem patient cost of $58 at public hospitals.

The government now offers $9.25 per day to private hospitals which will accept welfare patients.

Half of Patients on Welfare

"The government could save more than $40 per patient per day for the taxpayers, but they won't," de Macedo said. "They consider us (nursing home operators) money-grabbing opportunists."

Most private hospitals now have as many as half of their patients on welfare.

Some homes won't accept patients already on welfare, but if the patients are forced to join the welfare rolls while they are in the home, "we don't kick them out," said Edna Vinden of Glengarry Private Hospital.

Of 75 patients at Glengarry, 28 now are on welfare.

Jon Parker of Glenwarren Private Hospital said the government action "goes against the concept of private enterprise."

He said firms like his would be forced to close or take court action to protect their livelihoods.

In Vancouver, Lora Shields, an executive of the Association of Private Hospitals, called the Gaglardi plan "simply ridiculous."

"The government wouldn't walk into the Empress Hotel and tell them whom they could accept as guests," Mrs. Shields said.

She noted that other provinces take a "more realistic" view of subsidies for welfare patients. The Ontario rate is $12 per day.

Gaglardi said regulations governing acceptance of welfare patients would be proclaimed by next Thursday.

He also rapped municipal welfare administrators for the "looseness" of their administration in distributing welfare cheques too liberally.

He rejected a suggestion by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock that increased funds for welfare use be raised by increases in gasoline and sales taxes.

Formal Barriers Down For Uvic Adult Education

Catering to the learning interests of Victoria's adult community is no simple task — but that's what the University of Victoria's division of continuing education was set up to do.

This week the division distributed brochures outlining courses for adults that will be offered in the fall and spring terms.

Offerings fall under the headings of business and management, creative arts, languages, liberal arts, professional development, as well as a number of special programs.

NO PREREQUISITES

Larry Devlin, associate director of continuing education, said the division this year will offer more than 30 courses, compared with 16 last year.

Most of the courses do not have prerequisistes, nor are students required to have any particular level of formal education to be admitted.

The lack of barriers is deliberate, said Devlin, because one goal of continuing education is to make the resources of the university accessible to as wide a segment of the community as possible.

"What we are trying to do si satisfy the need of people to learn for the sake of learning, and at the same time provide courses for those who want to increase their professional skills," Devlin said.

The professional development area includes two courses for nurses, one to inform them about recent clinical developments, the other on counselling and conmunication.

COMPUTER COURSES

For scientists and engineers there is a course on applications of computers and one on numerical techniques.

Students with no knowledge of computers can enroll in a four-part course designed to take them from the basics to a fairly high level of understanding.

For students with no previous knowledge of French there is an intensive course featuring the latest audio-visual method. Sessions will total 120 hours.

A series of eight speakers will discuss the past and future of Canadian defence policy. Speakers include former CBC correspondant James M. Minifie, Prof. Reg Roy of Uvic, and Wiinipeg editorialist F. S. Manner.

All the courses, except those scheduled for next spring, will start in the week Sept. 21-25. Cutoff date for registration is Sept. 23.

Rezoning Plan Urged for City

Victoria Labor Council will urge the city planning department to develop a long-range rezoning plan to prevent developers from taking over choice pieces of waterfront real estate for high-rises.

The labor council move was sparked Wednesday night by a letter from Anthony Miller of 714 Esquimalt Rd., a member of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Miller said without disclosure of a rezoning plan, the planning department is "aiding and abetting speculation" by developers.

Secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan commented that with Greater Victoria divided into four municipalities, each council is in the position of having to "trade off" pieces of valuable land in order to raise revenue.

Several delegates spoke in favor of the principle of regionalization, while others were opposed to the prospect of more high apartment buildings along the waterfront.

The labor council will also urge city council to set a tenants' grievance board to air complaints from people whose rights have been contravened by landlords.

Regional District Looks at Downtown

A look at downtown Victoria in relation to the region, and what kind of place it should be in the future, will be the subject of a public meeting later this month.

It is being organized by the Capital Regional District, responsible for regional planning on southern Vancouver Island, and the Community Planning Association, a private group.

The meeting will be held Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p.m. in the Imperial Inn, 1961 Douglas.

A picture and sound show will set the scene for discussion in which the audience will be invited to take part.

The meeting is part of a program started by the old Capital Region Planning Board, now part of the Capital Regional District. A scheduled meeting about downtown last year was cancelled after next to no politicians showed up.

New Way To Learn The ABCs

This fall parents can learn how to teach their children to read and write using the initial teaching alphabet.

The course is one of more than 30 offerings designed for a wide variety of adult interests by the University of Victoria's division of continuing education.

The initial teaching alphabet, or I.T.A., has gained wide acceptance in Britain as a simplified way of teaching reading and writing without many of the difficulties associated with the standard alpahabet.

A few primary teachers are using I.T.A. in the Greater Victoria and Sooke school districts.

Instructor of the Uvic course will be Dr. John Downing, professor in the faculty of education, who during the last decade has done much of the research comparing I.T.A. and other teaching methods.

The course is designed for parents and teachers, and will provide participants with a knowledge of I.T.A. symbols and the rules for using them to spell English words.

The course will run for 12 sessions, starting Sept. 21. Fees are $25 for a single registration, $35 for husband and wife.

Sunro Gets Funds

The B.C. subsidiary of a Paris-based international mining organization will spend $500,000 jointly with a marketing agent to restore the former Cowichan Copper mine at Jordan River to production.

The Sunro mine, on the banks of Jordan River near B.C. Hydro's reservoir and generating station, could be back to work by February, 1971, said E.C. Dobell, president of Crownex International Ltd., successor to the Cowichan Copper operation.

Pechiney Development Ltd., owned by Pechiney of Paris, and Aumas Fergusson Wild Ld. have bought 50 per cent interest in the Crownex company, whose lease from Cominco Ltd. to operate the mine is held by Dison Development.

NAME CHANGED

Cowichan Copper changed its name last year to Cerna Copper, consolidating shares on a one-for-five basis, then Crownex took over in a furter consolidation of shares on a one-for-four basis.

Pechiney-Aumas plan to rebuild the Jordan River ore concentrator to 1,500 ton per day capacity and meanwhile develop copper deposits to production, mostly underground.

Dobell said plans also include installation of trackless minig in part of the operation, and starting an open pit development to mine some of the reserves near surface.

By the time full production is restored—following a two-year shutdown — it may be necessary to spend more than $1 million, in which Crownex would also participate, Dobell said. This could involve the issue of stock, he said.

Meanwhile, Pechiney backed by its experience in copper mining around the world, will be manager of the Jordan River mine.

Former Alderman, MLA, Dr. J. D. Hunter, Dies

Dr. Joseph Douglas Hunter, one of Victoria's pioneers and one of its ablest aldermen and MLAs, died Wednesday in his home at 911 Linden. He was 89.

The kindly doctor served on Victoria city council for 12 years altogether and was Victoria's representative in the provincial legislature between 1937 and 1941.

Born in New Westminster in 1881, he came to Victoria two years later and was educated in private schools in the area. Before going to McGill University to study medicine, he became known as one of Victoria's best young athletes.

After graduating from McGill in 1907 he took up practice at Coal Creek, near Fernie, and later returned to Victoria.

LED POLLS

He entered public life in Victoria in 1932 and led civic polls in most of his elections.

Elected to the legislature in 1937, Hunter followed his grandfather and father into B.C. politics. His maternal grandfather was Hon. John Robson, one-time premier of the province.

The doctor served on the Medical Board for the Army during the First and Second World Wars and his only son, Sandy, was killed in action during the Second World War.

Hunter was a life member of the Union Club.

He is survived by his wife Hilda, at home, and a stepdaughter, Nan Stewart, of Winnipeg.

Rt. Rev. Bishop George Calvert will conduct the funeral service Friday at 1:30 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral. Burial will be in Ross Bay Cemetery. Haywards Funeral Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

'Chicks' Do Good Job on Birds

When it comes to coloring birds, it looks like "chicks" do it best.

The three big winners in the second Times coloring contest were all girls, quite a switch after a clean sweep by boys in the first, a week ago.

But there was no lack of imagination anywhere among the hundreds of youngsters who colored Mark Trail's feature on birds.

Seven-year-old Linda Hammill of 3990 Locarno Lane, Saanich, will receive the $15 first prize for her accurate treatment of the comic page.

Lorna Ward, who is 10 and lives at 1000 Esquimalt Rd., Esquimalt, wins the $10 second prize.

Third prize of $5 goes to Lynne Currie, 12, of 2411 Trent St., Victoria.

The 20 consolation prizes of $1 are awarded to:

Lesley McLaren, 10, 1658 Hillview; Lois Grimshaw, 10, 2564 Penrhyn; Coby De Jong, 11, 3359 Swindell; Marilyn Coulter, 7, 2539 Kilgarry; Christine Gschiel, 9, 350 Linden;

DOUBLE FACE

All over Europe and America the fashion wise are talking about "double-face." The wild enthusiasm is for the marvelous two-layered fabrics with two right sides, no wrong side. Each side is distinctly different from its counterpart by way of color, texture or design and turnabout is fair play, because this fabric begs to be made reversible.

Double-faced fabrics are composed of two layers either woven or bonded together. Woven layers are held with tiny threads and are separable. Bonded layers are held together with adhesive. Sometimes these layers can be separated at edges, sometimes not.

Stitchery for the double-face, while not difficult, requires out-of-the-ordinary techniques and a good bit of hand sewing, but this is more than compensated for since no interfacings, facings or linings are needed.

To keep problems minimal, here are some things to know:

Double-face is primarily suited to coats and easy-jacketed suits. Simple dresses can be made but, remember, the fabric is bulky.

Select only the simplest designs, the fewer pieces the better. Try to find a pattern with the shape in the seaming. Darts can be made only if fabric is separable. Patterns with gathers, pleats, tucks and intricate detail are simply not suitable. If possible, avoid collars and set in sleeves, these can be used satisfactorily on separate layered fabrics but better still, choose a design where the sleeve is cut in one with front and back or yoke and the neckline is collarless.

No in-seam pockets can be made. Welt pockets are possible if backed on reverse side by a patch pocket. Patch pockets are preferable.

Bound buttonholes are not recommended. Work buttonholes by hand when garment is finished or use loops and buttons or snap fasteners.

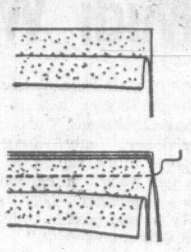
CUTTING: No special technique required. If either side of fabric is napped, cut all pieces in one direction. Allow 1" for construction seams. Allow ⅝" at edges, lower edge of sleeves and hems. No other hem allowance is needed.

MARKING: Mark with tailor's tacks and lines of basting. Do not use tracing wheel and carbon.

SEAMS: Require special handling. Flat fell. Try a sample first.

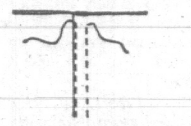
SEPARABLE FABRIC: Separate the layers of one section to be joined by pulling apart from edger. Snip connecting threads if necessary.

Pin under layer of separated section to matching but unseparated stction, keeping sides of similar color together. (3 layers in all). Stitch together on seam line.

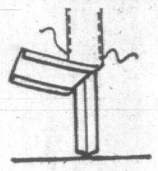


Trim seam in graduated layers. Press seam toward single layer.

Turn in seam allowance on remaining single layer. Pin and slip-stitch over seam concealing stitching. Top stitch along slip-stitched edge and ½" to ¾" inside if desired.



NON-SEPARABLE FABRIC: Strap seams. Join sections with matching sides together. Trim seam to ⅜" and press open. Cut bias strip 1½" wide. Pin lengthwise centre of bias strip along seam. Turn in raw edges of bias and slip-stitch or edge-stitch in place covering seam allowance underneath. Or cover seam with braid.



DARTS: Pull layers apart. Stitch dart on wrong side of each layer. Slash fold of dart, trim and press open. Baste together.

FINISHING EDGES: Separate layers. Turn seam allowances inside towards each other, clipping curves. Baste. Slip-stitch edges together. Top-stitch along edge and ½" to ¾" inside (to match seams) if desired. Prepare patch pockets and outer collar edges the same way.

Similarly prepare neck and armhole edges to insert collars and set-in sleeves. Slip collar and sleeves between separated layers before stitching.

NON-SEPARABLE FABRICS: Trim off seam allowance along seam line. Bind edges with braid or bais.

Shopping List Tells Tale on Modern Life Style

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Take a look at the contents of your neighbor's shopping cart in the supermarket if you want to know what kind of life he or she leads.

Distinct new life styles and consumer attitudes are reflected clearly in food buying patterns, says Chain Store Age, a trade publication, in its annual supermarket sales manual issue.

You hear a lot about the new "singles" society—groups of young adults banding together in large metropolitan areas. The report showed them largely responsible for the current boom in single-portion prepared food products, ranging from frozen casseroles to canned puddings.

In the United States these desserts now represent 42 per cent of all pudding sales, ahead of multi-service canned puddings and packaged mixes —and this after only nine months of national distribution.

If you think dry cereals are just kid stuff, think again. The study said they're the number one breakfast product, up 10 per cent in dollar volume. The figures are for 1969. One Maryland-based buyer said sales do fantastically well with "singles" living five to six to an apartment in Washington, D.C.

Singles and two member households also largely are responsible for pushing sales of eight-slice cheese packs ahead of the 12-slice variety, the survey showed.

The magazine added that the wide acceptance of instant breakfast products indicates both a stepped-up pace of life for the average city-dweller and a breakdown in formal eating patterns. A 300 per cent increase in the informal snack market in the past three years is another clue to irregular family eating habits.

New England buyers told the magazine that instant breakfasts have taken over as part of the convenience market for the 70 per cent of families who don't breakfast together.

The report also showed that families with two or more children are the major consumers, demographically, of these instantly made, instantly consumed foods.

The impact of the new consumerism is reflected in a coming trend to non-code bread dating forecast by manufacturers.

Increasing interest in good nutrition shows up in sales of everything from pasta products and bread to dairy foods and canned fish. The report showed young families responsible for a six to 10 per cent growth rate in premium bread sales last year. Their education and life style makes them more aware of nutrition and less wiling to sacrifice it in the name of economy, the magazine added.

It showed premium pasta products selling faster than less expensive ones for the same reason. But raising pasta sales in the last six months of 1969 were credited largely to budget problems.

Nutrition and good health considerations also led to increased sales of high protein dairy products in all categories, with fat-free milk, cottage cheese and yogurt among the heaviest growth products.

The magazine said 30 to 40 per cent of yogurt users buy the cultured milk product for health or weight-watching, but up to 40 per cent of it is bought by persons—especially teenagers—who eat it because they like it. Seems teenagers consider it a "kookie" snack.

Rising sales of canned fish are indicators both of hard times and growing interest in high-protein diets and good nutrition. They are an outstanding value compared with fresh meat, fresh and frozen fish, lunch meats and cheese.

But paradoxically, convenience foods at premium prices also are booming. Flavored rice sales have risen 80 per cent in the past five years—both regular mixes and gourmet blends such as mushroom and onion, rice pilaf and long grain and wild rice combinations.

Gourmet spice blends in fancy jars are up 10 to 20 per cent over regular box and tin packs. It's the youth market again— as young families' incomes rise, upgrading of food quality becomes a way of life, the magazine reported.

But the fastest growing section in the supermarket features pet food. It's not that table scraps aren't good enough for Fido and Kitty any more. The widespread use of convenience foods has virtually eliminated trimmings and leftovers.

Convention Supports Farm Tax Relief

Times Staff

PENTICTON — The Union of B.C. Municipalities will again press the provincial government for properly tax relief for farmers.

A resolution to the effect, sponsored by Central Saanich, was adopted on a close vote after one of the longest debates on any resolution yet put before the union's annual convention.

Some 40 resolutions out of a total of 75 have been considered at the mid-point of the three day convention.

The Central Saanich resolution, if accepted by the provincial government, would grant exemption from school taxes to farmers' land except for a home and half-acre lot.

Despite arguments that granting such relief would place a heavier burden on non-farmland, and open the way for land speculators, delegates agreed that farmers need the relief and greenbelts might be thus preserved.

The UBCM has passed similar resolutions in past years.

The convention also adopted a resolution co-sponsored by Victoria and Saanich that would give the municipal finance authority power to borrow from the Canada Pensios Plan and other pension funds.

The finance authority was set up earlier this year to create collective credit by selling bonds for most municipalities in the province.

An attempt by North Saanich to limit school budget iscreases was turned down after the UBCM executive said school financing is too complicated to attack in this way.

'Passenger Service Outlived Usefulness'

CALGARY (CP) — Railway passenger service has outlived its usefulness and can no longer be operated profitably along trans-continental lines, N. R. Crump of Montreal, chairman of Canadian Pacific, said Wednesday night.

He said a "lot of emotion surrounded" passenger trains, especially, since CP Rail applied to the government to discontinue the money-losing super train, The Canadian.

In Calgary with other senior CP officials for a corporate board meeting, Crump said the long-haul rail passenger business is a thing of the past, but said there may be some application for rail travel between major urban centres.

Ian Sinclair, president of Canadian Pacific, said CP rail has a perpetual obligation to operate the railway efficiently.

'HOW CAN WE'

"How can we operate efficiently if we are forced to operate a service for which there is no effective demand."

The people, he said, do not want CP to operate a rail service because their patronage reveals a rejection of the service.

Turning to CP's investment outlook, Sinclair predicted a decline in the investment of exploration capital in the Arctic for 1971.

The president, also from Montreal, blamed the prospective reductions in the uncertainties of the nation's economic climate including the areas of taxation, tight money and unpredictable market demands.

Canadian Pacific's exploration investment in the north for 1969, to be expanded under the programs set out by Panaractic Oils Ltd., will be in the $25 to $30 million range, he said.

Computer Contracts Ineffective

MONTREAL (CP) — A Queen's University professor said Wednesday Canadian copyright laws are unable to deal with problems created by the widespread use of computers and contracts between owners and users are ineffective in preserving property rights.

Prof. Hugh Lawford, director of the computer law program at Queen's in Kingston, Ont., said "existing law is without firmness regarding property rights for computer users, manufacturers and information."

He said in a panel discussion at the Canadian computer seminar that the Canadian copyright law written in 1924 and the Patent Act of 1935 did not foresee "or deal with the problems of information handling by computers."

THREAT TO LIBERTY

Prof. Lawford said the government "should stay out of the computer business."

"The trouble is that all computer systems can be monitored and controlled and there is a threat to our liberty when the flow of information is controlled nationally."

Toronto lawyer Jerry Grafstein, a former executive assistant to Justice Minister John Turner, said part of the problem is "a fixation with hardware."

"Because of this we've been lagging behind on the legal questions. Contract problems are magnified by computers and are very different from the standard bill of sale of one person's commodity to another."

Newspaper Says Police In Clear

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says Deputy Police Chief John Murray and other senior Metropolitan Toronto police officers involved in a public inquiry last January into ticket-fixing have been cleared of any wrongdoing.

The newspaper says that after seven months of examining testimony the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission has concluded that top officials accused of "fixing" summonses and traffic tickets were only exercising their discretion and had valid reasons when the summonses were withdrawn.

The commission ordered the inquiry after former constable Peter Lott and Constable Ian Samuel accused the officials of wrong-doing.

The official report by the commission is expected to be released Oct. 1.

The newspaper says the commissioners have concluded that no charge should be laid against any of the officers named—or against Constable Samuel.

Ex-Censor Now Living On Welfare

EDMONTON (CP) — Suspended Alberta film censor Jack Day said Thursday he now is living on provincial welfare.

Mr. Day, who went through the courts on a series of sex offence charges and was acquitted in July, said he is receiving about $250 a month for himself, his wife and two children.

"Yes, I cashed in my life insurance and sold a great number of valuable books for one-tenth their price," he said in an interview.

He has not worked since last December when the government suspended him after he was charged with having sexual intercourse with two girls under 14 years old. The charges were dismissed and two charges of indecent assault were laid.

He was tried on one charge of indecent assault and a charge of incest and was acquitted in Alberta Supreme Court.

CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT

"I expected I would be reinstated after the trial. They're (the government) saying a man is not innocent when he has been proven innocent."

Mr. Day said his lawyer, John Grotski of Edmonton, has been negotiating with the government but without success.

"I had six weeks holiday pay coming when I was arrested and I didn't even get that."

He said he also asked about a job in the department of industry and development, but "they didn't exactly leap at that."

Mr. Day, 47, said if he had the time and money, which he hasn't, he would fight the government in court.

He said he has tried to get other jobs outside the government but has been rejected because of his age.

'FIGHT TO THE FINISH'

Times News Services

AMMAN — Exploding mortar shells and rockets and the crackle of heavy machine-gun fire woke the city at dawn today as King Hussein sent in his tanks and troops in a huge blitz against Palestinian Arab guerrillas in the Jordanian capital which left the city in flames.

The fighting spilled over into Lebanon and Palestinians seized the Jordanian embassy in Beirut.

Heavy fighting was reported in the northern Jordanian cities of Zerga, Salt, Irbid and Ramtha — guerrilla bases hit repeatedly in the past by Israeli air strikes. Each side said it was in control, but a note of anxiety crept into Damascus radio broadcasts directing the guerrilla efforts.

The guerrillas were apparently in control of key areas of Amman at the start of the fighting but broadcasts from both sides said the army troops were driving into the Jordanian capital. The guerrillas appealed for help from thousands of Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan since the 1967 Middle East war.

SURRENDER CALL

Field Marshall Habis Majali, military leader of the new Jordanian government proclaimed Wednesday by King Hussein, called in an Amman radio broadcast for the guerrillas to surrender.

"We are marching on the principal quarters of Amman to establish control," the marshall said. "All armed men must surrender to army troops, who are their brothers, in order to avoid bloodshed and spare your lives."

The guerrilla radio in the Iraq capital, Baghdad, said army tanks were "trying to break into Amman's city centre."

REPULSED

The broadcast said the guerrillas had beaten back the armored advance, destroying three tanks and disabling two others with bazooka fire.

Later a guerrilla broadcast heard in Israel said the Jordanian army had advanced on two guerrilla strongholds in Amman's outskirts — Jebel Amman and Jebel El-Hussein. It appealed to guerrilla fighters to stand fast and fight and called on "progressive Arab states" to help.

"All Amman is on fire," the broadcast said. Earlier dispatches reported smoke rising over the capital.

Following the guerrilla broadcast, the Jordanian government radio said regular forces had "restored order" in three areas on the eastern side of the city — one of them near Hussein's palace.

FEAR INTERVENTION

The radio also broadcast a special announcement saying the fighting in Jordan was "an internal matter" and no foreign power had a right to intervene.

ARABS WARNED

By United Press International

President Nixon and British Prime Minister Edward Heath warned the Palestinian guerrillas today they would be held responsible for the safety of American and British hostages in their hands.

Nixon, in Chicago, said in a statement issued by his press secretary, Ronald Ziegler:

"The president wants it clearly understood that the holding of American citizens as hostages is to be abhorred, and also that those who hold American citizens as hostages will be held responsible for their safety."

Towboat Strike Averted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Wednesday night in a dispute that threatened to bring about British Columbia's second towboat strike this year.

Federal conciliator Donald Tysoe said a memorandum of agreement is to be signed today by representatives of the B.C. Towboat Owners Association and two unions — the Seafarers' International Union and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers seamen's local.

Tysoe declined to give details of the settlement, but called it a good contract and said negotiators for all sides were happy with it.

The unions represent about 700 deckhands, oilers and cooks on coastal tugs. Their contract expired Sept. 30, 1969.

UNEMPLOYMENT in Canada fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, 5.1 per cent of the total labor force, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and manpower department said today. August unemployment was down 70,000 from July but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago.

Unemployment Total Declines But It Still Looks Grim

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of unemployed fell to an estimated 448,000 in August, down 70,000 from July, but still 40 per cent higher than a year ago, it was officially reported today.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said there were 29,000 fewer employed persons. Although a reduction of employment also occurred last midsummer, there usually is an expansion of employment at this time of year.

There was a sharp reduction in the total labor force. It dropped to 8.72 million from 8.82 in July.

As a percentage of the total labor force, the number of unemployed fell last month to 5.1 from 5.9 per cent in July and 6.1 per cent in June. But last month's unemployment rate was sharply higher than 3.7 per cent in August last year.

The monthly employment report contained more than the usual amount of data on seasonally-adjusted employment and unemployment figures. Statisticians adjust the figures to take into account seasonal trends that otherwise make it difficult to compare one month's figures with another.

★ ★ ★

On the seasonally-adjusted basis, unemployment in August was 6.7 per cent of the labor force, unchanged from July but the highest since early 1964.

It was the second successive month of decline in actual unemployment figures, while the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment rose from 6.1 per cent in June to 6.7 in July, remaining there in August.

For the first time, the report gave seasonally-adjusted unemployment rates for regions. These showed a drop to 8.5 per cent from 9.5 per cent in July for the Atlantic provinces. The rate continued high at 8.9 per cent in Quebec, unchanged for the month, but declined in Ontario to 4.4 from 4.7 per cent.

The seasonally-adjusted rate rose in the Prairies to 5.3 — the highest this year — from 4.5 in July. In British Columbia it slipped to 9.2 per cent from 10.1 in July.

The actual figures are estimates based on a survey of 35,000 homes late in August, recording the job situation for all Canada except the northern territories in the week ended Aug. 22.

★ ★ ★

The labor picture in brief, with estimates in thousands, was:

	Aug. 1970	July 1970	Aug. 1969
Labor force	8,720	8,819	8,489
Employed	8,272	8,301	8,171
Unemployed	448	518	318

The report said there was an unusually large drop in unemployment among younger workers, aged 14 to 24, but there were still 75,000 more of them unemployed late this August than a year arlier.

On the employment side, there was the usual slight reduction in farm employment between July and August, but a larger-than-usual reduction in the service and trade industries. The latter was only partially offset by increases in employment in other industries.

'STAY WITHIN CANADA' BENNETT URGES B.C.

An angry Premier Bennett today asked the people of British Columbia "to be patient and stay within Canada."

At a noon press conference, Bennett said he has been getting a lot of mail from residents of the province expressing dissatisfaction with Confederation.

Asked whether Prime Minister Trudeau had indicated B.C. had better not hold its breath on the proposal, Bennett snapped:

"These Quebec French Canadian nationalists who control the government of Canada had better hold something stronger than their breath."

Pulp Strike Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations have resumed between the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC) and the employers' representatives in an attempt to end a seven-week strike at eight British Columbia pulp mills.

Don Lanskail, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said Wednesday night that talks resumed after letters outlining terms of reference for meeting were exchanged by the parties. (See also Page 12.)

Provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer prompted the exchange of letters and is acting as mediator for the negotiators.

REFUSED TO MEET

The bureau had refused to meet the PPWC until now after the 4,000 PPWC members turned down a three-year contract offering a 22.5 per cent increase in wages. Some 7,000 members of two international pulp unions recently accepted the three-year settlement.

Dollar Moves Up To Near-Parity

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian dollar came close to parity with the U.S. dollar today.

The dollar gained 7-16 cents in terms of U.S. funds Wednesday and continued to gain today, hitting 99.6 cents U.S. at one stage.

'CANADA BAD FOR JOBS'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today it now is more imperative than ever for the government to tell Canadians what, it anything, it has in mind to improve the employment situation.

He said in a statement, commenting on the latest unemployment figures that despite the complacency of the Trudeau government, Canada still has the highest rate of unemployment in the developed world.

"It's hardly a record to be proud of," he said.

PHIL'S NEWEST POLICY

'I'm Sole Spokesman'

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi confirmed today he has taken the role of sole policy spokesman for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

But he disagreed with suggestions that he has muzzled his department personnel to the point of denying their right to talk to reporters.

"I read in the press every day what someone has said," he replied to questioning in an interview.

Reporters seeking information from department officials have been told that official statements must come from the minister. Former welfare minister Dan Campbell had a policy of allowing officials considerable freedom to discuss policy.

MEET SUPERVISORS

Meanwhile, Gaglardi today was meeting supervisory welfare personnel from across the province. The meeting in the Legislative Buildings, one of a regular series, was believed likely to discuss transfers of supervisory personnel which became public knowledge last week after it was learned that most of the 16 persons believed transferred were appealing the moves.

Many of those attending the meeting are understood to be upset about the transfers. No public statement on the matter was expected.

Premiers Leave Empty-Handed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had good, if possibly only short-lived, news for Canadian taxpayers Wednesday night.

The provinces did not succeed in getting any more money out of Ottawa at their three-day summit conference here, he said. (See also Page 25.)

The heads of government came down from Monday's and Tuesday's scaling of the constitutional heights to Wednesday's subject which is really dearest to their hearts; public money.

British Columbia asked for a grant of $500 million annually from Ottawa.

Trudeau told a news conference that his government did not encourage B.C. to think the money would be forthcoming soon.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec wanted even more money — a multi-million-dollar stabilization fund to help economically weaker provinces in time of high unemployment, plus $236 million which he claims the federals owe Quebec from their take from the two-per-cent social security tax.

QUEBEC DOESN'T PRESS

Trudeau said Quebec itself did not hold too strongly to its stabilization-fund formula.

Ottawa again gave no ground on the $236-million request.

The provinces not only played energetically their old game of how to get more cash out of the federals, they also bickered politely among each other about how much each is getting from Ottawa now.

Premier John Robarts of Ontario told reporters that the wealthier provinces, out of taxation, would have to finance Quebec's proposed stabilization fund.

There was already a multiplicity of programs such as equalization payments designed to lessen regional economic disparities, he said.

The total tax take needed to support all these programs might be hurting the national economy, he added. It was time for a little addition to

Aid to Two B.C. Cities Expected

Prince Rupert and Prince George will be considered for special federal incentive aid, Premier Bennett said Wednesday on his return from the constitutional conference in Ottawa.

Bennett said Tom Kent, deputy minister of regional development, will come to B.C. in the next two or three weeks to study these and other regions as possible special incentive areas.

The premier said a commitment from Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand to study the areas was one of a few possible increases in federal aid to B.C. resulting from his Ottawa visit.

But he said his request for an additional $500 million annually in federal aid received only a sympathetic hearing and nothing more.

'BAD DEAL'

Bennett said in an interview that the $500 million represents the difference between what Ottawa takes out of B.C. in taxes and what it returns in various types of assistance.

"We're Canadians and we intend to remain so," Bennett said, "but I'm more convinced than ever that British Columbia is getting a bad deal from Confederation."

The Trudeau government is oriented toward the needs of Eastern Canada and Quebec in particular, he said.

Bennett said a meeting between federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Provincial Resources Minister Ray Williston will be held to discuss a proposed Prince Rupert superport.

Bennett said constitutional changes are still "a long way off" after the Ottawa meetings.

Cong Presents New Peace Plan

PARIS (Reuters) — The Viet Cong presented today a new series of proposals aimed at a military and political settlement in South Vietnam.

The proposals were based on the guerrillas' existing 10-point peace plan, including their demands for total American withdrawal and the replacement of the present Saigon leadership.

The Viet Cong said that if the United States agreed to withdraw all its troops and those of its foreign allies from South Vietnam by June 30, 1971, the guerrilla forces would stop attacking them and would discuss safety guarantees and the question of releasing prisoners.

The proposals, made by chief Viet Cong negotiator Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh at the Paris peace conference, called for talks to establish a coalition government composed of members of the Viet Cong-backed provisional revolutionary government, members of the present Saigon administration who want peace, independence, neutrality and democracy, and political exiles.

As a first step Mrs. Binh said the provisional regime is ready to talk with a Saigon administration which would exclude President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice-Preisdent Nguyen Cao Ky and Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem.

CADIEUX RESIGNS

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener Thursday accepted the resignation of Defence Minister Leo Cadieux.

Mr. Cadieux, 62, at the same time was appointed Canadian ambassador to France replacing Paul A. Beaulieu.

Kuhn Charged in Osland Murder

Egon Kuhn, 35, a Saanich contractor, today was charged in Victoria Provincial Court with the non-capital murder of William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Judge William Ostler remanded Kuhn to 2:15 p.m. Friday without election on request of the accused's counsel, Dermod Owen-Flood.

No application for bail was made.

In a statement from his office Wednesday, city police chief J. F. Gregory, with Inspector John Post of Saanich, announced that Egon Kuhn had been arrested late Wednesday afternoon.

The bizarre Osland case began Feb. 3, 1969, when the prominent businessman was reported missing.

His bound body, wrapped in plastic and weighted with a 150-pound marine valve stem, was recovered three weeks later from the bottom of the Inner Harbor.

He had been beaten to death with a blunt instrument.

The 35-year-old Osland was vice-president and comptroller-treasurer of Diversified Management and Development, the operator of a dozen companies.

A financial expert, the six-foot-one, 180-pound Osland was also an outgoing man — a sailor, skier and squash player — with many acquaintances.

He left his office at Fort and Cook at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 3 to visit the Robert M. Emery, a ship being renovated in the Inner Harbor to serve as a floating restaurant.

Osland was a partner in the ship along with contractor Siegfried Marquardt and lawyer David Hummel.

The day after Osland disappeared, the former U.S. Navy supply ship left under tow for San Francisco. The
